constantly, freely, and progressively moved and acted; according to the corrupt fashions and customs of this present evil world; according to the will, desire, instigation, and government of the devil and his angels, who wander about in, and even agitate the air; and who, however proud, light, and vain are worshipped and obeyed by the most of mankind, and continually work in the hearts of them who rebel against the laws and gospel of Christ; 3. Among whom all of us, Jews or Gentiles, being equally depraved in our spirit and temper, while we remained unregenerate, lived and acted, led away with divers lusts and pleasures, sometimes seeking to satisfy one, and sometimes another; and under the dominion and influence of our inward corruptions, gratifying, acting over, and indulging the irregular appetites of our body, in all its members; and of our soul, in all its powers, faculties, wishes, and contrivances; and were naturally chargeable, and infected from our very conception, with original sin, and on that account condemned and exposed to the infinite and everlasting wrath of God, as much as any of those who are eternally damned. 4—6. But while we were in these loathsome, deplorable, condemned, helpless, and hopeless circumstances, it pleased God—whose riches of mercy and grace are altogether excellent, abundant, inexhaustible, and overflowing, and who is ready to pity, help, save, and enrich sinful and miserable creatures, according to that wonderful love which from eternity he fixed upon us, in choosing us to be eternally blessed with all spiritual blessings in Christ—to recover us into a state of favour with himself, and infuse into us a principle of spiritual life, in conformity to, and by virtue of, our union and fellowship with Christ; and to give us a title to, and foretastes of, eternal salvation; and without making any distinction of nations or conditions, to raise us up in Christ as our Head and Representative, and make us to sit in the heavenly mansions in him as our forerunner already entered for us into the full possession thereof, and hereby assuring us that, in due time, we in our persons, shall sit there with him and all his saints;— 7. That in all the future ages and generations of this world he might set forth an illustrious and encouraging pattern, pledge, and earnest of the transcendent excellency and superabundant fulness of his free favour, as it hath been exemplified in acts of special goodness and endearing kindness towards us, Jews and Gentiles, through the person and mediation of Christ; and that, in the heavenly state, he might for ever demonstrate and display the supereminent glory of his free grace, in all the unsearchable riches thereof, to the everlasting astonishment, joy, and praise of angels and saints. 8. For, as hath been before hinted, the whole of that salvation which ye are possessed of and entitled to, in the contrivance, purchase, offer, and application of it, and in all its parts and degrees, proceeds merely from the good-will and favour of God, and is conveyed through faith—not indeed by any virtue of faith itself, but as God's appointed means, whereby ye receive and rest upon Christ alone for it; and thus faith itself, as well as the salvation thereby received, is not the product of any natural principle, good disposition, free will, or improvement of the gospel that ye were capable of, but is wholly the free gift of God purchased by Christ, and graciously wrought in you by the almighty power of his Spirit. 9. Neither the salvation itself, nor the faith whereby it is received, is in the least owing to any good works done by us, as the meritorious, moving, or efficient cause of it; but in recovering us, when so inexpressibly guilty, polluted, rebellious, infamous, and wretched, God has so demonstrated his mercy and grace, as leaves no appearance of room or occasion for any man in a vain-glorious manner to pretend he had done ought to render himself fit for or worthy of it. 10. For all the good works or qualities which appear in us, Jews or Gentiles, are nothing else than the effects of God's grace towards us, who, with respect to our new covenant state and renewed nature, are the curious workmanship of God, formed in, and by virtue of our union with Christ, for bringing forth the fruits of holiness, for which, not our inclinations or agency, but the gracious purpose and preventing grace of God, do prepare us. 11. Wherefore, that ye Gentile converts may be deeply and humbly affected with that amazing grace which has

12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the common-wealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world:

13 But now, in Christ Jesus, ye, who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us;

15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace;

16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby:

17 And came and preached peace to you who were afar off, and to them that were nigh.

18 For through him we both have an access by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God;

20 And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone:

been extended to you, I beseech you seriously to reflect on your former deplorable condition, when ye lived in ignorance, idolatry, and all other defilements of the human nature; and being destitute of all the ordinances of God, were contemned and detested by his professed people: 12. That then ye had no knowledge of or faith in the only Saviour of sinners: nor any vital union to, or communion with him; nor any claim to the blessings of the gospel, purchased, revealed, or dispensed by him; ye had no possession of, or right to the privileges of his visible or invisible church, and no spiritual relation to, or fellowship with his people; ye had no share in the dispensation of the covenant of grace, and its unnumbered, exceeding great, and precious promises; and ye could have no solid, rational, and well-grounded hope of deliverance from misery or enjoyment of eternal life, but were living like Atheists without the knowledge, faith, fear, worship, and profession of the only true God, and destitute of all spiritual communion with, or communications from him. 13. But notwithstanding all your unworthiness, wickedness, and wretchedness, through the astonishing mercy and grace of God, ye are now by the gospel dispensation brought into a special relation and union to Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of lost sinners, and thereby translated from your former state of distance, enmity, and hopelessness, into a new covenant state of friendship and fellowship with God and his church, through the merit and application of Jesus' atoning blood. 14. For he, in his person and mediation, is the only peace-maker, and the centre of union between God and us, and between one another, whether we are believing Jews or Gentiles; who hath reconciled us to God and to each other, and hath united us in one church, and cemented us together in heart and affection as children of one family; the ceremonial law, that wall of partition which separated between Jews and Gentiles, being abolished through his incarnation and death, and the new testament worship, which gives equal access to both, appointed in its stead. 15, 16. And having in his crucifixion fulfilled their typical signification, he disannulled the obligation of these ceremonial institutions, which represented God still unpropitious, and proved the occasion of much hatred and enmity between Jews and Gentiles: that out of both he might make one church, formed as new creatures after the image of God; and framed together for gospel worship and new obedience, and by a new constitution under him made equally partakers of grace and glory; that thus he might bring about an entire harmony and friendship between believers of all nations, as one spiritual body united to him by faith and love; and that through his atoning sacrifice of himself upon the cross, he might remove their guilt, and bring them into a joint state of peace and favour with God. 17. And in order thus to reconcile them to God and to each other in one gospel church, by the ministry of his servants and the powerful operation of his Spirit, he published the glad tidings of peace and salvation to you Gentiles, who were far removed from the knowledge, profession, faith, and favour of God; and also to the Jews, who had long been his peculiar people, and had enjoyed the symbols of his presence and the oracles and ordinances of his grace. 18. For such is the efficacy of his incarnation, obedience, and sufferings, exhibited in the gospel, that by means thereof we who believe, whether Jews or Gentiles, through the direction and assistance of his Spirit, have an equally free and familiar access into the favour, presence, and fellowship of God, our common Father in and with Christ. 19. Now therefore, ye Gentile believers, being reconciled and brought near to God, are no more aliens from his church, covenants, promises, or privileges, but, like freemen and fellow citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, are entitled to and joint partakers with the believing Jews of all the blessings which pertain to the saints, and are, by regeneration and adoption, of the family and children of God, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. 20. And infallibly and for ever to establish your union with Christ, and with God in him as your Father and sovereign, by means of the doctrines of the apostles and prophets, which exhibit and offer him to you, ye are by faith, built upon Christ as your immovable and life-giving

Foundation ; and connected, beautified, and strengthened by him, as your chief corner-stone :

21. In union with whom, and by virtue derived from him, the universal church, Jews or Gentiles, and every true member of it, placed in proper order for the use of the whole, doth, by a continual addition of new converts, or the further gracious growth of each—as animated and influenced by their living and life-giving foundation—become a spiritual temple, formed by, dedicated to, and inhabited by the Lord Christ and his Father, and in which he manifests his gracious presence, displays his glory, and is worshipped and glorified ; 22 In whom, being vitally united to his person, and formed into a church state by his authority and influence, ye are built up together as a particular church—a living temple—which God hath consecrated for himself, who, by the special presence, light, and grace of his Spirit, dwells among you, and in the heart of every true believer.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Alas, what a state of sin, slavery, wretchedness, and wrath, are all men in by nature, Satan and their lusts hurrying them on to their own destruction ! Transcendent and amazing grace must be necessary to quicken, to save, and to exalt for ever, such monsters of misery, guilt, and pollution ; and pure and free is the manifestation of it. No works of ours can concur to deserve, prepare for, or assist it. How wonderful is that Christ, for whom, in whom, and with whom, all these rich mercies are received ! Blessed be his name that Gentile idolaters, so ignorant, so wicked, are, through his person, righteousness, and mediation, brought into his gospel church !—While the building goes up, sing ye nations, sing all the powers of my soul—GRACE, GRACE UNTO IT !

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. For my boldly maintaining that you believing Gentiles have an equal access to the church and presence of God, and are equally related to him as the Jews, I am at this very time, through the malice and indefatigable opposition of my carnal countrymen, a prisoner at Rome, of which I boast and glory, as I know it will turn out to your spiritual advantage. 2. For ye must needs have heard how Jesus Christ, in his infinite condescension and grace, appointed me, as a steward in his family and herald in his kingdom, to preach the gospel chiefly to you, and other Gentiles, that ye might believe and be saved ; 3, 4. And how, by repeated visions and revelations, and by the immediate inspiration of his Spirit, he made known to me the great mystery of the salvation of sinful men, through his own incarnation, obedience, death, resurrection, and ascension, and of the gracious calling of the Gentiles into his gospel church ; as, according to the measure of my knowledge of it, I have already hinted unto you : 5. Which mystery was not at all made known to the Gentiles in former ages, nor so distinctly, fully, and clearly to the Jews, as it is now revealed to the holy apostles and other inspired teachers of the Christian church, in consequence of the resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ ; 6. Particularly that branch of it, that, without any regard to circumcision or any other Jewish ceremonies, the idolatrous Gentiles should, equally, and in the strictest connection with the Jews, be called and admitted into the same gospel church, partaking of all the privileges thereof, and be made members of the same mystical body of Christ, to derive all enlightening, quickening, sanctifying, and comforting influence from him, and hold all their right and claim to all the promised blessings of the new covenant under him, and partake of the promised Spirit in all its influences, gifts, graces, and glories, shed on them abundantly through Christ : 7. Of which glorious gospel, being miraculously converted, and receiving a sovereignly free gift of the apostleship, I was, by the immediate appointment of Jesus Christ and his Father, made a preacher, to publish it in all its light, fulness, and glory ; and had my commission ratified by many miraculous operations, and by an amazing success in the conversion and salvation of sinners. 8. Unto me, who was once a furious persecutor, blasphemer, and injurious person, and who, in myself am still so transcendently worthless and hell-deserving, is this condescending, astonishing, and unparalleled favour shewn—that I, above all the apostles, should be pitched upon to publish far and wide among the idolatrous Gentiles the glad tidings of salvation ; and to be instrumental, in the hand of the Spirit, in making known and conveying to multitudes those exceeding riches of mercy and merit, of grace and glory, which are treasured up in Christ, and proposed in the gospel by and through him to the worst of sinners, and which can never be fathomed, exhausted, numbered, or traced out, in all their endless variety, excellency, and fulness. 9. And to make both Jews and Gentiles clearly perceive what a happy fellowship believers of all nations, as one church, under Christ their Head, now have in the exceeding great and glorious blessings of the gospel—a mystery, in which unfathomable depths of divine sovereignty, wisdom, and grace, are implied—and which lay long concealed in the purpose and mind of God himself, who, in and with his Son Jesus Christ, created all things in heaven and earth ; 10. And that even all the dignified and mighty ranks and orders of holy angels, who minister to the redeemed heirs of salvation, might with ravishing pleasure, joy, and praise, behold and contemplate the infinite wisdom of God, in the unnumbered displays of its glory, in the doctrines, ministrations, blessings, and privileges of the New-Testament church : 11. All which is now transacted in exact agreement with God's eternal purpose, which he formed with a gracious regard to his church, as considered in Christ their Head, Lord, and Saviour ; 12. In and through whom, as the only Mediator between God and men, we have great liberty and enlargement of spirit in our dealings with God, as our reconciled Father and Friend ; and through faith, receiving and resting on him alone for salvation, have an humble assurance of his favour towards us, his acceptance of our persons and gracious services, and his audience of our prayers, for all real and necessary blessings. 13. In the contemplation of these things, I entreat you never to be disheartened, affrighted, or made negligent or spiritless in your Christian course, by the sufferings which I have to endure for my adherence to, and preaching of the gospel ; but rather, to the honour of your Christian profession, be encouraged, strengthened, and animated therein, as they are indeed a great honour put on me, for the confirmation of what I preached and ye believed. 14. And, that ye may be directed to this and all other necessary duties, I recommend you by the most affectionate, earnest, and solemn prayer, to the favour and mercy of the eternal Father, of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our Father and Friend in him : 15. Of and under whom, and of the Father through him, all true worshippers, whether angels or saints, are gathered into one family, and have received the most transcendent and glorious honours and privileges : 16. And I plead that he, who has already done so much for you, may, in a manner answerable to his own immense fulness of wisdom, faithfulness, power, goodness, mercy, and grace, and by his almighty Spirit powerfully working in your renewed hearts, more and more fortify you against the efforts of inward corruptions or temptations from Satan or the world ; and invigorate and animate you with holy courage to exercise every grace, perform every good work, endure every trial, and, abounding in holiness and comfort, to hold on to the end, through all opposition and danger. 17. And that Jesus Christ, together with and by his Spirit, may be constantly present in your minds, not only by the habit, but by realizing and appropriating acts of faith ; and have a sensible abode in your hearts, by continual gracious impressions and manifestations of his love to you as persons united to him :—that ye, being deeply fixed and firmly established in an experimental and assuring perception and faith of his love to you, and in your exercise of grateful returns of love to him.

CHAP. IV.

Begins the practical improvement of the doctrines before declared, in an exhortation to walk worthy of their Christian calling; 1. (1) In mutual love, forbearance, and union; 2—6. (2) In a due use of their gifts and graces for their own and their neighbours' edification; 7—16. (3) In the most earnest study of holiness in heart and life; 17—24. (4) In carefully avoiding lying, sinful anger, dishonesty, filthy language, malice, revenge, and the like; to which the Heathens were much addicted; 25—32.

18. May, by means of his oracles and ordinances, attended with the enlightening and sanctifying influences of his Spirit, be enabled to apprehend, and be suitably affected with the unbounded love of Christ; clearly perceiving, as far as is possible for saints in this world, its unmeasurable extent, as it reaches to Gentiles as well as Jews, to all ranks, sorts, and degrees of sinners, and to all forms and degrees of spiritual and heavenly blessings;—its inconceivable length, in reaching from everlasting to everlasting;—its unfathomable depth, as it brought the most high God of glory to the lowest state of service, sufferings, and death, and makes him stoop to redeem us from our lowest depths of sinfulness and misery;—and its astonishing height, in his exalted intercession for us, and advancing us to the highest glory of which our nature is capable: 19. And may, by faith and spiritual experience, know more the virtue, power, and sweetness of the transcendent love of Christ, and of God in him, in all its most excellent manifestations, fruits, and effects, which in itself and in its wonderful operations, provisions, and designs, infinitely surpasses all the comprehensions of angels and men; that thereby ye may be more and more abundantly partakers of a divine nature, and to your utmost capacity enriched with all that fulness of light and grace, holiness, joy, and peace, which God has prepared, promised, and communicates to his principal favourites, and in due time arrive at the most full and transcendent enjoyment of him as your infinite ALL IN ALL. 20, 21. Now to this almighty, all-sufficient, gracious, new-covenant God, who by that very power, of the almighty operations of which we have had abundant experience in our souls, is able to grant all those extensive blessings which I have desired, or which can be desired by us—nay, to do infinitely above what we can ask, or even conceive—be ascribed all possible honour, in the way of faith, love, adoration, worship, obedience, thanksgiving, blessing, and praise; on account of his infinite perfections, marvellous counsels, and mighty works of creation, providence, and grace, in the whole universal church, in heaven and earth, and by every society and member thereof, through Jesus Christ and his mediation, during all the periods of time or ages of eternity: so may it and so shall it be.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Behold, my soul, how the sovereign grace, infinite wisdom, and ancient purposes of the Most High appear in the conversion of Gentile sinners to the almighty Saviour! Great is the boldness of access we have now to God; and unsearchable the riches of mercies and blessings which the gospel brings to us. With deep self-debasement, and affecting admiration of God's favours, ought ministers to preach it. With patience and courage they ought to labour and suffer as is most for the good of the church. And with frequent and fervent prayer should they carry on their whole work, asking for themselves and their people abundant supplies of grace. While angels with admiration pry into these mysteries, let my soul contemplate the infinite love of my kinsman Redeemer, and be filled with all the fulness of God. And while grace for ever reigns through his righteousness, let there be glory to God in the highest.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Since therefore these amazingly glorious privileges and blessings are freely and equally bestowed on you Gentile believers as on the Jews, I, who to my inexpressible honour am here, by the wise disposal and for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ, a prisoner for the faithful preaching of his gospel, particularly to the Gentiles—earnestly beseech you constantly and perseveringly to live and act in an holy and honourable conversation, as becometh that gospel which ye have believed, and that high calling of God in Christ Jesus whereby ye have been effectually called to glory and virtue. 2. And, in acting suitably to the spiritual privileges and obligations of the gospel, study to walk humbly with God, under a deep sense of your own meanness, unworthiness, and sinfulness; and to behave humbly toward each other, esteeming others better than yourselves; and with all courteousness, candour, calmness, and sweetness of temper. In real and hearty affection to Jesus Christ, and to one another in him, kindly bear affronts and injuries without retaliating or revenging them. Calmly overlook or bear with the weaknesses, indiscretions, frowardness, and peevish tempers of others, and even pity and excuse them: 3. And thus carefully and diligently by all proper means maintain and promote that spiritual union and harmony of souls which is the fruit of the Holy Ghost's dwelling in them, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4 There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism,

6 One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

7 But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.

9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?)

10 He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things.)

11 And he gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; and consists in that pure and spiritual peace which is the best and strongest bond of your religious society and fellowship in it. 4. To engage you to cultivate this amiable union, consider the joint interest ye have in all the same important things. The church, of which ye are all alike members, is but one mystical body, and so ye ought to have the same fellow feeling, care, and concern for one another. The same divine spirit of love and peace animates, guides, and dwells in, this whole mystical body, and every member of it;—and therefore ye ought to act with united hearts under his influence, and in imitation of him. Ye are, by God's grace, called to God's kingdom and glory, the one summary object of your hope, and, in your effectual calling, ye are all partakers of the same grace of hope, which terminates on Christ as its only foundation;—and therefore ye should live in harmony and peace, as heirs together of the same grace of life, and expectants of the same heavenly inheritance.

12 For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

5. There is one Lord and Saviour of all true believers, even Jesus Christ, the only Mediator, King, and Head, of his church; and therefore ye ought to unite, with one heart and soul in your dependance on, and allegiance, love, and obedience to, him, and in your sincere affection to all his subjects, according to the laws of his kingdom. There is but one and the same rule or doctrine of faith, one object of faith, and one sort of like precious faith, in the whole church; and therefore this should, in every member, work in the same actings of love to Christ and to one another. The baptism, whether external or internal, of all church members is one and the same in its nature, tendency, and design; in which they are solemnly devoted to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as one God, sole Proprietor of the church, and brought under the strongest bonds to be entirely and unreservedly the Lord's, and therefore ought to behave with the utmost unity of character.

6. And, in fine, the Covenant God and Father of all true believers, Jews or Gentiles, who is infinitely above them in perfections and dominion, and whose special presence preserves, governs, and supplies, every part of the mystical body of Christ,—and who, by his Spirit and grace, dwells and works in every one of you,—is but one; and therefore ye ought to be of one heart and soul, in your acknowledgments, love, and reverence, of him, and in your obedience and subjection to him as your own God and Father, and ought to love his children as your spiritual brethren.

7. But, notwithstanding our unity in so many great and important things, Jesus Christ, according to his own infinite wisdom and bounty, freely bestows upon his church a beautiful variety of spiritual offices, gifts, graces, and attainments. 8. Hence the Holy Ghost by David suggested, that, having—in consequence of his victory over sin, Satan, the world, and death—in his sufferings, resurrection, and ascension—received fulness of authority and influences from his Father, as the reward of his work, he should liberally distribute diversified offices, gifts, and graces, to men, Jews or Gentiles, professing or rebellious sinners. 9. Now this very hint of his glorious and triumphant ascension plainly intimates that it was founded on his debased incarnation, obedience, death, and burial.

10. And it is the same only begotten Son of God who so humbled himself, that, as man and Mediator, after conquering all his enemies, hath ascended to the right hand of God, that, by the virtue of his death, victory, and triumph, he might fill all the officers, members, ordinances, and administrations, of his church with the gifts and graces of his Spirit, and thus fulfil all the ancient types and predictions, and perfect whatever relates to the salvation of his people.

11. In prosecution of this gracious design, he furnished his gospel church with proper officers;—some of them extraordinary for her first settlement,—as apostles, who received their commission immediately from himself, to be eye-witnesses of his resurrection from the dead; whose authority extended equally to all the churches, and who could, under inspiration, teach the whole scheme of the gospel, work all sorts of miracles, and convey the Holy Ghost in his miraculous influence to other believers. Others he appointed and qualified as prophets, to explain the Old Testament, and foretell things to come. Others he appointed and qualified as inspired evangelists, to attend the apostles, and finish what they had begun. Other officers were ordinary, to continue in the church till the end of the world; namely, pastors, to watch over, govern, and dispense, the ordinances of Christ to particular congregations; and teachers, to instruct church members and others in the truths of the gospel.

12. All which offices and officers are appointed and rendered successful for completing the church in the number of her chosen members, and each in their gifts and graces, and for uniting and compacting them in a regular society, and restoring such as had fallen, and for faith-ally dispensing to them his word and ordinances, and for the building up of his mystical body the church, in knowledge, faith, love, joy, and holy obedience; 13 Till we all, whether Jews or Gentiles, strong or weak, who do or may hereafter believe, be perfectly cemented into an entire agreement in the doctrines, and by the grace of faith; and in a clear, affectionate, and fiducial knowledge and approving acknowledgment of the eternal Son of God as our only Lord and Saviour; and so, by gradual improvement in gifts and graces, may arrive at that state of perfection which is reserved for the whole body of true believers in heaven after the last judgment.

14. That thus we may no longer continue, like children, deficient in knowledge and prudence, weak in faith, and wavering in opinion, easily taken with new things, tossed or driven about as ships without ballast, or flying clouds, by unstable, noisy, violent, and unsubstantial errors, whereby artful and designing men labour to impose on and deceive us, to our eternal ruin; 15. But, on the contrary, may sincerely speak of, and plead for, the truths of the gospel, in the exercise of fervent love to them, to Christ, and the souls of men;—and may, like living members of him as our quickening Head, increase in all light, grace, and holiness, by virtue of our union with him, in conformity to his pattern, and for his honour.

16. From whom, as the Head and Fountain, all his members, being orderly and closely joined among themselves and united to him, do, by that energy which is communicated from him through every ordinance, officer, and member—in a proportion suited to the state, condition, and exigence of every part—build up themselves and one another in Christian love to him their Head, and to their fellow members. 17. Since therefore ye, as members of Christ, are partakers of such privileges, let me again earnestly entreat and solemnly charge you, in the name and authority of the Lord Jesus, that henceforth ye no more behave like other Gentiles, who, unrenewed by the grace of God, still continue in their sensual, worldly, and idolatrous courses, suited to the pride, ignorance, and folly of their depraved mind.

18. Having their understandings filled with ignorance and error concerning every thing spiritual; and through which, indulged, increased, and confirmed, their wills and affections are become strangers to, and alienated from, the way of life, holiness, and happiness which God appoints and approves, and by which he lives in the soul, and it lives to him; 19. And who, through their contracted habits of ignorance, error, and hardness of heart, and the righteous judgment of God giving them up to their own lusts, have become quite insensible to the stings of conscience, committing the grossest abominations; and have voluntarily and with full consent delivered themselves over to the most eager delight in, desire after, and practice of the most shameful and detestable impurities.

20. But ye, whom God has called from darkness to his marvellous light, have not so learned the doctrines of Christ relative to his person, offices, and designs, or the obligations ye are under to him, and the privileges ye have received from him, as to induce or even permit you to venture on such licentious practices; 21. If, as ye profess and I hope, ye have indeed understood, hearkened to, and believed with the heart, what ye have heard from and concerning Jesus Christ, and have been inwardly and savingly enlightened and taught by his Spirit heartily to receive the truths of the gospel in their simplicity and purity, as they were delivered by him and his inspired apostles, and were exemplified in his temper and conduct, and are practised by the living members of his mystical body.

22. But that which ye have been taught, influenced and obliged to, is to labour by his grace in the use of all appointed means, more and more to discard with abhorrence, abandon, and mortify that debasing principle of indwelling corruption, which discovered itself in your former practices, which vitiates all the faculties of the soul and members of the body, and of itself issues in eternal destruction, according to the working of its many impetuous inclinations, which deceive carnal hearts with false appearances of profit, honour, or pleasure. 23. And, through the sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost, to press after a further renovation of all the inward powers of your soul, and that your minds may be more and more enlightened in the knowledge of divine things, and your will and affections more and more re-

21 If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye put off, concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts,

23 And be renewed in the spirit of your mind;

24 And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.

25 Wherefore, putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

27 Neither give place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.

29 Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil-speaking, be put away from you, with all malice:

32 And be ye kind one to another, plenished with grace and holiness. 24. And that, instead of wearing the deformity of sinful corruption any longer in sinful practices, ye may, by daily and increasing exercise of grace, clothe and adorn yourselves with all the beauties of that transcendently excellent new creature which is produced by the infinite wisdom, power, and grace of God, according to his will, and after that image of himself in which he at first created man, and which consists in real, internal, effectual, and divine principles, habits, and acts of equity and honesty towards men; and in true, not shadowy or ceremonial, purity and piety towards God.

25. Being thus taught and privileged, avoid with peculiar care the sins to which ye were formerly addicted. With abhorrence banish from you falsehood, lies, and all manner of deceit and fraud, which are so base in themselves, and so evasive of all true morality. In all your speeches and dealings with men make conscience of the strictest regard to truth; for, in both civil and religious societies, we are members of one body, and therefore ought always to act truly and candidly, as having a joint concern in the welfare of the whole.

26. Watch over your passions, that they may be kept under due government. Labour to restrain and regulate your anger, that it may never be causeless, excessive, or mischievous. And if at any time ye are through temptation hurried into sinful passion, quickly endeavour, through the gracious assistance of God, to suppress it, and be reconciled to your brother. Let it never rest in your bosom till sun-set, to unfit your minds for your evening devotions, or to disturb your sleep, or rise with you the next day.

27. And, that ye may not give Satan a place in your hearts to irritate or keep up turbulent and revengeful passions, or gratify and give him an advantage against you, by your yielding to his malicious and destructive designs, stand on your guard against his temptations; whenever ye find your spirits heated, resist him, steadfast in the faith, who watches all occasions to ensnare you; and take heed of giving ear to false accusers and slanderers, who, as his agents, labour to incense you against others without ground.

28. And if any of you, either before or since their conversion, have been guilty of private thefts or frauds, let them, as persons who have learned Christ, hereafter abhor every form of dishonesty; and, in the station and employment in which God hath placed them, let them earn, by laborious industry and care, what, by the blessing of God, may maintain themselves and family, and even help to relieve the necessities of the poor: that thus they may become a blessing, instead of a nuisance and burden, to civil and religious communities.

29. And let no light, frothy, profane, indecent, obscene, or opprobrious language, which marks the corruption of the heart from which it proceeds, and tends to corrupt others, ever come out of your mouth; but let all your words be under the conduct of a gracious spirit, and be wise, prudent, and suited to persons, times, and places; and adapted in the way of counsel, caution, reproof, comfort, or instruction, to promote the spiritual benefit of the company you are in, and recommend true and undefiled religion to their consciences and hearts.

30. Beware lest, with any of these things, so directly contrary to the holy nature, will, operations, gifts, and graces of the Holy Ghost, who loves and effects all true holiness in the souls of men, ye provoke him to withdraw his gracious presence, and deprive you of his comforts—by which ye have been plainly marked with God's image as his people, and have an infallible pledge and earnest of that full salvation which ye shall receive at death and in the last judgment.

31. And, to prevent your offending him or losing his comfortable and sealing presence, carefully avoid and abhor all rancour, severity, and sourness of temper; all furious, raging, and ungovernable passions; all causeless and excessive anger; all loud threatening and scolding, noisy quarrels and contentions; all railings, defamations, and backbitings, which are so dishonouring to God and injurious to men; and all malicious, spiteful, envious, and injurious thoughts or heart-burnings.

32. And, in order to cherish his presence and influence, always labour, as assisted by him, to cultivate an affectionate, affable, and benevolent disposition and behaviour, taking pleasure to do offices of kindness, and friendship one to another; sympathize with, and shew all tenderness, pity, and mercy towards the weak, afflicted, and tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

CHAP. V.

Here the apostle (1) Concludes his exhortation to brotherly love, and enforces it from the consideration of God and Christ's love to us; 1, 2. (2) Repeats his warning, particularly against uncleanness, covetousness, and drunkenness,—with a variety of arguments to enforce it, and to direct to a contrary behaviour; 3—20. (3) Exhorts to relative duties in general; 21: and those of wives and husbands in particular, which he illustrates and enforces from the spiritual relation that is between Christ and the church; 22, 23.

BE^a ye therefore followers of God, as dear children;

² And^b walk in love, as Christ also^c hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour.

⁴ Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks.

⁶ Let no man deceive you with vain words: for^h because of these things discouraged; frankly and freely forgive and forget those injuries which are done you by brethren, in consideration and imitation of that infinitely greater forgiveness of your manifold and aggravated transgressions, which God, in the riches of his grace, hath extended to you through the infinitely precious obedience and death of his dear and only begotten Son.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—What a credit are believers to their happy station in Christ, when they are meek, patient, forbearing one another in love, and united in sentiment and affection! And deep are the obligations they are under to Christian love and unity, who are all members of the same mystical body of Christ;—all animated by the same Spirit;—all partakers of the same hope and heavenly inheritance;—all related to, and interested in, the same Lord and Saviour;—all agreed in the same fundamental doctrines of faith, under the same baptismal seal and engagement;—and have all the same covenant God and Father, who is above them all, as their Governor, and dwells in them all by his Spirit.—What blessings may we not hope for from our once crucified, but now exalted, Redeemer! With bounteous care he scatters his gifts among the children of men. And ample is the provision of offices, officers, gifts, and graces, he has provided for his church, to promote her growth in numbers, unity, and orders; and of all her members in knowledge, faith, and love; and to prevent their being seduced into error and wickedness.—But dreadful is the case of wicked men, especially when they have provoked God to give them up to their own hearts' lusts. How ignorant, how stupid, how bent and eager on the most shocking abominations, they then become!—Odious is an inward principle of sin, wherever it is found. How corrupt, abominable, and deceiving! It perverts and inflames the passions, and fills them with anger, wrath, and malice. It hurries men into deceit, falsehood, idleness, and fraud. It renders their discourse unsavoury, defiling, clamorous, and injurious; and it and its fruits gratify the devil and offend the Holy Ghost. But excellent and adorning is that inward habit or principle of grace, in which believers do more and more abound. Delightfully it conforms men to God, subdues their angry passions, renders them kind, tender-hearted, and ready to forgive injuries;—makes them honest, upright, faithful, and industrious, and their converse godly and edifying; and excites them to a temper and conduct answerable to the dealings of the Holy Ghost, and the endearing obligations of God's superlative and forgiving kindness to them.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Let therefore the astonishing kindness and forgiving mercy of God your Father, and his Spirit, excite you, as his beloved and loving children, begotten and adopted by him, to imitate him in exercising all kindness and forgiveness one towards another. ² Nor is the consideration and example of Jesus Christ less suited to engage us to a constant, progressive, friendly, and affectionate, love one to another, since he has, with superlative condescension and grace, first loved us who believe; and, in manifestation thereof, has freely become our Surety, and yielded up his great and infinite Self to the most debased service and terrible death for us, as an expiatory sacrifice to satisfy divine justice, and reconcile us to God, to the highest honour and delight of all his perfections. ³ But, to return to the warning which I had begun;—in a manner becoming Christians renewed, sanctified, and devoted to God, earnestly flee, abstain from, and utterly detest every form of unchastity, and all that indecency, immodesty, and lewdness, in gestures, looks, dress, or acts, that approach towards, or tempt others to, it: and, in like manner, avoid and detest all irregular and impure desires after forbidden objects, and inordinate love to, or pursuits after, the things of this world, which would make you discontented without them, or to take dishonourable or unjust methods to procure or retain them. ⁴ Never secretly indulge any shameful practices, nor any light, wanton, or obscene, speeches or jests, which offend God, and tend to grieve or inflame the hearers; but let your lips be rather employed in commendations of God and Christ and his works, and in thankful acknowledgments of, and praises for, his kindness. ⁵ For, having learned the doctrines of the Christian religion, ye cannot but know that no person, who is addicted to, and lives and allows himself in, the practice of whoredom, or indulges himself in impure affections and lascivious actions,—nor any worldly-minded covetous wretch, who

⁷ Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

⁸ For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light;

¹¹ And^o have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but^r rather reprove them.

¹² For^t it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

¹⁵ See then that ye^u walk circumspectly, not as fools but as wise,

¹⁷ Wherefore, ye be ye not unwise, but loves, desires, and delights in, his worldly enjoyments more than in God himself, be his profession what it will,—has any title to, or, continuing such, can have any present or future enjoyment of, Christ and his Father in his kingdom, with the glories which attend it. ⁶ Let no Gentile philosopher, Jewish corruptor of God's law, or any other, by their plausible, empty, and fallacious speeches, make you to think these crimes small: for, on account of them, a.1 who obstinately persist in them shall be excluded from the heavenly kingdom of God, and be exposed to his wrath here and hereafter, which shall come rushing in full floods upon them. ⁷ By prayer, watchfulness, and diligence, labour therefore against these things, and never be companions, encouragers, or imitators, of such persons in their iniquities, lest ye also share in their just and tremendous punishments: ⁸ For, in your Heathen and unconverted state, ye were utterly ignorant of spiritual things, and walked in the dark paths of wickedness;—but now the Spirit of God hath enlightened your mind to know the truth as it is in Jesus; in whom, as your Head, ye have all light, wisdom, and purity, and from whom, as his members, ye derive all knowledge and grace: it is therefore your duty and privilege, with perseverance and daily progress, to live and act before God like persons begotten of God by the light of the gospel, and enlightened and directed by the word and Spirit of Christ, ⁹ Having a conversation answerable to the fruits produced and cherished by the Holy Ghost, which are directly contrary to what I have warned you against, and consist of every thing kind and beneficial, and in rendering to God and men their respective dues, in a constant and steadfast adherence to the truths of the gospel, and in exact truth, integrity, and faithfulness, in all that ye say and do. ¹⁰ And, by the assistance and light of the Spirit, trying and proving, from the scriptures, what is well-pleasing to the Lord Christ, and heartily approving thereof, and practising it, as an evidence of your regard to it,—and thus approving yourselves faithful servants and obedient children of Christ and his Father. ¹¹ And, that ye may walk as children of the light, avoid all partnership in, all countenancing or encouragement of, sinful practices, which are unprofitable and injurious, which proceed from ignorance of God, are shameful in themselves, often committed in secret, and leading to eternal misery; but, by friendly, kind, and prudent, admonitions of the guilty, and especially by your holy and circumspect conversation, expose their deformity, confute, reprove, and condemn them: ¹² For it would put to the blush, and even shock, a religious, sober, and modest mind, so much as to mention, except in necessary reproof, several of the detestable practices which your heathen neighbours, unwilling to expose their own character, commit secretly, in their idolatrous worship or otherwise. ¹³ But, by the enlightening influence of the word and Spirit of God, ye are enabled to discern the deformity of those sinful practices, and to live in a contrary manner,—in order to convince your wicked neighbours, and shame them out of their wickedness. ¹⁴ Wherefore the Lord in the Old Testament predictions relative to the calling of the Gentiles, plainly intimates that Christ's enlightening, quickening, comforting, and sanctifying, influence is conveyed in the gospel call, and ought to be attended with your earnest endeavours to shake off your ignorance, stupidity, insensibility, and spiritual death,—even as his quickening power was conveyed to dead persons in his calls to arise. ¹⁵ Take heed, therefore, that your whole conversation be accurate, exactly answerable to your Christian character, light, obligations and the rule of God's word, as under his all-seeing eye, and in view of enemies as well as friends,—not as persons ignorant, injudicious, unwise, and heedless, but as those who are taught of God the truth as it is in Jesus, and who wisely avoid exposing yourselves to infamy or hurt, or giving an occasion of stumbling to others. ¹⁶ And see that, by a diligent and circumspect Christian walk, as being deeply affected with godly sorrow for your former mis-spending of time,—you carefully improve every moment to the best advantage in the service of Christ, as if ye had dearly bought it out of the hand of sin, Satan, and the sloth, ease, and worldly business, to which it was formerly devoted; and the rather, as the times in which ye live are times of great immorality, ignorance, profaneness, and of persecution, trouble, and danger, in which both Jews and Gentiles wait for your halting,—that they may speak evil against you, and against Jesus Christ and the gospel on your account. ¹⁷ Take heed, therefore, that ye no more act foolishly and inconsiderately in the matters of God and eternal understanding what the will of the Lord is.

- 18 And ^abe not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be ^afilled with the Spirit;
- 19 ^bSpeaking to yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs; singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;
- 20 ^cGiving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;
- 21 ^dSubmitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.
- 22 ^eWives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, ^fas unto the Lord.
- 23 For ^gthe husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is ^hthe head of the church: and he is ⁱthe Saviour of the ^kbody.
- 24 Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, ^jso let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.
- 25 ^mHusbands, love your wives, even as ⁿChrist also loved the church, and gave himself for it;
- 26 That ^ohe might sanctify, and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word:
- 27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, ^pnot having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.
- 28 So ought men to love their wives as ^qtheir own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.
- 29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:
- 30 For we are ^rmembers of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.
- 31 ^sFor this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.
- 32 This is a great mystery: but I speak ^tconcerning Christ and the church.
- 33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular ^uso love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she ^vreverence her husband.

salvation, nor needlessly expose yourselves to the malice and fury of your enemies, but conduct yourselves suitably to your Christian character; and endeavour, through divine grace, to live and act as those who understand and highly regard the will of Jesus Christ as the rule of the purity and prudence of your conversation. 18. And, to prevent your falling into imprudent or abominable conduct, carefully avoid all unseasonable or immoderate use of intoxicating liquors, which causes us in an unmanly, nay, worse than brutal, manner to profane and prostitute the bounties of providence, which enfeeble, defile, and disorders, all the powers of both body and soul, and prompts to babbling, blasphemy, and all manner of madness and debauchery; but let it be your great concern to be filled with the influences, gifts, graces, and comforts, of the Holy Ghost, which qualify for, and excite to every thing prudent, holy, and pleasant. 19. And, either by yourselves or in fellowship with one another, express the joys of your heart in singing psalms, songs, and hymns, which ye either find in scripture, or are composed by holy persons or those inspired among you,—to the honour of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Father in him. 20. And, always maintaining a grateful disposition of heart to God for all the mercies which ye receive, temporal, spiritual, or eternal, pleasant or painful, improve every occasion of expressing your thankfulness to God, the Father of Christ, and our Father in him, as the original source of these blessings, and through the person and mediation of Christ, who purchased and bestows them, and in whom alone our praises and prayers can be presented acceptably to God. 21. And, directed, obliged, and enabled, by these influences of the Spirit, study an humble performance of all relative duties, incumbent upon you in your natural, civil, public, or private, stations of life, as persons who have the fear of God implanted in your hearts, and whose consciences are deeply awed and impressed with his authority in his word, and with his exact observation of your conduct and his future judgment. 22. Particularly do you believing wives pay all becoming reverence, honour, subjection, and obedience, to your own husbands, who have by the marriage-bond, devoted themselves to you, as your loving superiors; and always act herein as in the sight and presence of the Lord Christ, from love to his person, in obedience to his authority, and with an eye to his glory, and in the manner in which his people are subject to him. 23. For, by the law of nature and marriage, the husband is constituted the head, guide, and guardian, of the wife, in a manner somewhat similar to that in which Christ, as Mediator, is constituted the Head, Governor, and Protector, of the church,—in which relation he is their Saviour and Redeemer from every thing sinful and wretched, and to every thing truly honourable or happy. 24. As therefore the church is cheerfully and faithfully subject to the authority of Christ in all her spiritual concerns; so let wives, with meekness, willingness, and fidelity, be subject to their husbands in all things lawful in the Lord. 25. On the other hand, to procure the kind submission of your wives, see that you husbands never tyrannize over them, or be passionate or bitter against them, but by all gentle carriage, due honour, tender sympathy, and every other form of kind behaviour towards their soul and body, manifest the most endearing and ardent affection, in imitation of Christ, who so loved the church that he freely gave up himself to the most debased service, suffering, and death, in her room, and for her spiritual and eternal benefit: 26. That, by his blood and Spirit, through his word, he might deliver her members from the guilt, power and pollution, of sin, and justify, renew, sanctify, and consecrate them to the service of God: 27. That, having gradually sanctified and adorned them with his Spirit and grace, he might, in due time, place them in his immediate presence in heaven, entirely freed from every remainder of sin and trouble, holy and happy. 28. Influenced by, and in imitation of, this peculiar, superlative, and abiding love of Christ, husbands ought to love their wives sincerely, constantly, tenderly, and ardently, as they do their own bodies, especially since 28 So ought men to love their wives as ^atheir own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we are ^rmembers of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 ^sFor this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak ^tconcerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular ^uso love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she ^vreverence her husband.

CHAP. VI.

Here the apostle (1) Inculcates the relative duties of children and parents; 1—4: and of servants and masters; 5—9. (2) Directs all Christians; in every station, to put on their spiritual armour, in the exercise of those graces and use of those means which are necessary to defend and secure them against the enemies of their soul in this state of warfare; 10—18. (3) Begs the prayers of the Ephesians for himself, and shews why he sent Tychicus to them; 21—24.

CHILDREN, ^aobey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

2 ^bHonour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, ^cye fathers provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

every thing they do for their welfare and comfort will turn out for their own. 29. For no reasonable man, out of enmity to the heart, ease, or comfort, of his own body, ever neglected or abused it, but from a principle of natural affection, feeds, clothes, warms, and refreshes it; and so every husband ought to deal with his wife, who is one flesh with him,—even as Christ, in his most affectionate love, takes care of his church, which he hath espoused to, and made one with, himself: 30. For, we, who believe in him, are members of his mystical body, and in a spiritual sense, are more closely united to him than ever Eve was to Adam, and derive all our grace and glory from his person, as crucified for and united to us. 31. The standing law of marriage, mentioned by Adam, immediately after the formation and espousals of Eve; requires such closeness of union and tenderness of affection between married persons, as if they were incorporated into one body, and were more to be regarded and loved than even parents themselves. 32. That close union between married persons, particularly Adam and Eve, was indeed an emblem of the spiritual union between Christ and his members, whom, as their Head and Husband, he animates, influences, rules, governs, and cares for, in the most tender manner. 33. But in connection with this, it also implies that every husband ought to love his wife with the same sincere and singular affection as he does himself; and that every wife ought, with a conjugal love, to pay all becoming respect, honour, and obedience to her husband.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—With readiness ought Christians to imitate Jesus Christ and his Father in their kindness and love to men. And the faith and sense of their redeeming love should make us carefully avoid all gross wickedness of every form, as utterly unworthy of our Christian character, privileges, and obligations, and as odious to God and ruinous to ourselves. A visible change of behaviour should be studied by all such as are awakened unto life by the powerful voice of Christ. Diligently should they avoid all fellowship with wicked persons or deeds, be watchful and circumspect in evil days, and use great care to improve time to the best advantage. Great should be our concern to have our heart filled with the Holy Ghost, and to live always under his comforting influences,—in every thing giving thanks to Christ, and to God through him. Earnestly should we labour to fulfil the duties of every station, from a principle of faith, and filial fear of God. And happy are those families, of which Christ is the centre, and his redeeming kindness the great pattern and motive of mutual behaviour.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Do you, children, whatever be your age and circumstances in the world, submissively, readily, and cheerfully hearken to and obey the counsels and commands of your parents in all lawful things, from love to Christ, regard to his authority, and for his glory and honour;—for, according to all laws, human and divine, this is a just debt, and is highly fit and acceptable in itself, as ye have been brought into being by their means, and are so much beholden to their care and kindness; 2. Yea, the first command of the second table of the moral law, and the only command which has a promise annexed to itself in particular, requires every one of you to think and speak of, and conduct yourself towards, both your parents in the most affectionate, reverential, submissive, obedient, and honourable manner. 3. That, through the blessing of God upon your obedience, your life on earth may continue long and prosperous. 4. And do you parents carefully avoid every thing humoursome, unreasonable or harsh, towards your children, which might provoke their resentment, exasperate their passions, and prejudice them against you or your Christian religion: and, by a holy and diligent example, by much fervent prayer, by earnest and persuasive instruction, and by prudent, moderate, and reasonable correction, administered to them in obedience to Christ's authority, and in dependence on his blessing to concur therewith, bring them up in the knowledge, fear, worship, and obedience, of God in him.—Earnestly watch over and restrain the first appearances of inward corruptions, errors, or immoralities ; and direct and encourage them to every thing dutiful towards God or men.—5. Servants, make conscience of obeying all the lawful commands of your earthly masters and mistresses, who, in things pertaining to this world, are set over you by God's providence, and have a right to your services, whether they are believers or not. Be willingly and faithfully subject to them, with a reverential fear of their, and especially of God's, displeasure if ye should betray your trust, and embezzle their goods, or disobey their just orders. And see that ye do all this with a sincere, ingenious, and honest heart, as therein desiring and intending to serve the Lord Christ and adorn the doctrines of the gospel. 6. Fulfil your services with diligence, constancy, and fidelity : not merely when the eyes of your masters or others are upon you, as if ye only aimed at pleasing men for your own honour or advantage, but as from regard to Christ's authority, and always under his eye, and in view of being judged by him, and in order to promote his honour, doing whatever God requires of you in this matter from a sincere principle of religious regard towards him. 7. In this manner perform every part of your due service, freely, affectionately, and industriously, and with all readiness of mind, as persons who love your masters, and have their interest at heart,—doing every thing which God or they call you to from a sense of duty to Jesus Christ, your supreme Lord and Master, that ye may serve, please, and glorify him : and not merely to acquit yourselves in the sight, and gain the esteem, of men. 8. And know, for your encouragement, that however your masters may reward you in this world, ye shall receive a gracious and eternal reward of all your faithful services from the Lord Jesus in the great day of judgment. 9. And, ye believing masters, take heed that ye fulfil the duties of your stations with the like views, in singleness of heart as to Christ, and according to the will of God ; and that ye behave towards your servants, not in a domineering, severe, threatening, insolent, cruel, or oppressive, manner, but with gentleness and humanity,—always remembering that ye yourselves are the servants of our Lord Christ, who takes notice of your conduct, and will call you to account for it, without paying any more respect to you than to the meanest of your servants. 10. And, that ye may perform your relative and other duties, and resist all the influences of sin, Satan, and the world, who labour to oppose you in your progress heavenward, set out and press forward, like valiant soldiers, under the Captain of salvation, not in your own strength, but in the strength of Christ, and through his almighty influences enabling you to every duty, service, and suffering, to which ye are at any time called. 11. And, that while ye set out in his strength ye may be thoroughly furnished for all encounters with your spiritual enemies, always earnestly endeavour, under a sense of their power and your own weakness and danger, to live in the constant exercise of all those graces, and use of those means, which God appoints, gives, and makes effectual for the full defence and spiritual safety of his people, that ye may be able to withstand and defeat the numerous, ensnaring, fallacious, and cunning, attacks of the devil and his instruments. 12. And great need we have of all this help ;—for, in our holy warfare, we ministers and others, who have enlisted under Christ's banner, have to engage in close and sharp contention, not only with the carnal reasonings, authority, and violence of men, but with all ranks and orders of malicious, crafty, deceitful, powerful, spirits, who, through the permission of God, have erected an usurped empire over the minds and hearts of blinded sinners ! and, being in themselves most vilely and implacably wicked, make it their whole business to propagate spiritual wickedness, unbelief, pride, idolatry, error, malice, wrath, envy,—and who, hovering in the air, and seated on our souls, strenuously labour to prevent our obtaining the eternal inheritance. 13. Since ye have therefore so many subtle and powerful enemies to contend with, see that ye be fully armed, and, in Jesus' strength, make a proper use

14 Stand therefore, ^u having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness ;

15 ^v And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace :

16 ^w Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked :

17 And take ^x the helmet of salvation, and ^y the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God :

18 ^z Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and ^{aa} watching thereunto with ^{ab} all perseverance, and supplication for ^{ac} all saints ;

19 ^{ad} And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may ^{ae} open my mouth boldly, to make known the ^{af} mystery of the gospel,

20 For which I am ^{ag} an ambassador ^{ah} in bonds : that ^{ai} therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

21 ^{aj} But, that ye also may know my ^{ak} affairs, ^{al} and how I do, ^{am} Tychicus, a beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known to you all things :

of every spiritual weapon, defensive or offensive, wherewith God hath furnished you, that ye may be able to resist and overcome all these or other formidable enemies, in every day of conflict and trial. 14. In order therefore to your obtaining a glorious victory, it is necessary that, in the strength of Christ, ye, in your stations, indefatigably and incessantly, with all watchfulness, diligence, and steadfastness, keep your ground in the field of battle, having your whole man girt about with the truths of God revealed in his word, and with sincerity and uprightness of heart and conversation, that thereby ye may be steady, resolute, and active ;—let your heart be protected by the righteousness of Christ applied to your conscience, and by the daily exercise of righteousness and true holiness, which proceed from faith and love. 15. And, that ye may be enabled to hold out against all hardships and snares, and be ready for every encounter, let your affections and conversation be duly influenced by the doctrines, promises, encouragements, and provisions, of the gospel, by which God exhibits, offers, and applies, the whole peace and consolation of the new covenant, that nothing may hurt, discompose, or embroil, you. 16. But especially let a lively exercise of faith on Christ's person, blood, righteousness, and fulness, and the power and grace of God in him through the declarations and promises of the new covenant, be your all-protecting shield, by which you may be enabled to silence every terrifying charge of guilt,—to repel every attempt to surprise you into hard or blasphemous thoughts of God or Christ, or sudden emotions of wrath, revenge, unchastity, or other wickedness,—and to disarm of its force every furious temptations or sudden suggestion, wherewith the devil may attempt to penetrate and influence your soul with horror, anguish, or guilt. 17. And let the hope of eternal salvation protect you from fear in danger, and fortify you against the most furious and threatening attacks of Satan and his confederates. And let the doctrines, promises, commands, threatenings, and histories, of God's word, which the Holy Ghost indited, explains, and applies, be used, in the hand of your faith, for the destruction and confusion of your spiritual enemies. 18. And, as none of your efforts, or even graces, oracles, or ordinances of God, can be effectual without the special aids of the divine Spirit, maintain always a praying frame of heart ; and let all your conflicts be attended with solemn, stated, or ejaculatory, prayer, in all sorts of addresses to God, and on all occasions, public or private, in the name of Christ, and by the assistance of his Spirit, and with your whole heart, for all seasonable help and direction. And, while ye watch against the designs and stratagems of your enemies, and for opportunities to annoy and defeat them, watch also for convenient opportunities of spiritual influences in, and gracious answers to, your prayers :—and continuing constant and unwearied therein, earnestly beg that God would not only avert evils from or bestow blessings on yourselves, but also all your fellow Christians, that they, along with you, may stand their ground in their spiritual warfare, and more and more abound in light, grace, comfort, and holiness, to the glory of God, and confusion of Satan and his instruments. 19. And particularly pray for me, your faithful and affectionate apostle and friend, whose work and trials are so important and difficult, and whose strength is so small,—that God would relieve me from my present imprisonment, and give opportunity and ability to publish the great mysteries of the gospel, in an open, bold, plain, impartial, earnest, and successful, manner. 20. That I, the graciously honoured ambassador of Christ, who am now a prisoner for preaching that gospel, may yet have opportunity, and be enabled, to preach it undauntedly, freely, and plainly, according to the duty of my office, without molestation. 21, 22. And, that ye may the better know how to order your supplications or thanksgivings for me, I have sent Tychicus, one of your dear Asiatic friends, an upright, diligent, and laborious, minister of Christ, with this letter, that he may fully acquaint you with my various sufferings and comforts under them, and my labours and success,—that, by informing you how the Lord supports, directs and comforts, tenor of the gospel, desire, esteem, and delight in, our only and complete Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Happy are those families, in which parents, children, masters, and servants, make Christ's law their rule, his example their pattern, his love their motive, and his honour their end, in all their conduct. Numerous and subtle are their enemies, and hard the trials, of every true Christian. But since they are rooted in Christ, he, as their strength and Captain of salvation, and his complete armour provided for them, are sufficient to withstand and overcome all opposition. Happy are they who are taught of God to cleave to him, follow his direction, and improve his armour. And nothing is more useful than a vigorous faith, and persevering and fervent prayer. As ministers are peculiarly exposed to temptations and troubles, they ought to have a double share in the prayers of Christians; and never will a minister's heart be actuated by the grace of God, but he will be ready to pray for his people.

TO THE

PHILIPPIANS.

Philippi was a considerable city on the eastern frontier of Macedonia, now part of European Turkey, which Philip, the father of Alexander the Great, enlarged, fortified, and called by his own name. Directed by a vision, Paul came hither from Asia, and planted a Christian church; Acts xvi. and afterwards visited them in his way to Jerusalem; Acts xx. 1—6. Their concern for him was peculiarly affectionate; and notwithstanding their poverty, they distinguished themselves in sending him seasonable and liberal supplies. Epaphroditus having brought him their bounty, during his imprisonment at Rome, he sent by him upon his return this excellent letter,—in which he expresses his great affection for them, and thankfulness for their favours; and exhorts them to constancy, courage, and perseverance under sufferings, and to public spiritedness, humility, holy joy, fervent prayer, and diligent progress in universal holiness.

work of grace, is really begun in most of your hearts. 8. For, affected with, and in imitation of, Jesus' redeeming love, God alone knows how earnestly I desire to be further instrumental in the spiritual and eternal welfare of each of you, whom I look on as his dear members. 9. And, in my fervent affection, I earnestly beg of him that your love to him and his Son, his word, ordinances, ways, ministers, and people, may still more and more increase, along with, and under the influence of, a growing knowledge, and experience of the doctrine of Christ, 10, 11. That ye may carefully examine, prove, and approve, those sentiments and practices which are truly valuable and important; that so ye may be found genuine Christians,—pure in heart and life, free from hypocrisy and deceit in your holy profession, and uncorrupted in your principles and designs, temper and behaviour,—and may, in the view of Christ's coming to call you to account for your conduct, constantly live in the most holy and blameless manner, doing nothing to wound your own spirits or occasion the stumbling of others,—greatly abounding in the most precious fruits of all holy obedience, and in the performance of duties both to God and man, which are produced by virtue derived from Christ, and are, through his merits and intercession, acceptable to God, and tend to his honour and glory. 12—14. And that ye may not be terrified at, nor discouraged by, my sufferings for the cause of Christ, know that, contrary to all outward appearance or natural expectation, they have been permitted and overruled, rather for the confirmation and propagation of the gospel, than to the dishonour or hindrance of it, insomuch that the hardships and imprisonment, which the power and presence of Christ enable me to bear with becoming patience and fortitude, are well known among all the courtiers and citizens here, to be for no immorality, but merely for the sake of Christ, and have proved the happy occasion of many enquiring after and believing in him;—and, through the influence of God's grace, many of my fellow ministers, fully satisfied of the justice and excellency of my cause, and of the remarkable support and encouragement which I have received from Christ under my troubles, have been more abundantly animated and emboldened thereby to preach the gospel with greater freedom and liberty of spirit than before. 15—17. There are, indeed, some judaizing teachers, who preach Christ as the true Mes- siah, and several important doctrines of salvation, from envy at my reputation and success in carrying the gospel in its peculiar doctrines to the Gentiles as well as the Jews, and in order to sink my credit and authority, and raise their own. Others preach the pure doctrines of Christ in their full extent, with freedom and delight, from love to him and his truths, and to the souls of men, and to me his apostle. The former, not from any sincere regard to Christ, his truths, or immortal souls, but from a contentious and envious disposition, in hopes that thereby they shall supplant, distress or grieve, me, or that, by the contentions which they foment, they may provoke the civil government to detain me in prison, or take away my life. But the latter, from a principle of love to me, as well as to the truth itself, accounting me one appointed and qualified of God, and even imprisoned and tried, for maintaining and defending the gospel of Christ. 18. But, however different the motives by which the preachers here are actuated, I am heartily glad, and hope always to be so, that the truths of Christ are preached, and himself made known to multitudes, by that means. 19. For I know, from the promises of God, the revelations of his Spirit, and my own former experience, that, through your prayers for me, and the rich communi- cations of the Spirit of Christ, granted me in answer to them, that the very worst designs of my opposers shall be overruled for promoting my deliverance from prison, and be sanctified to my own and others' spiritual and eternal advantage. 20. And I firmly hope, as well as earnestly desire, that, whatever my adver- saries may design or do against me, I shall never be ashamed of Christ or his truths, but be enabled to go on in his work with all liberty of spirit and undaunted courage; and as, since my call to the apostleship, I have, through grace, acted to the honour of Christ, my great Master; I trust that, now and hereafter, he will, even in my weak frail body, manifest the greatness of his power and grace, whether by my patient continuance under suffering, my further publication and defence of the gospel, and my holy life and conversation,—or by my bravely owning and honouring him in enduring the most cruel and violent death for his sake. 21. For Christ, my ALL IN ALL, who lives in me, and to whom I look as the source of spiritual life, is my gain in living and dying; and the glory of his name, and the winning of souls to him, is the end which I pursue in both;—and a death, after living in, on, and to, him, would but usher me into the unspeakable reward of eternal felicity. 22. But, if it please God to lengthen out my days on earth to preach and suffer for the gospel, it will promote the honour and interest of Christ, which, in the end, will turn to my own account; so that, were I to be left to my determination, I can hardly say whether I would choose life or death. 23, 24. For I am indeed greatly straitened and pressed in my own mind, having, on the one hand, an earnest desire to be loosed from my present incumbrances, weakness, and imperfections, and to have my soul released from this frail body, that I may enter on the immediate views and full enjoyment of Jesus Christ my Lord; and, on the other, I am willing, if it please God, to continue for a while exercising my ministry on earth, as I believe this would be most for your spiritual advantage, amidst the manifold enemies and temptations which surround you. 25, 26. In this persuasion, that my future ministrations might, by the blessing of God, be useful, I am not without inti- mations from the Spirit of God that, notwithstanding the present threatening aspect, my life shall be for a time preserved, that, by my preaching, prayer, or example, I may be instrumental in promoting your and others' edification in knowledge, faith, comfort, and holiness; and that, by my wonderful deliver- ances from prison, and the benefits ye receive by my visit, preaching, and converse, your delightful glory in Jesus Christ, the only Saviour may be more abundant than ever. 27, 28. Meanwhile, to manifest the truth of your faith, and to promote your own and my comfort, take the most earnest and special heed that your traffic and behaviour in the world be answerable to your Christian state and character, and suitable to the directions, and ornamental to the principles, privileges, and obligations, of the gospel of Christ, and to your holy profession thereof; that, whether I should ever in this life see you again or not, I may have comfortable accounts of your spiritual concerns; that, notwithstanding all the subtle and furious attempts of your enemies, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, he may persevere unshaken in one and the same evangelical spirit of liberty, truth, and love, and concur in vigorous efforts for preserving, propaga- ting, and defending, the pure, uncorrupted, and important, doctrines of faith delivered in the gospel, and for rendering the grace of faith in one another lively and steadfast:—and may hear that, however artful, cruel, and outrageous, the adversaries of your souls and Christian profession be, ye behave, amidst all their attacks, with a truly Christian courage and fortitude,—which to them is not a mark of your obstinacy, but an awful token that they are on the way to everlasting

CHAP. II.

(1) Paul exhorts the Philippians to an harmonious, kind, and humble, behaviour, by various moving arguments, and particularly by the example of Christ; 1—11: to diligence in the business of their salvation, in consideration of God's working in them; 12, 13: and to be exemplary and instructive to the world, and a comfort to himself; 14—18. (2) He assures them of his desire and hope of making them a visit; and meanwhile recommends Timothy and Epaphroditus, whom he sent with this letter; 19—29.

destruction;—and to you is an evidence that God, who calls you to these trials, will effectually carry you through unto eternal salvation! 29. For, to your distinguished honour, God, on account of Christ's merits, not only enables you to believe in him to the saving of your souls, but also patiently, and aiming at his glory, to suffer for his cause, that ye may be more illustriously glorified together with him hereafter: 30. In which ye are exercised with no other combat of trials and troubles than I myself have experienced even among you, and still am under, and yet am enabled, through grace, to sustain with holy fortitude and patience, for the same glorious cause.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—In great kindness hath Christ furnished his church with all needful officers to take care of their spiritual and temporal concerns. Hopeful are daily fervent prayers for necessary blessings to such as are sanctified in Christ; and thrice happy those churches wherein all the members appear such. The free favour of Christ and his Father flows out delightfully in their spiritual peace, and to perfect the work begun in their hearts. It is very refreshing for ministers to observe their hearers walking in the fellowship of the gospel, and unitedly increasing and abounding in sincerity, light, love, and holy conversation, to the glory of God through Christ, and as a mean of preparing them for his second coming.—For deep is the concern which faithful ministers have for the spiritual edification and comfort of their hearers; and great is the delight they take to share with them in it, and to help in promoting it!—Alas! that ever the gospel of God's grace and salvation should be preached from envy or contention! But how amiable when it is preached with fidelity, and with sincere affection to Christ, and to his servants, people, and cause. It is very encouraging when God makes the sufferings of his ministers to turn out for the spread and success of the gospel. And honourable is it when they rejoice to be debased, that Christ may be exalted and souls edified; and, through love to him, are in a strait whether they should desire the immediate enjoyment of Christ, or for a time to continue in a suffering state on earth for the service of his church. Thrice happy is it when, through Jesus' merits and grace, the prayers of Christians draw down rich supplies of grace on their ministers; and when with remarkable unanimity they cordially believe, boldly profess, uprightly practise, and are ready cheerfully to suffer for, the truth!—What fearful ruin must await the adversaries of such!

CHAP. II. Ver. 1, 2. By all the exhortations which have been delivered to you in the name of Christ, and by all the consolations which ye have in or from him, or would occasion to me; by all the joy ye have had, or can have, in his love to you, or in your's to him or to one another for his sake, or in your or my mutual love;—by all that holy fellowship, which ye and I have in the special influences, gifts, and graces, of the Holy Ghost; or with one another, as members of Christ's mystical body;—by all the inexpressible grace and tender mercies of God, manifested in your heart by his Spirit;—and by all the reality, worth, pleasure, obligation, or endearment, in those things which ye have experienced;—I beseech you to increase my comfort and joy, in more and more abundantly uniting with me, and with one another, in mind and heart, in joint love to Jesus Christ and every thing that is his, and in joint pursuits of the same design for promoting his honour and the edification of souls;—and in a joint view and relish of the doctrines of the gospel, in opposition to judaizing preachers. 3. Take heed that nothing be said or done among you from a litigious ostentation, a self-conceited temper or desire of applause;—but in your church assemblies, and in all your conversation, behave with the deepest humility and modesty, being always ready to condescend to persons of the lowest degree, and to think and speak better of others, who walk in a becoming manner, than of yourselves,—duly affected with a sense of your own failings, and casting a veil of love upon the defects of other Christians. 4. And, in order to attain this excellent disposition, let every one of you beware of a narrow selfish spirit, magnifying your own endowments, or of principally aiming at your own honour, ease, and secular interests; but let every one, acted by a general public spirit, consult and study what tends to the general edification, peace, comfort, and advantage of others, spiritual or temporal: 5. For, in opposition to strife, vain glory, and self-seeking, the same spirit of meekness, humility, and love, ought to prevail in you which was so perfectly and conspicuously exemplified in our Lord Jesus Christ. 6—8. Who, though, as the eternal and holy begotten Son of God, he was necessarily possessed of all divine perfections, and justly claimed a sameness of nature and equality of person with his eternal Father, nevertheless, by an act of infinite condescension, disrobed, and as it were emptied, himself of his appearances of that divine majesty and glory, of which he is necessarily and perpetually possessed;—and, that he might be his Father's bond servant, living, acting, bleeding, and dying, according to his commandment, and go through the most painful, humbling, and difficult, services of our redemption, assumed a true and real human nature into personal union with his divine;—and, being found in the common form and condition of men, as well as in their law room and stead, he submitted to the lowest degree of service and suffering, humbly obeying his parents and magistrates in every thing lawful;—yea, obeying his Father, in fulfilling the precepts and bearing the penalty of his holy law, and that even unto the ignominious, painful, and accursed, death of the cross. 9—11. But, having fulfilled his work of redemption in this humble, obedient, and suffering, manner, God his Father, in reward of it, gloriously exalted him, not by adding any thing to his essential happiness, perfection, or glory, but by raising him as man from the dead, receiving him up into heaven, setting him at his own right hand, and giving him universal dominion as God-man Mediator, and a new title of honour and authority as Lord and Saviour, incomparably superior to any other name, dignity, or authority, among creatures,—that all intelligent beings, angels or men, good or bad, might, either now or in the last judgment, voluntarily adore, worship, and submit to him, or be constrained publicly to submit to him, as their supreme Judge;—and that men of all nations and languages might, either cheerfully or by constraint, be made to acknowledge him, as Mediator God-man, to be the great Head, Lord, and Ruler, over all, and the universal Judge of the world, to the glory of God the Father, who, in infinite wisdom and sovereignty, appointed him to this dignity, as his honorary Servant under himself. 12. Since therefore the beauties of holiness and humility, and the infinite importance of your salvation, have been so conspicuously and affectingly exemplified in Jesus Christ, I entreat and hope that, as, when I was present among you, to observe, assist, and admonish, you, ye were obedient to my words, and have been much more since I left you, so ye will more and more abound in the diligent exercise and assiduous practice of the forementioned, and all other, graces and duties, necessary in the nature of things, and by the appointment of God, for the final accomplishment of that salvation which is already your own by the gift of the Father, the purchase of the Son, and application and earnest of the Holy Ghost; and that not with a servile, distrustful, and desponding dread, but with a holy, filial, and awful, reverence of the divine Majesty, and a cautious fear of sinning against him, and humble dread of provoking his frowns or chastisements. 13. For, to encourage your diligence, and prevent your pride and carnal security, remember that the same God of all grace, who has begun the good work in your souls by an internal influence, doth carry it on till it be perfect; and, not for any desert of yours, but merely of his own free and sovereign grace, with infinite pleasure and delight, he excites, inclines, and determines, your will, and enables you with freedom and cheerfulness to perform those things that relate to your salvation. 14. In dependance therefore upon his gracious operations in you, study in your whole conduct, to avoid all discontent at the prosperity of others, or the disposals of providence,—and all animosities and wrangling disputations one against another, or against what God in his providence calls you to do or suffer for Christ's sake. 15. That, as children of God, and not of the devil, ye may in reality, as well as appearance, be unre-

the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy and rejoice with you all.18 For the same cause also do ye joy and rejoice with me.19 But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort when I know your state.20 For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state.21 For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.24 But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellow soldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.26 For he plunged after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had proveable and inoffensive in your temper and conversation, and sincere in your dealings with God and men,—that there may be no just occasion of complaint or accusation against you, or any room to revile and censure you, while ye live in the midst of Jews and Gentiles, exceedingly depraved in their minds and manners, and perversely turned aside from the right ways of the Lord ;—among whom ye Christians are, or ought to be, shining lights and illustrious examples, for their conviction, direction, or pattern, that, seeing your good works, they may glorify your Father which is in heaven. 16. Holding fast to yourselves, and holding forth to all around you, Christ, who is our life ; and the glorious doctrines of that gospel which reveals, offers, and is the mean of conferring spiritual and eternal life,—that, according to my hope, I may rejoice in your steadfastness, usefulness, and eternal salvation, when, at Christ's second coming, we shall appear together in his presence ; and may find that my pains and labours have, by the grace of God, issued in his glory and your happiness. 17. Nay, if God, for the confirmation of your faith, and that of other believing Gentiles, who are offered up as an acceptable sacrifice to himself, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, should call me, his prisoner, to undergo the most cruel sufferings and death, I do and should rejoice and glory therein. 18. And, if ye hear of my martyrdom, I beg that ye will rejoice with, and congratulate, me on the honour of such a death, since it will bear the most noble testimony to the Lord Jesus and his gospel, and tend to the further encouragement and establishment of your faith in him. 19. But, notwithstanding all that I have said about my willingness to die for these great purposes, I at present humbly hope and trust that, through the care and kindness of the Lord Jesus, who has all power in heaven and earth, I shall be quickly able to spare my dear brother Timothy, and send him to visit you and help you in your spiritual concerns, and that I may have the satisfaction to hear from him, that the work of the Lord prospers among you, and that the subtle judaizing teachers have not been able to pervert you. 20. And my reason for sending him is, that I have here no fellow labourer, so like myself in temper, ministration, behaviour, and love to you, and who, with the like genuine, tender, and parental, affection, will lay your concerns to heart and carefully study to promote your establishment and edification. 21. For the generality of those with me are too selfish and feeble minded, rather solicitous about their own temporal ease, honour, profits, or safety, than willing to expose themselves to such fatigues, dangers, and reproaches, as they might possibly be called to undergo, in promoting the interests, cause, and glory of our great Lord and Saviour, and the welfare of his church, amongst you. 22. But ye have had sufficient trial and proof of his eminent qualifications, faithfulness, courage, and zeal ; and that, as a son, he has been always ready to engage with me in any work or warfare, or cheerfully go wherever, and do whatever, I desired him. 23. Him therefore I hope to send to you as soon as I shall have taken my trial at Cesar's bar, and know whether I am to die or live, to remain a prisoner or be discharged. 24. Nay, I trust in the Lord Jesus, whose I am and whom I serve, and for whose sake I am in bonds, that, by his gracious and overruling providence, I shall be acquitted, and visit you myself. 25. Nevertheless, I thought it necessary, for your edification and comfort, to send back with this letter Epaphroditus, who is my brother in the Christian faith and ministerial office, and fellow labourer and soldier under Christ, our Captain of salvation in our spiritual work, and in our warfare against sin, Satan, and the seducers and powers of this world ; and who, as your minister and messenger, has faithfully and kindly supplied me with your generous benefaction. 26. And I the rather chose to send him, as he is extremely desirous of seeing you again, being exceedingly afflicted in his own mind, that your hearing of his sickness would occasion so much grief and distress to you. 27. For indeed his sickness was such, that we despaired of his life ; but our prayer-hearing God, whose prerogative it is to kill and to make alive, brought him back from the gates of death, which was a great mercy, not 27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death : but God had mercy on him ; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that when ye see him again ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness ; and hold such in reputation :

30 Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAP. III.

The Apostle (1) Cautions the Philippians against judaizing teachers, whom he describes, and contrasts with faithful ministers and Christians ; 1—3. (2) Recites his own former Jewish privileges, and renounces them all for Christ ; 4—8. (3) Represents his earnest desire to be found in him and his imputed righteousness, and to go on towards perfection in holiness and happiness ; 9—14. (4) Recommends his own example of holiness and heavenly-mindedness to the imitation of believers, in opposition to the behaviour of carnal professors ; 15—21.

FINALLY, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.

2 Beware of dogs, beware of evil-workers, beware of the concision.

3 For we are the circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man only to him, in the restoration of his health and his further capacity for usefulness, but also to you and others, particularly myself : as the loss of so dear and valuable a friend and brother would have been a great addition to the trouble which his sickness, and my own confinement, gave me. 28. I therefore dispatched him back to you with the greater care and speed, that, when ye see him again in full health, ye may have fresh comfort ; and, by the renewed usefulness of his labours among you, my own mind may be comforted under my troubles, and for the want of him. 29. Receive him therefore as a servant of Christ, and for his sake, with all spiritual joy, as well as with humane, civil, and friendly, affection ; and let him, and all such faithful labourers in the gospel, be esteemed very highly, and treated with great honour, for their work's sake. 30. For it was by the fatigue he underwent in the service of Christ, in love to him, and zeal for his interest and glory, that he contracted that illness which brought him so near the point of death ; neglecting his own body, and hazarding his own life, that he might preach to such as I could not come to in my confinement, and might attend and assist me in your name.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The comforts and influences of real religion should stir us up to Christian unity, affection, humble condescension, and tender care for the edification of others, particularly our brethren in Christ. And a most endearing example, and powerfully-constraining motive hereof, is his infinite condescension, self-debasement, and suffering, for us. But his glorious advancement to his Father's right hand, having all power given him in heaven and in earth, is a delightful earnest and blessed mean of the exaltation of humble souls : And infinite is the obligation we have to contemplate, admire, love, adore, and serve him. With humble caution, self diffidence, reverence of God, and holy, diligence, should believers attend to the things which relate to their own salvation. And hopeful is their labour when God is ever present with them to excite and assist them. And Christians have great need, for the honour of Christ, for the comfort of his ministers, and for the sake of the world around them, always to study an humble, holy, and inoffensive, conversation.—Alas ! that, in the best of times, so many ministers and professed Christians should be so selfish and corrupt. But it is delightful to see them striving to outdo one another in care, sympathy, love, and readiness to do or suffer for one another's edification and comfort.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. After all, my dear Christian brethren, make it your constant study to rejoice and glory in the Lord Jesus, his person, offices, relations, and blessings, as altogether excellent in themselves, and by the gospel given and applied to your hearts. This will support your spirits under trouble, and prevent your seduction by judaizing teachers.—And, without any irksomeness, I repeat the admonitions which I formerly gave you, as I find it necessary for your establishment and edification. 2. Beware of all flattering, malicious, mischievous, and dividing, preachers, particularly those of the judaizing kind, who, with all their boastings of circumcision, are extremely disgraceful and hurtful to the church, tearing it asunder, and cutting themselves and others off from Jesus Christ. 3. For we, who are true believers in Christ, are the very reverse of such,—being effectually circumcised and renewed in our hearts, and truly instated in covenant with God ; and accordingly we worship him, not by ceremonial rites and carnal ordinances, but with our whole souls, in the exercise of all spiritual graces,—under the direction and influence of the Holy Ghost,—and with abundant joy triumph in Jesus Christ, as our only Mediator, righteousness, and ground of acceptance and hope !—while we renounce all dependance upon and expectation of favour with, God on account of circumcision, or any other Jewish ordinance, or any thing we have or can do in performing the righteousness of the law by natural principles. 4—6. None of the judaizing teachers have more ground to boast of these carnal privileges than I myself.—I was duly thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more :

5 ¹Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews ; as touching the law, a Pharisee ;

6 ²Concerning zeal, persecuting the church ; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But what things were ³gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss ⁴for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord : ⁵for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having ⁶mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but ⁷that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith :

10 That ⁸I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death ;

11 If by any means ⁹I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 ¹⁰Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect : but ¹¹I follow after, if that I may apprehend ¹²that for which also ¹³I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended : but ¹⁴this one thing

I do ; forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14 I press toward the mark, for ¹⁵the prize of the ¹⁶high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, ¹⁷as many as be perfect, be thus minded : and, if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, ¹⁸whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, ¹⁹be followers together of me, and mark them who walk so, as ye have us for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you ²⁰even weeping, that they are ²¹the enemies of the cross of Christ :

19 ²²Whose end is destruction, ²³whose God is their belly, and ²⁴whose glory is in their shame, who ²⁵mind earthly things.)

20 For ²⁶our conversation is in heaven ; from whence also we ²⁷look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ :

21 Who shall ²⁸change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, ²⁹according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAP. IV.

Paul (1) Affectionately exhorts the Philippians to steadfastness in religion, affectionate concord, spiritual joy, meekness, earnest circumcised on the eighth day, according to God's appointment.—I am no proselyte from among the Gentiles, but a true native Israelite, descended from Jacob, by his beloved Benjamin, the son of Rachel his dearest wife.—I am of a tribe which furnished the first king to God's peculiar people, and which did not, with the other ten, revolt to Jeroboam and his idolatrous worship. I am a Jew of pure extraction, both by my father and mother, and one who used the Hebrew language in our synagogue worship. I was by education and profession, one of the strictest sect for observation of the laws of God and traditions of the elders.—I was so zealous for the ceremonial ordinances, that I furiously persecuted the Christians because their principles and professions were contrary to mine ; and so sincere and careful an observer of the moral and ceremonial laws, that neither my neighbours nor my own conscience could charge me with any flagrant or wilful transgression thereof. 7. But, how advantageous soever I once did, or any carnal Jew may still reckon these things for recommending to God's favour, or entitling to heaven, I was no sooner enlightened by his Spirit, and called by his grace, than I saw them all misguiding, empty, and insufficient ; and that my dependance thereon was inexpressibly hurtful ; and so I abandoned them all as nothing, and worse than nothing, when relied on in competition with Jesus Christ. 8. And now, after many years knowledge and experience of the way of salvation by him alone, I still, with the greatest assurance, reckon these, and all possible worldly enjoyments, and even all my religious and moral services since my conversion, to be but loss, in comparison of the superabundantly more important, fiducial, and experimental, knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord, in his person, offices, relations, fulness, and work ;—for the sake of and in comparison with whom, I have renounced and parted with all other things, and I do count them but dung, dregs, or dogs' meat, in point of justification and substantial happiness,—that I may gain the complete enjoyment of Christ and all his saving benefits : 9. And that, in the day of death and judgment, I may be found dwelling in him as my city of refuge, united to him as my spiritual Head, and comprehended in him as my representative,—and so may stand and be judged before God, not according to my own personal righteousness, but as clothed with that righteousness which does not indeed consist in faith, either as in habit or act, but is received as the free gift of God, by faith in Christ ;—even that righteousness of the purity of his human nature, his obedience of life, and atoning sufferings and death,—by which he fully satisfied the law and justice of God in our stead, and which God appoints, accepts, offers, and imputes to us, to discharge us from guilt and condemnation, and entitle us to eternal life in believing ; 10. And that, even in this world, I may have an experimental growing acquaintance with him, in the glory of his person and offices, and in the efficacious virtue of his resurrection, as the Head of his mystical body, for confirming my joyful hopes of eternal life on the ground of it,—for animating me to the most vigorous holy obedience in conformity to him,—and in preparing me for the blessedness of heaven ; and that I, in holy fellowship with him in his sufferings, by faith, may be enabled to crucify my inward corruptions, till they be utterly destroyed, and may patiently endure sufferings and death for his sake ; 11. That, by these and other means of God's appointment earnestly practised, I may, in the general resurrection of the dead, arrive at the habour of eternal rest, being raised up in glory, and admitted into the perfect and inexpressible blessedness which is prepared for the saints. 12. I have not as yet indeed received the prize for which I run ; nor am I sufficiently prepared, by holiness, for the crown of righteousness ; but I eagerly pursue my course, that, in God's time and way, I may reach that perfection, and lay hold on that eternal life, for the attainment of which Jesus Christ, by his power and grace, laid hold on me in the way to Damascus, plucked me as a brand out of the fire, and took possession of me for himself. 13, 14. Whatever your judaizing preachers or others may pretend, I freely acknowledge that I do not reckon myself to have attained perfect holiness any more than perfect happiness ;—but, fixing mine eyes upon it as the mark which I have in view, without valuing myself upon either my judaism or even my past advances in holiness, as an earnest racer, I press forward to that perfection, which is necessary to my receiving that eternal glory to which God has from heaven effectually called me, and every true believer, by Christ Jesus, and which is obtained only in and through him. 15. Let therefore as many of us have all the essential parts of the new nature formed in us, to a much greater degree than it is in weak believers, attend to this main point of counting all things but loss and dung to win Christ, to be found in him, and thoroughly to be conformed to him ; and if, in other matters of less importance, any of you should have different apprehensions, God will in due time discover the truth to you. 16. It is nevertheless necessary that we hold fast whatever truths we have already embraced and professed ; and that, in the exercise of all that knowledge, grace, and holiness, which we have attained, we should, with the greatest exactness and harmony, think and act according to the plain revelations of scripture. 17. In your whole principles and practice, study therefore with one accord to imitate me and my faithful brethren in the ministry, whom the Lord has led into the spirituality and light of the New Testament dispensation. 18, 19. And this I recommend to you with the greatest earnestness and care, to prevent your being misled by judaizing teachers ;—for they and many other professors,—as I often warned you while I was with you, and now again assure you, with deep concern and grief for the dishonour done to Christ, and hurt to the souls men,—whatever their pretences be, are, from an aversion to take up their cross and follow Christ, both doctrinally and practically inveterate enemies to the fundamental article of salvation through his righteousness alone,—and their wickedness shall issue in their everlasting destruction, and even now they have nothing but the gratification of carnal views and pleasures for their principal aim and chief good, in opposition to God and his glory : and, boasting of their shameful doctrines and success, under all their religious professions, they attend to, relish, and pursue after, nothing but mean, empty, uncertain, unsatisfying, and defiling, earthly enjoyments. 20. Never follow nor imitate such corrupt and pernicious leaders,—but make us your pattern, whose tempers and conduct are quite the reverse ;—for, being citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, our hearts and affections are set upon things above,—and carry on a constant correspondence with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost ; looking, longing, and hoping, for Christ's descent from thence at the last day to receive us to himself : 21. Who will then transform these vile and mortal bodies of ours,—which for the present are so marked with weakness, weariness, or disease, and are clogs and hindrances to the spiritual and holy exercises of our soul, and which will be quickly rotten and corrupted in the grave—into the beautiful resemblance of his own most glorious body, by the working of that almighty power, by which he is able to overcome every difficulty, and entirely subdue under himself every enemy, death not excepted.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—With great earnestness should professors guard against the seduction of false teachers, especially such as set up men's own righteousness in the room of the justifying righteousness of Jesus Christ. And ministers have need to repeat their warnings on this head. Nothing goes down more sweetly with a corrupt heart than the doctrine of justification by self-righteousness. Amiable, yet very rare, is a lively, devout, cheerful, a truly chastity in body or mind, or to holiness in heart, speech, or behaviour,—whatsoever things render a person amiable or lovely in the sight of God or men;—whatsoever is of good repute among wise, judicious, or pious men:—whatsoever is truly virtuous, brave, or laudable;—earnestly study the nature, obligations, and advantages, thereof, and carefully and constantly practise the same. 9. These, and the like branches of morality and piety, which ye, as disciples of Jesus Christ, and in part by my ministrations, have acquired the knowledge of, assented to, and approved as right, and which ye have seen exemplified in my own walk and behaviour,—seriously and diligently reduce to practice; and in this way God, who is your reconciled Father in Christ, and who gives and delights in the spiritual peace and orderly deportment and prosperity of his servants, shall take pleasure to dwell among you, manifest himself unto you, and bless and own you as a people near and dear to him. 10. And, having given you these important advices, I cannot but with inexpressible pleasure again reflect on the love and grace of our Lord Jesus, who inclined your hearts to repeat your affectionate and generous supplies to me in my imprisonment, even after ye seemed to have forgotten me; but I understand that was owing, not to your want of care, but of ability to give it, or opportunity to convey it safely. 11. I do not mention these things as if I were reduced to insupportable wants, or were uneasy under what I suffer, or as lifted up that I am now supplied by your bounty; for through the frequent changes of my condition, and the sanctified use thereof, I have, by the Spirit of God, been taught to exercise Christian contentment in every condition into which providence brings me, as being ordered for me by my heavenly Father, who never leaves me nor forsakes me; and as well calculated to promote my spiritual and eternal advantage. 12. In this manner I have been taught how to possess my soul in peace and patience when I am thrown into dejecting and humbling circumstances, and how to behave with proper humility and weakness from the world when providence smiles on me. Wherever I am, and in whatever circumstances I am, whether I have plenty or scarcity, of the good things of this life, I am thoroughly taught to exercise the graces, and perform the duties, answerably to my diversified stations; 13. And, not indeed of myself, or even by the grace which I have already received, but by the continual influence and assistance of Jesus Christ, with whom I am united, and on whom I depend, and who is ever with me, to animate, excite, and strengthen me, I find myself enabled to perform these, and every other duty to which I am called, as a Christian and apostle. 14. My contentment in pressing straits does not however in the least lessen your kindness to me, or the reasonableness of it. No. In your sympathy with me in my tribulation, and your sending me a liberal supply for my relief, ye have acted a truly Christian part, acceptable to me, and even to God himself through Jesus Christ. 15. To your honour, I must also with pleasure remark that, when I departed from your province of Macedonia to preach the gospel in other places, ye returned me temporal benefits, as the grateful reward of my spiritual instructions, which no other church did. 16. Nay, when I was in Thessalonica, a far richer place, persecuted by the Jews and neglected by the Christians, ye more than once sent me your generous supplies. 17. I do not thus gratefully acknowledge your kindness as if I desired any more of it, but to encourage you to Christian benevolence in all other cases for promoting the cause of Christ, which, as the fruit of your faith and love to him and to his people, may turn out to his honour and your own rich advantage in the world to come. 18. What ye have sent to me by Epaphroditus has sufficiently supplied my wants, and has filled my soul with abundant gratitude to God and to you for the same, for it is at once a repeated testimony of your love to me, and spiritual sacrifice of acknowledgment to God, acceptable through Jesus Christ. 19. And, though I am unable to self-denied, Christian. But contemptible are all external privileges, in comparison of Christ and his righteousness: and very unprofitable are human works in the matter of our justification. The faith and enjoyment of free justification through his imputed righteousness powerfully animates and enables to the diligent study of holiness. And, though there is no absolute perfection in this life, yet every one ought to press as near to it as possible, and carefully avoid the smallest appearance of backsliding in faith, profession, or practice,—and tenderly bear with others in lesser differences. It is a great mercy for a church to have ministers of an exemplary practice and heavenly conversation. Eternal glory will crown their and their followers' labours along with Christ. But what a burden to ministers, a plague to churches, and what enemies to Christ, are untender, sensual and worldly-minded, preachers and professors.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. In these views, my dearly beloved brethren, whose further proficiency and establishment I much desire and long for, and whom I now account the honourable seals of my ministry, and expect to be my crown of rejoicing in the last judgment, I again earnestly intreat you to abide steadfast and unshaken in your fiducial adherence to, and holy profession of, the Lord Jesus as your Head and Saviour. 2. And I beg that those noted women, Euodias, and Syntyche, would lay aside all their differences, and agree with the church and with one another in sentiment, profession, love, and affection in the Lord. 3. And I beseech you, my noted assistant in the work of the gospel, in the most prudent, tender, and affectionate manner, to advise and exhort them heartily to reunite in the common cause,—who, by their prayers, their sympathy, and their supplies, were so remarkably useful to me, and to Clement, and my other fellow preachers, who, I am persuaded, are noted favourites of God, and from eternity chosen to be heirs of salvation. 4. And let all of you true believers, in the view of the blessings which ye have in hand, or which ye hope for, always, and in all circumstances, rejoice and triumph in the Lord Jesus your Head and Saviour, and in all that he is, has, or does, for you, and even in your sufferings for his sake. 5. And—as knowing that he is at hand to observe your behaviour and take your part, and will quickly appear to execute vengeance on his Jewish, Heathen, or Antichristian, opposers, and ere long to judge the world—labour to maintain and discover a meek, patient, and gentle, temper of spirit towards all men your most furious persecutors not excepted, and a weakness of affection from the things of this life. 6. Yea, whatever difficulties, wants, or dangers, may befall you, relating to this present world, never perplex yourselves with anxious, distrustful, and distracting, cares about them, how ye shall be able to avoid, bear up under, or get through, them: but in every time, circumstance, or matter,—in the firm faith of God's promises, and with humble pleadings, and earnest importunity and perseverance, and with thanksgiving for mercies received or promised,—lay your whole case and requests before God as your reconciled Father in Christ, that, as the hearer of prayer, he may give you whatever help, comfort, deliverances, or blessings, are for your real advantage; 7. And, in so doing, the most excellent peace with God, with your own consciences, and with one another, and a transcendently sweet calmness of spirit, shall, through the merits of Christ, your union to him, and influences from him, fortify and preserve your souls from sinking or fainting under the heaviest troubles. 8. And, in fine, my brethren, beloved in the Lord,—whatever things are agreeable to the gospel of truth; or consist in, or promote, truth and sincerity, in words or actions, professions or engagements; whatever things are venerable, decent, or becoming in dress, language, or deportment, answerable to your respective stations as men or Christians,—whatsoever things are just and due to God or men in your dealings with them,—whatsoever things relate to Unto that all-sufficient and infinitely liberal Giver of all temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings, and our Father in Christ, let us jointly ascribe all possible and eternal honour, thanksgiving, blessing, and praise, on account of what he is in himself, and what he has been, is, and for ever will be, to us. 21, 22. I, and all the faithful preachers and professing believers here, chiefly they who have been lately converted to Christ in the emperor Nero's own family, hereby present to every one of you, who are truly renewed and sanctified in your hearts, our most cordial testimony of love and regard. 23. And may the free favour of our common Lord and Saviour, and all the distinguishing fruits thereof, be abundantly manifested to, and upon, each of you singly, and all of you jointly. This I heartily desire and firmly expect.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Faithful ministers greatly delight in, have an high esteem of, and ardent affection to, sincere and lively Christians; and are grateful in acknowledging their kindness. Very desirous are they that all things may turn out to their edification, and much concerned for their establishment in the faith, profession, and holiness, of the gospel; for their continual comfort, and their unity in heart, design, and labour, to help forward the work of the Lord. Very patient also towards enemies, weaned from this world, free from anxious care, fervent and hopeful in prayer, peaceful in mind, and universally lively in practice, ought Christians to be,—in the faith of Christ's being with them, and of his certain and sudden appearance to judge them. And it is a necessary duty, and an honourable attainment, to have learned in his strength to be always cordially contented with all the diversified changes of our lot, as wisely and kindly ordered by our gracious God and Father.—Happy is it to have him the Supplier of all our wants, and the Rewarder of all our friend's kindnesses to us. And highly delightful to view ourselves, and millions around us, eternal sharers of his infinite, his inexhaustible, stores of grace, laid up for us in Christ in a manner suited to the glory thereof.

TO THE

COLOSSIANS.

Colosse was a large and populous city of Phrygia, in the north-west of Lesser Asia, where (not the apostle Paul, but) Epaphras, or some other faithful preachers, had planted a church.—To establish those Christians in the faith, in opposition to the Heathen philosophers, and especially to the judaizing teachers, Paul wrote them this epistle; in which, after salutation, thanksgiving, and prayer for them, he, in a most exalted manner, represents to them Jesus Christ, in his glorious dignity and gracious fulness, as infinitely preferable to all philosophical notions and Jewish ceremonies; chap. i. ii.; and exhorts them to improve their union to, and fellowship with, him in holy duties, personal and relative; iii. iv.

CHAP. I.

After saluting the Colossians; 1, 2. Paul (1) Blesses God for their faith, love, and hope, of which Epaphras had given him an account; 3—8. (2) Prays for their fruitfulness, and increase in holiness and patience; 9—13. (3) Magnificently represents Christ and his grace, in order to engage their adherence to him; 14—23. (4) Delineates his own character as the apostle of the Gentiles; 24—29.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1, 2. I, Paul, an inspired preacher, immediately called by Jesus Christ to be an eye-witness of his resurrection and ascension, and to plant churches among the Gentiles, according to the free purpose, commandment, and pleasure, of God the Father,—along with Timothy, my faithful brother in the work of the gospel,—to all the holy and faithful Christians in Colosse, spiritually united to Jesus Christ, and renewed and sanctified by virtue derived from him,—wish the most, abundant manifestation and application of divine favour, and all the happy and peaceful fruits thereof, from God our common Father, the original fountain of all blessings, and from Jesus Christ as the mediatorial purchaser and dispenser of them: 3, 4. To whom we have, in our daily prayers, offered up the most affectionate and hearty thanksgivings, ever since we heard of your cordial acceptance of, and trusting in, Christ alone for salvation, and of your brotherly affection to all that profess his holy name and bear his holy image. 5, 6. Our prayers and praises, as well as your faith and love to Christ and his people, are excited by the consideration of that perfect blessedness which ye justly hope for through him, and which is laid up and hid with him in God, as a rich treasure reserved and secured by him, as your Father, for you,—and which he has held forth, and offered to you in the preaching of the true and faithful gospel,—which was, in the kind providence of God, carried over and published to you without your seeking after it, as well as to both Jews and Gentiles, in most places of the Roman empire; and by the attending power of the Holy Ghost, has effectually converted many to Christ, and made them to bring forth the fruits of faith, love, and holy obedience,—as it has done among you ever since ye experienced a real work of grace on your hearts, and were led into the spiritual knowledge and sincere faith of its doctrines of divine grace. 7. According as ye were taught them by

dear fellow servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ ;

8 Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding ;

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God ;

11 Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness ;

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light :

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son :

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins :

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature :

16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers : all things were created by him, and for him :

17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is the head of the body, the church : who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead ; that in all things he might have the preeminence.

19 For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell ;

20 And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself ; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

21 And you, that were some time alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled,

22 In the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight :

23 If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven ; whereof I Paul am made a minister :

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church ;

25 Whereof I am made a minister according to the dispensation of God,

Epaphras, your worthy minister, and our dear brother and faithful fellow labourer in the service of Christ and his church,—particularly in promoting your conversion to, and sanctification in and by Christ ; 8. And who, in his great affection to you, has represented to us your hearty and spiritual love to Christ and to all his saints, which the Holy Ghost has wrought in you : and drawn out in a spiritual manner, and on spiritual accounts, by means of the gospel. 9. Reflecting upon which report, we ever since have been led to a peculiar concern for you in all our solemn addresses to God ; and to beg that ye may be more and more abundantly filled with the knowledge of his mind and will, relating to the way of salvation by Jesus Christ, and to your comfort and duty, as interested therein,—and may exceedingly abound in a judicious, experimental, and practical, acquaintance with his manifold wisdom, and in all spiritual discernment of spiritual things, in their truth, excellence, and importance, and the use ye ought to make of them : 10. That, in the whole of your conversation before God or men, ye may act up to the dignity of your relation to, and profession of, him, and to the rich benefits which we have received and hope for from him,—and every way agreeable to his holy nature and will, bringing forth all the fruits of righteousness to his glory, and daily increasing in a transforming acquaintance and fellowship with him, as your heavenly Father and Friend ; 11. Strengthened with every needful and almighty assistance of his Spirit for performing every duty and service, and for sustaining every trial in a sweet, calm, and patient manner, without either murmuring against God or raging against men ;—persevering in them with a noble constancy and fortitude of spirit in submission to the will of God ; and even triumphing in what he has done, does, or will do, to support, strengthen, comfort, and glorify you. 12. Yea, that instead of complaining under trouble, you may heartily join with us in the most grateful thanksgivings to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of us in him,—who, by graciously changing and renewing our nature, and endowing us with heavenly desires and affections, has prepared us for the full possession of that glorious inheritance which he had mercifully appointed, provided, and promised, to us, and to all other sanctified persons, as his children ; and in the light, glory, and joy, of which we shall, in his immediate presence, be forever perfectly filled with knowledge, holiness, and happiness ; 13. Who also, by his almighty power and grace, has plucked out and rescued us that believe Jews or Gentiles, from the tyranny and dominion of sin and Satan ; and, by changing our state, nature, and temper, has brought us into his kingdom of grace, in order to advance us into his kingdom of glory, under and through his infinitely beloved Son ; 14. In whom, through his righteousness, fulfilled in our stead, and imputed and applied to our persons, we have a complete discharge from the guilt of sin and curse of the law ; and, in consequence thereof, a deliverance from the power of sin, Satan, and the wrath of God ; and have a full title to, and the anticipating possession of, all spiritual and eternal blessings. 15. For the dignity of his person added an infinite value to his sacrifice, he being the express image of his Father's person ; one with him in essence, nature, and perfections ;—and being, in his mediatorial office, incarnation, qualifications, and performances, the representative image of the Godhead, in which all its spiritual excellencies are most clearly, amiably, and transformingly, displayed,—and having existed from eternity, as the essential Son of God, begotten of the Father before any creature was formed ; and being, along with him, the former of all things, and accordingly the original Lord and first-born Heir thereof. 16. For by him, together with his Father and blessed Spirit, as the efficient cause ; and in order to their subserviency to his mediatorial kingdom, and for his glory, as their last end, were all creatures of every rank and order, material or spiritual, formed out of nothing : 17. Which undeniably demonstrates that he had an existence prior to all creatures, and has an infinite dignity above them ;—and all things do equally subsist, stand, or continue, in him, who is omnipresent, all-powerful, and active, in his providential influences over them, by which they are continually preserved in being, order, and proper action, under him, as Head over all things to his church ; 18. In which capacity, he is not only her political Head of direction and government, but her Head of vital influence, to communicate all spiritual life, nourishment, growth, and activity, to all and every one of his members ;—the original spring, not only of the spiritual life of their souls, but of the glorious resurrection of their bodies to eternal life ; being the first that rose from the dead to an immortal life, and that by his own power, as the pledge, pattern, quickening cause, and first-fruits, of his people's resurrection,—that in all things he might be dignified and exalted by God, and esteemed by the church, even in his mediatorial capacity, above all saints, angels, and every other creature. 19. For, in effecting our salvation, JESUS CHRIST, in his own infinitely wise, gracious, and holy, good pleasure, in honour to his Son, and love to his people, has ordained and appointed that, answerably to the greatness of Christ's divine person and mediatorial office, all fulness of gifts and graces, merit and right, light and power, should permanently abide in him to the utmost perfection, not only for himself, but to be communicated to the members of his mystical body, that out of his fulness we may receive and grace for grace. 20. And, having, through that redemption which was purchased by his righteousness, which was finished in his painful, shameful, and accursed death on the cross, removed the enmity, and made up the breach between him and his elect, it has pleased the Father by him, as their Head and Mediator, to bring them all into a state of favour and friendship with himself, that the demands of his broken law and offended justice being fully answered by him in their stead, he might honourably act towards them in a way of gracious kindness and friendship, whether they be Jews or Gentiles, believers on earth, or glorified saints in heaven. 21, 22. In consequence of this, you, who, in the days of your Heathenism and unregeneracy, were estranged from the life of God, inwardly filled with enmity, and living in constant rebellion against him and his holy law, has he now, upon your believing, brought into a state of peace and friendship with himself, through the incarnation, obedience, and satisfactory sufferings, of Christ, that he might present you now, as his mystical members in his church, and hereafter in the last judgment, as persons made righteous in law, and thoroughly sanctified in nature and life. 23. Which I am satisfied will be the happy issue with respect to you, since ye stedfastly persevere in the faith, profession, and obedience, of the truth, as persons who are built upon, and established in, him as your spiritual foundation, and so maintain your ground against all the artful and violent attempts of Satan and his agents to shake or carry you away from Christ, the object of your hope, and from your hope in him, as set before you in the gospel, which ye have attentively heard, and cordially received, when promiscuously preached to both Jews and Gentiles,—and of which God, in his infinite mercy, has appointed me a stated and inspired preacher. 24. And, in the view of your steadfastness, I am so far from repining at the severe persecutions and present imprisonments which have befallen me on account of my preaching the gospel to Gentile sinners, that I greatly rejoice and glory in all these outward tribulations, which I, who was once a persecutor, do or may endure, according to the appointment of Christ, and for his glory, and for the confirmation, edification, and comfort, of his mystical body the church, 25. Of which church God, by his immediate authority, has constituted me an apostolic minister, according to that infinitely

CHAP. II.

(1) Paul expresses his love to, and joy in, the Colossian believers, whom he had never seen, and encourages them who had so beautifully begun to persevere walking in Christ ; 1—7. (2) Cautions them against the errors of Heathen philosophy, Jewish traditions, and observance of Mosaic rites, since in Christ they had such fulness as could not be hoped for elsewhere ; 8—17 : and against worshipping of angels, as such worship was in effect renouncing Christ their Head ; 18, 19 : and against legal ordinances and human institutions, as they could not advantage their souls ; 20—23.

FOR I would that ye knew what 'great *conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh :

2 'That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and gracious order which he has fixed for dispensing the gospel, which is committed to me as a sacred trust, for the fulfilment of the ancient promises of the conversion, edification, and salvation, of you Gentiles : 26. Which gospel is indeed a mystery, as it contains the unsearchable riches of Christ ; and as it was for many ages concealed in its brightest glories, not only from the Gentile nations, but even in a great measure from the Jews, but which is now revealed, as clearly as the nature of the things permits, to his holy prophets and apostles, and by them to all true believers, who, by profession, obligation, and regenerating grace, are his saints ; 27. To whom, of his own good pleasure, according to his eternal purpose and ancient predictions, God would now, under the New Testament, make a plain discovery of the exceeding riches of the glory, and incomprehensible excellency of the gospel tidings, of salvation among you Gentiles ;—the all-comprehending sum of which is Christ, in his person, offices, relations, fulness, and work ; who also is preached among you, and dwelling in your hearts by faith as the foundation, author, and object, of all your hopes of eternal life. 28. And, it is this Christ, in his nature, person, and mediation, and in the believing, affectionate, obedient, regards due to him, whom we faithful preachers of the gospel make the grand subject of our ministrations, wisely and prudently admonishing all sorts of persons, Jews or Gentiles, to consider their sinful and miserable state by nature, and to beware of rejecting him ;—and instructing them, as God enables us, in the knowledge of the manifold wisdom of God, as displayed through him in the gospel revelation, to render them truly wise unto salvation,—that we may be honoured instruments of presenting them to God as true and uncorrupted believers, renewed in all the faculties of their soul, and members of their body, and remarkably fruitful in the several graces of the Spirit,—who are perfect already in Christ their Head ; and to be, through him, perfected in all knowledge and grace, holiness and happiness. 29. For this end, and in this work, as one excited and assisted by the remarkable influences of the almighty power of God, I labour to my utmost in prayer and preaching, and every other means, amidst all difficulties, and in the face of all opposition.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Ministers ought never to lose sight of their mission from Christ ; and Christians ought never to lose sight of the divine authority of the scriptures. Abundant is the grace, peace, and other blessings, which Christ and his Father give, and which we ought therefore to wish to all his people. It is a great mercy to hear the gospel, to have its power manifested in our hearts, its glorious fruits appearing in our lives, and to hear of the like in others. And very thankful should we be that the gospel of our salvation, which was so long concealed under obscure figures and in dark promises, and almost confined to the Jews, is now plainly manifested to both Jews and Gentiles. Happy is it to experience its power in enlightening our mind, renewing our will, delivering us from the slavery of Satan, and translating us into the kingdom of Christ, that he may dwell in us as the hope of glory !—With much assurance may prayers be made for the increase of saints in light and grace, their strengthenings unto all patience and comfort under present trials, and unto all fruitful and holy walking with God and meekness for their heavenly inheritance. Infinite are the glories of our Redeemer, as the essential, necessary, and eternal, Son of God,—the Creator, Preserver, and Governor, of all things,—the Head of the church,—the Storehouse of all new covenant blessings,—the reconciling Mediator between God and men ; and abundant the peace, pardon, preservation, sanctification, and everlasting glory, which his people receive through and from him. Great is the honour to be made wise, faithful, diligent, and successful, preachers of Christ. No sufferings nor labour must be reckoned too hard for his sake, or for the edification, comfort, and eternal salvation, of souls.

opportunity of attending on, or being profited by, my ministrations. 2. That their hearts may be abundantly filled with divine consolation, as believers who are closely and firmly cemented together in the most cordial affection to Christ and to one another, and are thoroughly united in their endeavours for attaining a distinct, clear, and complete, acquaintance with the gospel plan of salvation, in all its riches of spiritual and eternal blessings ; unto the entire satisfaction of their souls, and their making an honourable, steady, and public, profession of those deep things of it, which were from all eternity designed and prepared in the gracious counsels of God the Father, and are purchased, revealed, and bestowed, by our Lord Jesus Christ, as the great Mediator between God and man ; 3. In which mystery of the gospel, and especially in which Christ, are secretly, safely, and incomprehensibly, laid up and contained all the inexhaustible treasures of wisdom and knowledge, for managing all the affairs of providence and grace, and for manifesting the whole will of God as to our salvation, and seasonably supplying our wants, enlightening our minds, and safely directing our steps to the heavenly glory. 4. And I would lead you to consider this inexhaustible fulness of wisdom and knowledge, laid up for you in Christ and the gospel, in order to prevent your being seduced from him and his truths by pretenders to Heathen philosophy and Jewish learning. 5. For though in bodily presence I am, and always have been, absent from you, yet my heart is with you, delightfully reflecting on what I have heard of your faith, love, and hope ; and, through the suggestions of God's Spirit, I have a view of your rich attainments and diversified trials ; and am affected as if I were present among you, rejoicing in your orderly behaviour and regular discipline, and in your firm, solid, and steady, adherence of faith to the person, mediation, and doctrines, of Christ, notwithstanding all the artifices which have been used to corrupt your minds and draw you off from him. 6. As therefore ye have, by faith, received the Lord Jesus Christ in his person and offices, as your Prophet, to instruct you ;—your Priest, to make atonement and intercede for you ;—and your King, to defend, rule, and govern, you ;—be careful, by virtue of union to and gracious influence from him, to cleave to him with full purpose of heart, and to walk in a daily exercise of faith on him, and in a constant observation of all his ordinances and commandments, answerably to your profession of and relation to him, 7. As trees of righteousness, being rooted in and fastening on him, to keep you fixed and immovable, and drawing nourishment from him for your spiritual growth ;—and as a spiritual house, being built upon him, and closely united to him, as the only foundation of your faith and hope, security, and salvation ;—that ye may be confirmed in the doctrine and grace of faith in him, as ye have heard by the ministry of Epaphras ; and may exceedingly abound in the daily increase of knowledge, faith, and every other grace, with enlarged thankfulness and praise to the author and finisher of all that concerns you. 8. Take heed, lest seducers make a prey of you, and draw you off from Christ and his pure gospel, and rob you of its privileges and blessings, through the subtleties and corruptions of Heathen philosophy, Jewish traditions, or the observance of Mosaic ceremonies ; none of which things are, according to the mind and will of Christ, revealed in the gospel, nor do any of them, as now urged and observed, lead your soul to him only for salvation, who alone hath an all-sufficiency for it in himself. 9. For all the perfections of the Godhead, in their utmost fulness, for ever and substantially abide and dwell in his incarnate person, or temple of his manhood, in a personal and infinitely more glorious manner than ever JEHOVAH dwelt in the Jewish tabernacle or temple. 10. And ye, who have received him by faith, and are united to him as members of his mystical body, have all your defects made up, and all your securities or blessings completed in him as your Head, made of God to you wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption ; who, answerably to the infinite dignity of his divine person, is, in his office capacity, exalted to be the sovereign Ruler of all ranks of angels or men, good or bad. 11. In him therefore ye are so complete as to have no need of ceremonial circumcision, as Judaizing teachers pretend, being spiritually circumcised by the Holy Ghost, who hath renewed your heart, and cu if your whole system of inward corruption, removing the guilt, power, and defilement, of it, not by any human influences, but merely by the cleansing and sanctifying operation of Jesus Christ:

12. And in that baptism, which Christ hath instituted in the room of circumcision, ye have received the sign of, and obligation to, that holiness which is, or ought to be, in you as God's covenant people; and have had represented, sealed, and applied to you a certain and continued death to sin and a quickening and resurrection to a life of holiness, in conformity to, and by virtue derived from, his death and resurrection, through that faith which has been wrought in your hearts by the same almighty influence by which God raised up Christ from the dead, and will, by virtue of his resurrection, at last raise you up to eternal life. 13. And you—who, in your sinful unregenerate state, were dead in law, laying under a just sentence of condemnation—and dead to God and every thing spiritually good, lying under the power and filth of your inward corruptions, which circumcision anciently signified—hath God now raised up to a new life of grace and holiness, in order to a heavenly life of glory and blessedness together with Christ as your Pattern and Head of influence,—having, on account of his righteousness imputed, freely pardoned to each of you all your iniquities, original and actual, lesser or greater, and given you a full and irrevocable title to eternal life;

14. Blotting out, as it were, all our transgressions by the blood of his Son, and thereby annulling that federal or ceremonial obligation to punishment on account of them, which testified that we were transgressors, and which separated the Gentiles from the church and privileges of the Jews, and was the cause of much enmity between them,—and by his death entirely removing and utterly destroying it, that it might never be produced in judgment against us.

15. And having, by his full satisfaction to law and justice, disarmed Satan and all his subordinate ranks of apostate angels of their power, which arises from the curse of the law, he exposed them to open contempt in the view of all the holy angels, and triumphed over them as his conquered foes.

16. Since therefore believing Gentiles as well as Jews are complete in Christ, and the handwriting of ordinances, contrary to both, is cancelled, let none pretend that the non-observance of ceremonial ordinances, relating to meats and drinks, or to their annual or monthly festivals, or even the Jewish seventh day sabbath, can hinder your spiritual or eternal happiness; or, if they do, regard them not: 17. For the whole of these observances, required by the ceremonial law, were but merely shadows and figures of the good things which were to come under the gospel; but the truth, reality, or substance, represented by them, is brought in by Christ, and to be found in him.

18. And since he, in whom ye are complete, is the Head of all principality and power, let no one, whether Jewish zealot or Gentile philosopher, deprive you of your spiritual comfort or eternal glory, or lead you out of the way to it, seducing you to adopt human inventions in the worship of God, or to worship angels good or bad as mediators between God and men,—through the pride of their corrupt hearts, pretending uncommon insight into the things of God, and attempting to pry into what he never revealed;

19. Adopting these corruptions of worship, to the great dishonour of Jesus Christ, and rejecting, instead of laying hold on, adhering to, and by faith trusting in, him alone, as the only and all-sufficient Mediator and Advocate, to recommend them and their prayers to the acceptance of God,—and joining creatures in honour with him, who is the Head of angels, good or bad, and of every other creature, and who is the Representative, and the vital as well as governing Head of his church, from whom all her true members, deriving spiritual nourishment, are united to him, and to one another, by his Spirit, and by faith, love, and religious ordinances,—and do, by virtue derived from God, increase in light and grace, comfort, holiness, and strength, and in good works, according to his will, and for his glory. 20—23. If then, according to the meaning of your baptism, ye, by virtue of union with Christ, and by communion with him in his death, are fully discharged from the moral law as a covenant, and from the obligations of the ceremonial law, why, as if ye were merely carnal men, and lived under a carnal dispensation, do ye, from regard to human imposition, submit yourselves to any of the legal ordinances, which prohibit the touching or eating of meats, once ceremonially unclean, but now allowed for men's perishing provision, as things that cannot defile their soul?—These human injunctions, relative to the service of God or mortification of our body, beyond what he has prescribed, have nothing worthy in themselves, or honourable to him, but are a mere shadow of wisdom or humility, and are really calculated to cultivate and please the false taste of men of corrupt minds.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—It is God's will, and his ministers care, that the saints be united, comforted, and daily increase, in knowledge, faith, and holy order; and that, having received Jesus Christ in all his offices as an all-supplying fountain, they should walk in him with the most steady faith, love, holy obedience, and cordial thanksgiving. Christians have need to beware of carnal wisdom and plausible errors. And it is absurd to forsake Christ or his gospel for any thing else, when he has such fulness of Godhead and of new covenant blessings, and renders us complete in himself. Thrice happy are they who, being quickened by his Spirit, renewed in their hearts, delivered from the broken law, reconciled to God, and made triumphant over devils, derive all necessary and nourishing influences from him as their Representative, vital Head, and gracious Governor. Rich is the mercy that, through his incarnation, obedience, and death, we are delivered from sin, from curses, from devils, from death and hell, and from all the dark and burdensome rites of the Jewish dispensation. And it is absurd for such as the Lord has thus freed to retain those rites, or add others, in the worship of God, as if such things could render us acceptable in his sight.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. If, according to your profession, ye be indeed risen from under the law, and the guilt and power of sin, to a life of righteousness and holiness,—together with, in conformity to, and by the quickening virtue of, our risen Redeemer, applied by faith,—let your hearts, in their temper and exercises, and in all your meditations, views, inquiries, and pursuits, by prayer, and every other ordinance of God, aspire after realizing, clear, and enlarged, experiences and assurances of the durable, substantial, and satisfying, things of the heavenly state, where he, your ascended Head, is exalted in all his majesty and authority, dignity, and glory, rest and safety, to make intercession and prepare a place for you. 2. Let all your affections of desire and hope, love and delight, be supremely fixed upon the excellent things which belong to, and are transacted in, that heavenly state, and not upon the empty, uncertain, perishing, and defiling, pleasures and enjoyments, or even the carnal ordinances, of this world. 3. And this is highly proper, since, by profession and obligation, and many of you by actual communion with Christ in his death, are really dead in your hearts and affections to the Mosaic law, and are crucified with him to sin, Satan, and the world;—and all the pleasures and enjoyments of your spiritual life are maintained and promoted in secret and mysterious transactions, and fellowship between God and your souls, by virtue of Christ, who is one with him, till it be perfected in that eternal life which lies so much out of sight in this life, but is nevertheless secured and treasured up with Christ, in the secret purposes and immediate presence of God, for you. 4. And when Christ, who is the Purchaser, Author, Sustainer, Finisher, Scope, and End, of our spiritual life, and lives in us, shall appear in all his glory to judge the world, ye, who are quickened by his Spirit, shall be glorified together with, and in conformity to, him in soul and body. 5. In the prospect therefore of that blessed day, and in reflection on the spiritual purity and sublime happiness which ye shall then enjoy, as men dead to sin, and risen with Christ, labour to have all your carnal and sinful dispositions, which are like members to the body

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. And, as servants ought to obey their masters in all lawful things, so ye Christian masters ought to deal justly and equitably with them, allowing them proper work, provision, and wages, and giving them proper reproofs or encouragements in their work, knowing that ye yourselves serve the Lord Jesus Christ, and must give an account of your treatment of servants, as well as of every part of your conduct, to him who now inspects, and will hereafter judge and reward, you. 2. But, to return to general exhortations, let all of you daily, at set seasons, in secret, private, or public, prayer to God, in the name of Christ, plead for his blessing, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. Watch for special calls of providence, and needful assistances of spiritual influence, to make you ever ready, fervent, and persevering, in prayer; and watch against all hindrances of it, or deadness or wandering in it. And let all your supplications for mercies be joined with grateful praises and cheerful thanksgivings for what ye have received or expect. 3. And, in all your addresses to God, earnestly plead with him that I, and my fellow-labourers in the ministry, may be favoured with extensive opportunities and abilities to preach the gospel in a right manner, and with remarkable success, and to lay open the deep things, and exhibit and offer the unsearchable riches, of Christ, (for doing of which I am now a prisoner in bonds). 4. That, as far as providence shall grant me opportunities, I may be eminently assisted in declaring the whole counsel of God with a proper frame of spirit, and in a duly free, extensive, and plain, manner. 5. And let the whole of your conversation toward your unbelieving neighbours be managed with such Christian skill, circumspection, and prudence, that ye may not be defiled by them, or encourage them in sin; but may, by your example, win them to Christ. In this manner improve and extend every opportunity of doing your proper duty, and doing good to them. And let your speech be always such as proceeds from the grace of God in your heart, and as may recommend his free favour to others, and promote in them a gracious temper, that thereby ye may know how to give a reason of your hope with all modesty, meekness, and wisdom; and how to answer scrupulous doubts, serious inquiries, and captious cavillings, relative to any point of Christian faith, duty, or experience, which may be proposed to you. 7. And as to my outward circumstances and inward comforts, Tychicus, my beloved fellow Christian and faithful minister of Christ, who brings you this letter, will fully inform you. 8. And, being desirous to know how matters in religion stand with you, I have ordered him to make a thorough inquiry, and inform me of them—while he comforts you by his good counsels, and his informations of God's kindness to me. 9. He, and Onesimus your countryman, who is now a noted convert to Christ, and comes along with him, will inform you fully of every thing important about this place. 10, 11. Aristarchus the Macedonian, who endangered his life for my sake, and is now my fellow prisoner; and John Mark, nephew to Barnabas, my dear old colleague in apostolic labours, (whom, if he come to you, I hope ye will respectfully receive, according to the recommendations he hath received;—) and Joshua Justus;—the only three Jewish preachers who have here assisted me in propa-

10^o Aristarchus, my fellow prisoner, saluteth you; and Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, (touching whom ye received commandment: if he come unto you, ^p receive him);

11 And Jesus, who is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my^q fellow workers unto the kingdom of God, who have been a comfort unto me.

12^r Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, ^s always ‘labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand ^t perfect and [†] complete in all the will of God.

13^u For I bear him record that he hath a great zeal for you, and them that are in ^v Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis.

14^v Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you.

15 Salute the brethren who are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and ^w the church which is in his house.

16 And, when this epistle is read amongst you, ^a cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans; and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—With great equity, mildness, and mercy, ought masters to treat their servants, in the view of God's authority over them, and of their accounting to him. Great is the necessity of fervent and persevering prayer for fellow Christians, and especially for ministers—that they may preach the gospel with proper wisdom, courage, and success. And much wisdom and grace are necessary to make Christians improve their time and order their speech to the honour of Jesus Christ and the edification of their neighbours! Much mutual esteem of one another, and fervent wrestlings for the church; great sympathy towards the distressed; courtesy to all men, especially the saints; and studious care to fulfil their ministry in the Lord; ought to prevail in every minister of Christ.—And earnest care to vie with one another in every grace and duty, and to edify one another in love, and even to render their pastors duly diligent and faithful, ought to take place among all Christian professors.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE

THESSALONIANS.

Thessalonica was the chief city of Macedonia, rebuilt by Philip the father of Alexander the Great, and so named to commemorate his victory over the Thessalians. Here Paul planted a Christian church, consisting partly of Jews and partly of Gentiles; but was quickly driven from them by the fury of the Jews; Acts xvii. 1—10: and his attempt to return to them seems to have been hindered by the same cause; ii. 18. To shew his great affection for and care of them, and to prevent their being seduced by false teachers, or discouraged by persecution, he wrote them this epistle:—in which he affectionately thanks God for his mercy manifested in their conversion; chap. i.; represents the engaging example he had set before them, and the tender care he had of them; his intention to send Timothy to comfort them, and his praying for their welfare; ii. iii.: and, in view of the approaching judgment of the world, admonishes them to make proper preparation in all the branches of holiness; iv. v.

PAUL^a, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the^b Thessalonians, which is in God the Father, and in the Lord Jesus Christ: ^dGrace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 ^eWe give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

6 And ye ^lbecame followers of us, and of the Lord; ^mhaving received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost:

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

8 For from you ⁿsounded out the word of the Lord, ^pnot only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 12. Paul, together with Silas and Timothy his assistants in preaching the gospel—to you Christians at Thessalonica, who believe in God as the only true God, and in Jesus Christ, as the only true Messiah—wish all the rich manifestations and fruits of divine favour, and the most abundant peace and prosperity, temporal, and especially spiritual and eternal, from these divine persons, according to their different stations in the work of our redemption. 2. And, in our stated and occasional addresses to God, we daily, and in the most express manner, offer up our most solemn thanksgivings to God for his mercy bestowed upon you, and our most fervent supplications that ye would perfect his work of grace which he has begun in you; 3. Being animated hereunto by the affecting and constant remembrance which we have of that lively and operative faith, manifesting itself in all holy obedience, and of that ardent love to Jesus Christ, his oracles, ordinances, and people, and the manifold exertions thereof towards us and towards one another, and of that patient continuance in well-doing under all your tribulations, and waiting for God to crown your lively hopes of eternal life through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ with full enjoyment,—which he has wrought in you, and which, as his children, by regenerating and adopting grace, ye exercise with all uprightness and sincerity as in his sight: 4. By which manifest fruits of holiness ye and we justly conclude that ye have been graciously chosen of God to eternal salvation. 5. For the gospel, preached by me and my assistants, did not merely reach your ears; but, while it was attested by miracles, the almighty influence of the Holy Ghost brought it home to your hearts, and produced in your souls an unshaken assurance of the truth and importance of it, and of your personal interest in the blessings thereby conveyed.—God thus owning our plain, patient, and faithful, preaching of the gospel among you, in order to promote your eternal salvation: 6. And, by this powerful influence of the gospel on your hearts, ye immediately became imitators of us preachers, and of Christ our glorious Master, in faith, obedience, and patience,—having, amidst all your severe persecutions, firmly believed the truths of the gospel, and thereby received such inward consolations of the Holy Ghost as sweetly supported you under your sufferings; 7. So that ye became eminent, encouraging, and exemplary, patterns of faith, patience, and holiness, to all those who in Greece were afterwards turned to the Lord. 8. For the gospel of Jesus Christ, having had such glorious success among you, was thenceforward published far and near with great reputation and advantage;—the fame of your faith in God through Jesus Christ, manifested by remarkable fruits of holiness, having so spread abroad that we have no occasion to speak of it; 9. For wherever we travel we meet with persons who are disposed, with wonder and joy, to mention to us what happy effects our ministrations had among you; with what sincerity ye embraced the gospel which we preached; and how, by its powerful influence, ye voluntarily and quickly renounced your Heathen idols, and with indignation turned from them, to believe in, adore, and obey, that God, who alone has all life, glory, and blessedness, in himself, and is the fountain of all created life, natural, temporal, spiritual, or eternal. 10. And to wait with faith, preparation, patience, desire, and hope, under all your present sufferings, for the glorious appearance of his eternal Son, whom he hath raised from the dead to judge the world,—even Jesus Christ, who by his obedience and suffering purchased, and his almighty power effects, our deliverance from his dreadful wrath, which will be for ever coming, like a perpetual torrent of flaming vengeance, upon the wicked.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Thrice happy is it when the gospel is effectually applied to the hearers' hearts; and when they, by their conversion from idols to God, and an holy imitation of Christ and his servants in love, patience, and purity, prove their eternal election to life! They are a credit to their religion who receive the gospel with full assurance of its divine truth, excellence, and importance, and with joy in the Holy Ghost, amidst manifold tribulations. With great pleasure should faithful ministers assist one another, and reflect on the success of their labours, regard their spiritual children, pray for them, and labour to promote their edification. And nothing is more endearing, comforting, or animating to holiness, than saving views of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and his everlasting salvation.

To encourage their progress in faith and holiness, Paul (1) Reminds them of the manner of his preaching and behaviour among them; 1—12: and of their ready receiving the gospel to the effectual salvation of their souls, notwithstanding the malicious persecution of the Jews or others; 13—16. (2) Assures them of his joy on their account, and his desire to see them again; 17—20.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. And yourselves, my dear Christian brethren, know that, as I and my two fellow preachers did not entertain you with unprofitable subjects, or a mere sound of words in our ministrations, so they were not without that good fruit which the promise of God had given us ground to expect. 2. And in hopes of this, even after we had been treated with the utmost cruelty and contempt at Philippi, we, in an humble dependance on our God, publicly preached the gospel among you with an holy resolution and undaunted courage, and with great zeal and fervour of spirit, striving for your conversion, and against the furious opposition of the unbelieving Jews: 3. For our exhortations to duty, and comforting encouragements under sufferings, did not consist of erroneous doctrines leading to licentiousness, but of the pure gospel of Christ, productive of holiness in heart and life; nor did we minister to you in hypocritical pretences of piety and zeal, or of love to you, in order to promote our own selfish ends, but in the sincerity of our hearts, for the glory of God and your real welfare. 4. There was no falsehood or impurity in the matter, or insincerity or selfishness in the manner, of our preaching; but as God had chosen, authorized, and furnished us for, and intrusted us with, the preaching of the gospel, so we endeavoured to preach it exactly as we received it from him—not in a manner suited to the corrupt taste, notions, and fancies of men, but with such purity and sincerity as God the searcher of hearts could not but approve of. 5. We can appeal to you, and even to God himself, that we never studied by fawning or complimentary speeches, to ingratiate ourselves with any of you; nor did we ever encourage any to expect salvation in their sins or by their own righteousness or strength; nor did we ever make use of religion as a pretence to cover some secret design of making advantage of you; 6. Nor were we ever ambitious of being honoured by men, or ever contrived, intended or endeavoured, to be admired, caressed, or applauded by any among whom we ministered; nor (though as messengers of Christ we might have justly claimed it) did we ever require a maintenance from you: 7. But, on the contrary, we behaved among you with such humility, modesty, meekness, and self-denial, as plainly marked the most tender and affectionate concern to do every thing possible for your spiritual benefit, help, comfort, and eternal salvation; 8. In so much that we not only took great pleasure in preaching to you the gospel of Christ in a suitableness to your necessities, but were ready to testify our affection to you in the most tender compassion, exhausting our strength and spirits, and hazarding or even laying down our lives to promote your spiritual and eternal welfare. 9. In proof of which, ye cannot but remember that, while we were among you, we not only spent our strength in our ministerial labours, but even worked early and late at our secular callings for our livelihood:—that, as an evidence it was how holily and justly and unblameable we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children, 12 That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing; because, when ye received the word of God, which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews:

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men:

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time, in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you (even I Paul) once and again; but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

20 For ye are our glory and joy.

Ch. 3. 10. Rom. 1. 13. & 15. 22. As Acts 23. 12. or 14. 12. Ezek. 16. 12. & 23. 42. 2 Cor. 1. 14. Phil. 2. 16. & 4. 1. Or glorying.

not your wealth, but your spiritual and eternal salvation, we were earnestly desirous of—we might preach the gospel to you without putting you to any expense. 10. We can appeal to your consciences, and even to the all-seeing and heart-searching God, that we exercised ourselves, in a conscientious discharge of all the duties of religion towards God, and of righteousness towards men; and always in such a sober, humble, benevolent, and inoffensive, manner as might best recommend the good ways of the Lord among you, who were brought to the faith of Christ by our ministrations. 11, 12. And, while we set you a good example in our behaviour, ye cannot but know how we counselled, entreated, excited, and encouraged, every one of you to practise the like Christian duties in your respective stations; and did all that we could to comfort you under your tribulations; and, with the greatest earnestness and affection, in the name and authority of Jesus Christ, solemnly charged you to live answerably to the holy nature and will, and to the special favours, of God as your God, who has effectually called you by the gospel to partake of all the blessings and honours of his kingdom of grace in this world, and of his kingdom of glory in that which is to come: 13. In reflection upon which, we are exceedingly thankful to God, and daily praise his blessed name, that, when we were sent by him to preach the gospel to you, your hearts were opened to attend to it and embrace it with reverence, faith, love, and obedience, not as an human scheme, or on the ground of human authority, but as indeed a revelation from God, and upon the ground of his authority, as a doctrine of which none but God himself is the Contriver and Author, and which, through his blessing, worketh so powerfully in changing the sentiments, inclinations, and views, of you who believed it. 14. As a proof of which effectual operation in you, ye had no sooner embraced it in faith and love, than ye became imitators of us and of the believers in Judea; courageously, calmly, patiently, and even cheerfully, submitting to the persecutions of your countrymen for the sake of Christ, even as they did to those of their Jewish brethren, 15. Who, in the madness of their rage, murdered the Lord of glory, and only Saviour of mankind, as their fathers did the ancient prophets; and who have all along, and every where, persecuted us ministers of Christ; acting in direct opposition to the merciful nature and holy law and gospel of God, and even to the common welfare of men; 16. Doing what in them lies to hinder our preaching the gospel to you Gentiles for your conversion and salvation; and thus, through their obstinate prejudices and furious opposition to Christ and his servants and cause, filling up the measure of their own and their fathers' iniquities, till the righteous vengeance of God, which has already begun against them, dreadfully complete their ruin, and without remedy destroy their church and state for many ages, till the fulness of the Gentiles' conversion to Christ occasion their restoration. 17, 18. Being by their outrageous persecution driven from you exceedingly against our will, when in your tribulation and danger ye had much need of our further counsel, admonitions, cautions, and encouragements, my brethren, and especially myself have been extremely desirous, and have once and again attempted to pay you a visit; but Satan, that adversary of Christ and his ministers, and of your salvation, has hitherto, by his instruments, laid such entanglements and obstacles in our way as rendered it improper. 19, 20. We are nevertheless still as mindful of you as ever, and as affectionately desirous to see you, if the Lord permit; for what

WHEREFORE, ^awhen we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone :

2 And sent ^bTimotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith ;

3 ^cThat no man should be moved by these afflictions : for yourselves know that ^dwe are appointed thereunto.

4 For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation ; ^eeven as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, ^fwhen I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, ^glest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain.

6 But now, when ^bTimotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you :

7 Therefore, brethren, ^hwe were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith :

8 For ^know we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what ⁱthanks can we render to is the hope which chiefly animates us in our ministrations ? What is our chief joy in them ? Or what is the crown of glory we expect as our reward at the end ? —Is it not that we shall present you and other converts as chaste virgins to Christ ; that when he who is our life shall appear, ye, together with us, may appear with him in glory, and sit on his right hand ?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Great patience, courage, candour, diligence, humility, prudence, tender affection, self-denial, unblameable holiness, and equity, are necessary for ministers in all their ministrations and conduct. And happy is the church in which such are found, and where hearers receive the gospel into their hearts upon the testimony of the Holy Ghost, and experience it powerfully influencing them to universal holiness and readiness to suffer for its sake ! Desperately malicious are apostate professors against Christ, his truths and people ; and certain and dreadful is their punishment. In manifold forms Satan bestirs himself to hinder the spread of the gospel by faithful ministers. But dear is the affection such bear to their spiritual children ; great the comfort they take in them now, and exalted the honour they will have by them in the great day of account.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Such was the distressing care of my mind about you, as young converts in perilous circumstances, that when I found I could by no means quickly return to you myself, I chose rather to struggle alone with difficulties unnumbered at Athens, than neglect any thing which might contribute to your edification : 2. And therefore cheerfully parted with my dearly beloved brother Timothy, whom God has by his grace called to, richly furnished and rendered most laborious and faithful in the ministerial office ; and sent him to labour among you, in exciting, strengthening, and confirming your faith in Christ and the great doctrines of the gospel ; and that he might revive in your souls a sweet sense of the glorious advantages and delights which result from your faith in this, and especially the other world ; 3. That so none of you might be disheartened or staggered at the afflictions and persecutions which ye or we have to endure for the sake of Christ ;—especially as ye know that God, in his eternal, infinitely wise, and holy purpose, has appointed us, the servants and followers of Christ, to suffer with and for him as well as to reign with him. 4. For when I and my fellow-labourers in the work of the gospel were present with you, we warned you that both you and we must expect trouble and persecution in following Christ ; and ye know it quickly came upon us before your eyes. 5. And on account of the troublesome circumstances in which we were forced to leave you, I could no longer forbear sending Timothy to inquire concerning your spiritual condition, lest by the violence of persecution, the subtilty of false teachers, or the deceitfulness of your own hearts, Satan, that malicious, artful, and busy adversary, should prevail to draw some of you back from the truths and ways of the Lord, after all the promising appearances ye had made. 6. But when Timothy returned to us at Corinth, and informed us that, notwithstanding all your trials, temptations, and dangers, ye stand fast in the faith of the gospel, and in your love to Christ and his truths, ordinances, ministers, and people, and retain an affectionate remembrance of us in your daily prayers, and a lively sense of the excellent doctrines which we preached among you, and are often speaking of us with esteem and honour, and earnestly desirous of another visit from us ; 7. These good tidings of your steady perseverance in the faith of Christ, and the genuine fruits thereof, entirely removed all our painful anxiety about you, and exceedingly comforted us under all the troubles to which we have been exposed for the gospel's sake. 8. For whatever were our difficulties, dejections, and solicitude concerning you before, we are now alive and comforted in our souls, and go on cheerfully in our work, since we knew that ye

God again for you, for all the joy where-with we joy for your sakes before our God ;

10 ^mNight and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might ⁿperfect that which is lacking in your faith ?

11 ^oNow God himself, and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, ^{*}direct our way unto you.

12 ^pAnd the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you ;

13 To the end he may ^qestablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the ^rcoming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

The apostle exhorts them (1) To chastity and holiness, as things required by God,—and as the contrary expose men to his righteous punishments ; 1—8. (2) To brotherly love, peaceable behaviour, and diligence in their secular calling ; 9—12. (3) To moderate their grief for the death of godly relations and friends, in view of their glorious resurrection and being for ever with the Lord ; 13—16.

FURTHERMORE then ^awe ^{*}beseech you, brethren, and [†]exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that, ^bas ye have received of us how ye ought to walk, and to please God, ^cso ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know ^dwhat commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 ^eFor this is the will of God, ^{even} your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication :

continue so stedfast in your adherence to the Lord Jesus, and hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering. 9. For, considering the happy state of your affairs, how can we ever be thankful enough to God, in fresh returns of praise, for his grace bestowed on you, and for giving us hearts to rejoice so exceedingly and sincerely in it before him : 10. In all our stated and occasional devotions, praying with uncommon fervour, earnestness, and importunity, that, if it be his will, we may be allowed to visit you again, and be further instrumental in instructing, establishing, and building you up in knowledge, faith, comfort, and holiness, unto complete and eternal salvation.

11. And to promote those valuable purposes, may God himself, whose kingdom roaleth over all, and who is your covenant God and Father ; and our Lord Jesus Christ, who as Mediator, is Head over all things to his church ; by his overruling providence, grant us a speedy and unobstructed opportunity to visit you. 12. And, whether we be permitted to come to you or not, may the Lord Jesus, as your Head of influence and government, enable you by his Spirit still more abundantly to increase in Christian love towards one another, as members of the same mystical body of Christ, and children of the same heavenly Father, and even in all goodwill towards all men, with all sincerity and fervour, even as our affection increases towards you.

13. To the end that he may thus strengthen, establish, and confirm your whole souls in the doctrines of the gospel, and in every grace, and may preserve you blameless in every good word and work, and in all holy conversation, before our all-seeing God and Father, till ye be presented holy, unblameable, and unreprieveable, when Jesus Christ, attended by all his holy angels and glorified saints, shall come to judge the world.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Ministers should be very solicitous to demonstrate their love to their people, and use every means possible for their establishment and comfort in the truth ; and to prevent their being seduced by deceivers, or dispirited by sufferings, especially when they are but newly converted and babes in Christ. The more thoroughly professors count the cost at their entrance on religion, the better they will withstand Satan's temptations to apostasy. And when church members persevere and increase in knowledge, faith, love, and good works, it gives great comfort to their fellow ministers ; yea, it supports them under their distresses, engages their thankfulness to God, and animates their prayers for and delight in them. But it is Jesus Christ, and his Father, and his blessed Spirit, who are alone the proper source of believers' gospel privileges, growth and establishment in grace, and happy meetness for, and comfortable appearance in the last judgment.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. In order to your being established in holiness at the second coming of our Lord Jesus, with the most tender affection we entreat, and with the highest authority, in the name and for the sake of our Lord Jesus, we exhort and charge you that, according to the inspired directions which ye have received from us how to order your whole conversation in a manner acceptable to God through Christ, ye would by his grace more and more labour to improve and excel therein every day. 2. For ye cannot but know and remember what holy precepts we delivered to you when with you, as the rule of your behaviour in all things ; and with what solemn and evangelical arguments we enforced and pressed them on your consciences, by the immediate authority of the exalted Lord and Saviour of his body the church. 3. For the ordaining, approving, and commanding will of God, and his end in bestowing his grace upon you, concur in this, that, encouraged by the promises of his covenant, ye should cleanse yourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in his fear ; and particularly that ye should carefully avoid and detest all manner of uncleanness, and every appearance of temptation or approach to it. 4. And that every

BUT ^aof the times and the seasons, ^bbrethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that ^bthe day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 ^cFor when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you ^das a thief.

5 ^dYe are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

one of you, Jew or Gentile, should by the gospel know by what obligation, in what manner, and by what motives, means, and assistances from above, he may make use of his body, which is the receptacle of his soul, with temperance, chastity, and purity, to the honour of God, and its relation to Christ and his Spirit, and of the Christian profession and character;

5. Not using it in the gratification of deiling passions, appetites, and inclinations of the sensual kind, in the manner of the Heathens, who being ignorant of the true and living God, have rendered themselves infamous for the vilest abominations.

6. That so none of you may ever presume to act a dishonest or injurious part towards your neighbour, particularly in violating the fidelity and chastity of his wife; for ye know we have often solemnly warned you that the fearful vengeance of God shall punish such abominable transgressors:

7. For he, being infinitely holy, neither did nor could, by his gospel and grace, call us to the knowledge and fellowship of Christ that we might indulge ourselves in uncleanness or any other sin, but that he might, by the strongest obligations and motives, engage us to chastity, holiness, and unblameableness, in our whole conversation before him.

8. Whoever therefore he be that rejects or contemns these admonitions and commands, does not despise the authority of man, but of the great God himself, by whose inspiration we deliver them, and who gives his sanctifying Spirit to all true believers, to direct and excite them to all proper obedience.

9, 10. But with respect to the great duty of loving one another as brethren in the faith, hope, holiness, and blessings of the gospel, I need not inculcate it upon you as though ye were averse to it, for by the teaching of God's word and Spirit ye have been instructed in the obligations and manner of performing this duty, and are inclined and enabled to practise it, not only towards your fellow Christians at Thessalonica, but towards all those of the churches around you; so that I need only beseech you to persevere and abound more and more in the manifestation and exercise of this brotherly love towards all the saints, your poor brethren of Judea not excepted;

11, 12. And for promoting it, let all of you study to behave in a meek and peaceable manner, never officiously meddling with other people's affairs, but attending to the duties of your respective stations and personal concerns, and industriously labouring in your several callings for the support of yourselves and families, and that ye may be enabled to give to such as are in straits, as ye know I and my fellow ministers of Christ commanded and exemplified to you while we were with you; that so ye may live in such an upright, faithful, decent, and becoming manner towards the Heathens around you, as to prevent their reproaching you or your religion; and that, instead of needing the charity of others, ye may have enough of every thing needful.

13. Moreover, I would not have you ignorantly indulge yourselves in excessive or superstitious sorrow for your deceased Christian relations, as if either their want of circumcision or any other thing could prevent their eternal felicity:

14. For, if we truly believe that Jesus Christ died for our offences, and rose again for our justification, we must upon the same ground believe that God, through the death and resurrection of Christ, will quicken to an immortal and glorious life them that sleep in union with him, and will present them together with him in the last judgment.

15. For this we declare unto you, by the infallible inspiration of the Holy Ghost, that those members of Christ's mystical body, who shall be living on the earth at his appearance to the last judgment, shall not be happy, or have their bodies fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body, sooner than those that shall be found in their graves:

16. For in that important day the Lord Jesus, in his human nature, shall visibly, and in great glory, descend from heaven; and in a most solemn manner, somewhat similar to the thunders at Sinai, summon the world to appear at his tribunal; and then the bodies of those who died in a state of federal and vital union with him shall be quickened to a glorious immortality, before the bodies of the wicked be raised, or the living saints gathered to his right hand.

27. But immediately after their resurrection, the members of his body, to which we all belong, who shall be then living, shall undergo a refining change; and, together with the raised saints, be carried up by his almighty power into the air, that we may sit down on his right hand, and being there acknowledged and acquitted, shall for ever continue, soul and body, in his immediate presence to behold his glory.

18. Wherefore comfort yourselves, and one another, with respect to the death of your Christian friends, and every other trial ye undergo, with these views of your and their happiness in the last judgment and eternal state.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Christians should every day carefully study an increase of holiness in heart and life, according to the will of God. And there is need of the utmost watchfulness and care to avoid all sensuality and impurity, as contrary to the command of God and infinitely dangerous to our souls. Whatever contempt is aimed at Christ's faithful ministers falls chiefly on himself, and will be punished accordingly. It is delightful when church members, as taught of God, abound in mutual love, peacefulness, and industry. But, alas, how many, by their internedding temper, bring trouble to themselves and reproach on their religion; while others by their idleness thievishly prey on their neighbours around! Very absurd is immoderate grief for Christian friends, who are taken from us to be with Christ, and shall be quickly raised in glory, and set with him in the last judgment. Inexpressible is the solemnity of that day, and the comfort and honour it will bring to the saints. Thrice blessed is that people whose God is the Lord! In death they sleep in Jesus' bosom; in the resurrection they appear with him in glory; and through eternity they shall see his face, and sit with him on his throne.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. But with respect to the precise time or opportunity that Christ will take for his appearance to judge the world and complete your happiness, I have no need to say any thing;

2. For, from what ye have heard from Christ and his ministers, ye cannot but perfectly know, that however unalterably that time be fixed in the purpose of God, yet, to excite all concerned to constant preparation and watching for it, the precise period or day thereof is altogether concealed; and it will come, as unexpectedly on all, and as terribly on the wicked, as a thief who breaks into a house at midnight, when the master and all his family are asleep;

3. For, while secure sinners shall be flattering themselves with nothing but peace and prosperity, that awful day, and the everlasting destruction which attends it, shall, by means of the sin which they carry about in them, overtake them in the most sudden, agonizing, and unavoidable manner.

4. But ye, my dear Christian brethren, are not like others under the power of spiritual darkness, that ye should sleep secure in sin, faithless and unconcerned about that awful event, or unprepared for it; and therefore, though it may unexpectedly surprise you, it cannot issue in your hurt or ruin.

5. Nay, all of you by profession, and I hope most of you in reality, are enlightened in the knowledge of Christ, and the way of salvation through him, that ye may be watchful, and walk honourably in the light of gospel-truth and holiness, with your eyes open, and as persons exposed to public view; and being thus made light in the Lord, we are no more covered with the shadows of Judaism, darkness of Heathenism, mist of error, or natural ignorance of our own minds,

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.
7 For they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that are drunken are drunken in the night.
8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation.
9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,
10 Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.
11 Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.
12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them that labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;
13 And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves.
14 Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.
15 See that none render evil for evil

as others still are, and we once were. 6. Being therefore brought into this nappy state, let us never give way to a slothful, careless, and indolent frame of spirit, as others do who are still in their sins; but, as enlightened by the gospel and Spirit of Christ, let us maintain a wakeful temper of mind, watch over our own hearts and ways, and watch against sins and temptations, and for the coming of Christ; and let us, in view of it, be modest in our opinions of ourselves, and moderate in our cares and pleasures relative to this present world. 7. For as men sleep in the night that their rest may not be disturbed, and drink in the night that they may not be exposed to shame, so they who indulge themselves in carnal security, or immoderate cares of pleasures of this world, delight in and are under the power of ignorance, error, guilt, and corruption. 8. But let us who are spiritually begotten under God by, and endowed and surrounded with the light of gospel truth and grace, be vigilant and moderate in our affections or pursuits of earthly enjoyments; and being in a state of warfare with sin, Satan, and the world, let us make use of our Christian armour for defending ourselves; particularly of faith in Christ, and in God through him; and of love to him, and to one another in him, which as a breast-plate may defend our heart; and of a well-grounded, solid, and satisfying hope of eternal life through him, which as an helmet may secure our head, till we come off more than conquerors through him that loved us: 9. For, by what God has wrought for and in us, it is evident that he has not in his eternal decree pre-appointed us to everlasting damnation, but to obtain a free, rich, and everlasting redemption, through the merits and mediation of Christ; 10. Who as our Surety obeyed and died in our room and stead, to take away our sin, that, by the merit and efficacy of his death, we who believe in him, whether we be found dead or alive at the last day, should together with, in union to, and fellowship with him, be solemnly admitted into eternal blessedness. 11. Wherefore, with the views and hopes of, and converse about, these glorious events, labour as ye have begun to comfort, establish, and edify one another. 12. And as they who minister in holy things are the ordinary means and instruments which Christ hath appointed for the instruction, conversion, and edification of men's souls unto complete salvation, we earnestly entreat and charge you to converse freely with, own and honour, and shew your liberality, love, and respect to all his faithful servants and their ministrations, who painfully labour among you for the good of your souls, and by virtue of their commission and ability from Christ, watch over your spiritual concerns according to the laws which he has enacted in his word; and who, as occasions require, warn you against all sin, error, and danger; reprove what is amiss in your conduct; and exhort, counsel, and encourage you to persevere in the ways of truth, sobriety, and holiness: 13. And to esteem them in the most honourable and affectionate manner, on account of the dignity and importance of the work in which they are employed for the glory of God and your spiritual advantage; and as ye would not dishonour Christ, grieve them, or his Spirit in them, nor prevent your profiting by their labours; follow the things that make for harmony, peace, and friendship with them and with one another. 14. And we further beseech both ministers and people among you, in their respective stations, to admonish those that are any ways disorderly in their walk towards God or men, and to warn them of their sin and danger, and the dishonour which they bring on their holy profession, and the pernicious influence of their conduct on others, and thus endeavour to reclaim them. Encourage and comfort distressed, timorous, and dejected fellow Christians; deal tenderly with, and endeavour to strengthen the weak in faith or knowledge, and labour to uphold them from falling or stumbling; and, as far as ye can without sin, exercise patience and forbearance towards all men, friends or enemies. 15. Whatever injurious treatment ye receive, see that ye never attempt to revenge the injuries done you, but render good for evil; and always apply yourselves to do whatever is kind, useful, and beneficial, not only to fellow Christians, but to every one with whom ye are connected. 16. And as to personal duties, study, for the credit of religion and your own comfort, always to maintain a cheerfulness of temper, rejoicing in the Lord Jesus Christ, and God in him, in whatever he is in himself or to you, or has done, does, or will do for you. 17. But as in this world your weakness, sinfulness, necessities, and dangers are constant, let your souls always maintain a praying frame; and see that ye daily, on stated or other occasions, unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men.

17 Pray without ceasing.
18 In every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.
19 Quench not the Spirit.
20 Despise not prophesyings.
21 Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.
22 Abstain from all appearance of evil.
23 And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.
24 Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.
25 Brethren, pray for us.
26 Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss.
27 I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.
28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

abound in fervent prayer for yourselves and others. 18. Always, and in all circumstances, mingling your supplications with hearty thanksgivings to God for the unnumbered mercies, spiritual and temporal, which ye have or do receive, and the eternal which ye have in hope; for this is the grateful tribute which God, by the strongest obligations, requires of you for his honour in the receipt of these favours. 19. And as none of these duties can be performed without the special assistance of the Holy Ghost, beware of neglecting, stifling, and extinguishing his gifts, graces, or operations; but carefully comply with, cherish, and improve his gracious illuminations, suggestions, and motions, to excite and enable you to proper fervour in every good work. 20. And as the Holy Ghost works by means of, and according to the word of God, see that ye never contemn, but highly prize and improve the scriptures, and every gospel ministration thereof, whether extraordinary or not. 21. But as many false teachers are gone abroad into the world, take care, under the direction and assistance of the Holy Ghost, thoroughly to try all doctrines and practices by the rule of God's word; and whatever ye find to be really true, good, and honourable, steadfastly cleave to it in your faith and practice. 22. And with the greatest care avoid every thing erroneous or sinful, and even the most distant appearances thereof or temptations thereto. 23. And for these purposes may that God, who is reconciled to you in Christ, and who is the Author, Giver, Commander, and Approver of all true peace with himself, or with each other, thoroughly purge you from all iniquity, and make you eminently partakers of his image; and may he preserve all the powers of your soul, all your animal spirits, senses, appetites, or natural tempers, and all the members of your body, from every sinful inclination or work, that ye may be found perfect at the coming of Christ. 24. On his faithfulness ye may indeed depend; for he who has by his grace effectually called you to his kingdom and glory, will, according to his promise, carry on and perfect whatever concerns you in your way to glory, and by the means of his own appointment. 25. As we ministers are so earnest in our prayers for you, we beg that ye will daily and fervently pray for us, that, by the direction and assistance of the Holy Ghost, we may be inclined, enabled, and encouraged to the diligent and faithful discharge of our important trust, and at the end receive a crown of glory as our gracious reward. 26. Let our most affectionate and religious respects be presented to all our Christian brethren with you; and see that ye testify your cordial love one to another in the most sincere, friendly, chaste, and pious manner. 27. And, as the contents of this letter are of great importance and general use, I solemnly charge you, in the name of the Lord Jesus, that it be distinctly read unto all your members, who, I hope, live together as brethren in faith, profession, holiness, and comfort.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—To desire to know the time of Christ's second coming is but needless and sinful curiosity. But great is the importance of earnest watchfulness and diligent preparations for it. With sudden ruin it will dreadfully overwhelm the world of the ungodly, but will bring the most abundant comfort to those who are begotten again to a lively hope of eternal felicity through the resurrection of Christ from the dead. And the sovereign, the distinguishing grace of their election will then most evidently appear. What activity, watchfulness, and sobriety—what daily warring against the devil, the world, and the flesh, in the exercise of faith, love, and hope—what mutual harmony and study of one another's edification and comfort—what due regard to the messengers, ministration, and Spirit of Christ—what careful examination of doctrines and practices, and of our own hearts by the word of God—what stedfast adherence to, and following after that which is good—what careful avoiding of sinful anger, and every other appearance of evil—what a joyful, prayerful, and thankful frame of spirit—what cordial love and friendship—are necessary to prepare us for that great event! Infinite then is the mercy that the God of peace has undertaken our sanctification, and will in his own time certainly effect it. And it is his grace, power, and faithfulness, not our care of diligence, that are the great security of our eternal happiness. Never then let me murmur at nor fear the event of any duty, when my reconciled God works all my works in and for me; and in fervent prayer, and serious perusal of the scriptures, let me be a worker together with him.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE

THESSALONIANS.

This epistle, as well as the former, appears to have been written from Corinth, and within less than two years after it; in order to commend, encourage, and comfort, them under their sufferings for the gospel; chap. i.: to rectify their misconstruction of what he had before written about the nearness of Christ's second coming; ii.: and to prevent their indulging church fellowship with disorderly persons; iii.

CHAP. I.

After his introductory salutation, Paul, (1) Professes his high esteem for the Thessalonians, and informs them of his thanksgivings and prayers for them; 3, 4, 11, 12. (2) Encourages them to persevere in their love and patience under all their sufferings, as they might expect Christ certainly and quickly to resent the injuries done them, and to reward them with eternal salvation; 5—10.

PAUL^a, and Silvanus, and Timothy, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2^b Grace unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3^c We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

4 So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure.

5^e Which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer:

6^h Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you;

7 And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus^k shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels,

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Paul, an inspired messenger of Christ, and Silas and Timothy, his assistants in planting the gospel among you, to those in Thessalonica, who have been graciously turned from Heathen idols to the true and living God, and to Jesus Christ as the only true Messiah. 2. Again earnestly wish that the divine favour, in all its manifestations and effects, and all manner of spiritual peace and prosperity, may abound to all and every one of you, from God as the fountain, and through Christ as the purchaser and dispenser thereof. 3. Reflecting upon what we have further heard of the remarkable increase of your faith towards God, and love towards one another, we find ourselves sweetly constrained solemnly and daily to thank God for the marvellous influences of his grace on your hearts, by which these and all other graces are maintained and improved. 4. And in all the churches of Christ whither we come, with the highest esteem, honour, and delight, we make mention of your firmness of mind, calm submission, holy resolution, strong and lively faith, and steadfast adherence to Christ and the gospel, under all the persecutions and afflictions which have all along attended you for his sake. 5. Which is a manifest token that God has appointed a future, just, and impartial, judgment of the world, which will set all things to rights, and in which he will adjudge you to that heavenly kingdom, for the honour of which, and in hope of the enjoyment of which, ye so cheerfully suffer; 6. Since it cannot but be agreeable to God's righteous nature, will, law, and government, that, in due time, severe punishment be inflicted upon those that unjustly vex, distress, and cruelly persecute, you on account of your adherence to the truth of the gospel; 7, 8. And that, in and through Christ, he should give you and us, who are persecuted for his cause, a release from our present tribulations, and an entrance into a state of perfect rest and peace: when our Lord Jesus, who has redeemed us to God by his own precious blood, shall, in the most public and awful manner, attended by all his millions of mighty and holy angels, appear in the clouds at the last day—to adjudge to, and execute, just vengeance upon all them, Jews or Gentiles, who continue in their sins, strangers to the true knowledge of God, and rebellious against the light of nature; or who continue to disobey, reject, and contemn, the gracious calls of our Lord Jesus Christ in the gospel: 9. Both which sorts of sinners shall then begin to be punished with an everlasting loss of, and banishment from, his blissful presence, and all the glorious effects of his saving power, and an eternal suffering of the most inexpressible torments in soul and body, from the immediate and terribly glorious operations of his almighty power. 10. At the very time in which he will appear, to your joy, to glorify himself in the full performance of all his promises, in the complete

8ⁱ In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9ⁿ Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power:

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you^p was believed) in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of work with power:

12ⁿ That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ:

CHAP. II.

Here the apostle (1) Cautions the Thessalonians against imagining that the last judgment would certainly take place in their time; 1, 2. (2) Assures them that there should be first a general apostasy, and a manifestation of popery,—which he describes in its rise, reign, and the ruin of its subjects; 3—12. (3) Blesses God that, by eternal election and effectual calling, he had secured them from such apostasy:—exhorts them to steadfastness, and prays that God would comfort and establish them; 13—17.

NOW^a we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, salvation of all his sanctified ones;—and to be glorified and adored by them, who by faith cordially embrace the testimony of the gospel preached by us,—in thankful and everlasting wonder at the riches of his grace, and the great things he has done for them. 11. In reflection upon these important events, and in hopes of your escaping the terrors and sharing the joys thereof, we daily and earnestly supplicate our new covenant God of all grace, that, by the almighty operation of his Spirit, he would gradually fulfil all his promises, and perfect your faith and other graces, and all the fruits of good works proceeding therefrom, and thus make you meet for the full enjoyment of that heavenly inheritance to which ye are called by the gospel. 12. That so the person, authority, and doctrine, of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ may be exalted, in their happy effects upon you, and in your high esteem thereof, and holy conversation answerable thereto; and that, by virtue of your union with him, ye may arrive at the most glorious state of perfect joy and praise, according to the free favour and grace of God, who has appointed you to it, and Jesus Christ, who has purchased and promised, and will bestow it upon you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Happy is the state of believers, in God through Christ; and rich and abundant the mercies that flow both to them. There is great ground of thankfulness when the faith, love, and patience, of Christians grow exceedingly, even under great tribulation and cruel persecution. And why should saints fret at their present troubles, when the last judgment will so quickly set every thing right! Awfully tremendous, but infinitely glorious, will be that appearance of our Redeemer! Fearful is the work he will then, and through eternity, make on obstinate sinners, especially such as rebelled against the clear light, and refused the precious blessings, of the gospel. But delightfully will he glorify himself in the public honours and eternal salvation of his saints. And there is need of prayers, care, and diligence, on their side, and of almighty and gracious operations on his, to prepare them for that grand event. My soul, wait and long for thy coming, thy quickly-coming, Redeemer! Rejoice, in hopes of thy eternal nearness to, vision and admiration of, him! Rejoice, that thy worthiness lies in his righteousness and riches of grace, and that his upholding thy faith effectually preserves it from failing!

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. But, having attempted to comfort you under your present tribulations with the certain prospect of Christ's appearance to judge the world. I must now, in the most solemn manner, entreat and adjure you, by your belief, expectations, and desire, of that awful event, and by your hopes of being ga-

2^b That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit nor by word, nor by letter as from us as that the day of Christ is at hand.

3^c Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come except there come ^da falling away first, and that ^eman of sin be revealed, the ^fson of perdition;

4 Who opposeth and ^gexalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.

5^b Remember ye not that when I was yet with you I told you these things?

6 And now ye know what ^{*}withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For the ⁱmystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then shall that ^kwicked be revealed, ^lwhom the Lord shall consume ^mwith the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming:

11 To punish which dislike and rejection of the truth as it is in Jesus, God shall deliver them up to the hardening, blinding, and delusive, influence of their own hearts, that, by means thereof, they may consent to the merest forgeries, and the most absurd errors, vile idolatries, and gross superstitions; 12. That thus being left to the foolish and perverse influences of their own hearts, all of them may be condemned and punished with everlasting destruction who rejected Christ and his gospel truths, and took pleasure in perverting his word, corrupting his worship, violating his laws, and persecuting his people. 13. CHAP. III.

The apostle (1) Requests the prayers of the Thessalonians for himself and fellow-ministers, and their work; and prays for them; 1—5. (2) Charges them to withdraw from, and duly censure, disorderly walkers; particularly such as, contrary to his command and example, were lazy and busy bodies; 6—15. (3) Concludes with a prayer, salutation, and benediction; 16—18.

FINALLY, brethren, ^apray for us, ^bthat the word of the Lord ^{*}may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you:

2 And that ^cwe may be delivered from both duty and affection, we must bless and thank God that he has secured you against such ruinous apostasy; having, in his peculiar distinguishing love, chosen you to complete and eternal salvation, to which he has determined to bring you, through the universal and gradual renovation of your nature in knowledge, righteousness, and true holiness, wrought in you by the Holy Ghost, and through a fiducial trust in God, and faithful adherence to him, as manifested and offered in the gospel, as God's appointed means of eternal happiness; 14. To which complete and eternal salvation, in consequence of his own electing purpose, he has affectually called you by the gospel which we preached unto you, that, through the attending operation of the Holy Ghost, ye might be fully entitled to, prepared for, and at last introduced into, the eternal enjoyment of that glorious blessedness which our Lord Jesus Christ has purchased and prepared, taken possession of, promised to, and bestowed upon, his ransomed people: 15. In consideration therefore of the secret and subtle operations of Antichrist to draw men from the faith, and of what God has done for and promised to you, we earnestly beseech you to stand fast in the faith, hope, comfort, and holiness of the gospel,—steadfastly maintaining all those important points of truth and duty, in which ye have been instructed by me and my fellow ministers of Christ, by word or writing. 16. And, for this purpose, may the Lord Jesus Christ, who has redeemed us by his blood, and purchased eternal glory for us, and will at last, confer it upon us;—and God, his and our Father, who has loved us with an everlasting love, and often revived our souls by those everlasting consolations which flow from and are founded on it,—and given us a solid, scriptural, and well grounded, hope of eternal life, confirmed by his Holy Spirit dwelling and working in our hearts, 17. Fill your souls yet more and more with all joy and peace in believing, and effectually comfort your hearts under all your troubles, fears, and dangers,—and more and more establish your faith in, and adherence to, the truths of the gospel, and enable you constantly to speak and act for God, and for one another's edification.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—It is dangerous to fix the periods which God has concealed. Disappointment of the events expected may tempt us to discredit the whole gospel. That Christ will come is certain: our business is not to inquire when, but to be always ready to meet him. Happy will be the time when all the ransomed millions shall be gathered to, and be for ever with, him!—By what strange wickedness of men does God punish obstinate and haughty professors, and carry on the designs of his glory! The most fearful lengths in wickedness will seducers go when left to their own heart's lusts. But the triumphing of the wicked is short. Vengeance from above overtakes them in due time. And, when God has accomplished his purposes for the trial of his saints and the punishment of his enemies, he casts the wicked into the fire of his wrath.—But there is great ground of thanksgiving that nothing can defeat his electing purpose; nothing can defeat his saving call and sanctifying influence; nothing can separate from his love; nothing can rob us of his comforts; nothing can undermine the faith or hope which is founded on his word.—Stand fast, my soul! cleave to his precious truths, and give thyself unto prayer; so shalt thou be comforted and established in every good word and work.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Now, my dear brethren in Christ, let me entreat your most fervent prayers for me and my fellow-labourers in preaching the gospel, that we may be graciously directed, assisted, and owned, of God in our great and difficult work; and that the gospel of salvation, of which Christ is the Author and principal Subject, may be speedily and successfully spread far and wide; and may, as with you, be honourably received, and produce glorious effects in the conversion, edification, and holy conversation, of multitudes, wherever it is preached: 2. And that we may be kept or rescued out of the hands of unbelieving Jewish zealots and false brethren; who are so insolently perverse and absurd Descended from a Jewish mother and grandmother, Timothy had been very early instructed by them in the knowledge of the Old Testament. By the ministration of Paul at Lystra he was converted to the Christian faith, and remarkably enriched with the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost; Acts xvi. Having circumcised him, that the Jews might take no offence at him on account of his father being a Greek, Paul took him to be his companion, under the character of an evangelist. And, having left him at Ephesus to rectify and establish the complete order of the church there, he sent him this and the subsequent epistle, to fix upon his mind the instructions which he had formerly given him, and enable him to communicate the same to others. In them the apostle testifies his affection, warns him of danger, and directs him in his personal and ministerial conduct.—The second was written from Rome, perhaps several years after the first.

and the world, and valiantly standing up for the truth against all opposition; 19. Holding fast the doctrines of the gospel in a firm faith and constant profession thereof, and holding it forth to others in your ministry, and studying to be conscientiously upright in preaching it and living answerably to it; which some, neglecting and rejecting, have, to their inexpressible danger, loss, and damage, entirely renounced its doctrines, and their profession of it, and abandoned themselves to error and immorality: 20. Of which apostates I mention two infamous ringleaders, that you and all other Christians may beware of them, and bear testimony against them; namely, Hymeneus and Alexander, whose notorious subversion of the faith and holiness of the gospel, and dangerous errors and immoralities, laid me under the disagreeable necessity of apostolically casting them out of the visible church, and delivering them up to Satan, as his subjects; that, by means of such awful discipline, they might be brought to a conviction and repentance of their wickedness, at least deterred from persisting in their blasphemous defamations of the name, doctrines, and ways, of the Lord.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Solemn and important, honourable and delightful, is that trust which God has committed to gospel ministers. But they have need of abundant grace and mercy from Christ and his Father, to fit them for, and assist them in, their work, and support them under the trials they must undergo on account of it. For in manifold shapes of vain jangling, legal prattling, horrid blasphemy, and cruel persecution, Satan always labours to oppose the gospel, and them who faithfully preach it. And careless and erroneous teachers are great plagues to churches, and murderers of souls. It is absurd to inculcate or expect obedience to God's law, without the heart be first renewed by the Spirit of God, our consciences sprinkled with Jesus' blood, and an abiding principle of true faith be implanted within us. And it is the highest folly for unbelievers to seek happiness by that law which cannot but condemn them for their wickedness. Thrice happy are they who are delivered from it as a broken covenant, and are only under it in Christ as a binding rule of duty. Infinite is the excellency, and powerful the virtue, of the glorious gospel. From an infinitely gracious God it springs, and to his high honour and praise it tends. Its matter is Christ, and all that is in or done by him. It suits, it extends to, and ought to be earnestly received by, every hearer. The most guilty and obstinate cannot withstand its almighty force. And happy is it when ministers can recommend it from their own remarkable experience of its pardoning, regenerating, sanctifying, comforting, and self-abasing, influence! But, alas, infinite is their danger, who persevere in opposing it, or apostatize from their wonted profession of it.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. As some judaizing Christians, through prejudice against the Gentiles, reject the authority of Heathen magistrates, I therefore, as the apostle of the Gentiles, insist on it, as a matter of high importance, that Christians, in all their prayers, public, private, or secret, deprecate evils inflicted or feared; plead for every necessary mercy; and give thanks for favours received or promised;—through Christ; with respect to all sorts or ranks of men, Jews or Gentiles, high or low; 2. Particularly for emperors, kings, or other magistrates, though Heathens; that their persons and ministrations may be blessed, and that they may be enabled to rule in the fear of God; that, under their protection, and encouraged by their example and influence, we may safely and peaceably exercise ourselves in public, private, and secret, acts of piety towards God, and of honourable honesty and virtue towards every man. 3. For thus to pray, and live in a manner becoming Christians, is agreeable to the good and holy nature and will of God; and through Christ, well pleasing in his sight, who has manifested himself to us sinful men under the endearing character of a Saviour: 4. Who, for the more illustrious display of the freeness, sovereignty, variety, and abundant riches, of his grace under the gospel dispensation, intends effectually to save men of all sorts and ranks, greater or lesser sinners; and has for this purpose appointed that the gospel of salvation be preached

CHAP. III.

Paul (1) Prescribes the qualifications and behaviour of gospel bishops or overseers; 1—7: and of deacons and their wives;

to every creature under heaven. 5. And it is the more proper that prayers and thanksgivings be made for all sorts of men through Christ, in whom all nations shall be blessed, since God now manifests himself equally the one only God of both Jews and Gentiles, and Jesus Christ, God-man, is set forth as the only Mediator, able, willing, and appointed, to make up the breach between God and sinful men;—6. Who, having an infinite dignity in his person, and being Lord of his own life, offered up himself, soul and body, an atoning sacrifice and price of redemption to the offended justice of God, in the room of men of all sorts and ranks, to deliver them from the bondage of sin, Satan, the law, and death; that their salvation might be published to them, especially under the gospel: 7. For the publishing of which, I solemnly avow myself a faithful and sincere teacher, chiefly of the Gentiles, manifesting to them the infallible truths and faithful promises of God for their salvation. 8. And, therefore, in the name of my glorious Master, the Saviour of mankind, I insist that ministers and Christians, without regard to any ceremonial sanctity of places, pray for all sorts of persons, as above directed, with fervour, purity, and elevation of heart to God, without any wrathfulness of temper against either Jews or Gentiles, and without doubting of, or disputing against, his fulfilment of his promises to all them that believe. 9. I moreover insist upon it that women at all times, and especially in your religious assemblies, appear in a garb suitable to the modesty of their sex, and with an air of reverence to God and sacred things; and not after the manner of lewd women, with curiously plaited hair, or in showy deckings of embroidered, rich, or gaudy, apparel, which mark the vanity and pride of their own heart, and tempt the beholders to frothiness or unchastity. But let them, as women who profess godliness and a superlative regard to the things of another world, labour to adorn themselves with such graces, tempers, and practices, as fulfil God's law, honour his name, and prove useful to others. 11, 12. And let no woman dare to preach in public assemblies, or in any case usurp authority over her husband or his sex, but learn, according to the dictates of nature and the law of God, to be duly submissive and obedient: 13. For the woman being at first formed after and out of the man, plainly intimated that she was made for him, not he for her; and that she ought to depend on and be subject to him, not he to her. 14. And her being first seduced by the devil, that old serpent, in paradise, and made the primary instrument in the ruin of mankind, is a further reason for her humility and subjection. 15. Nevertheless, notwithstanding the particular threatenings issued forth against them immediately after the fall, women are generally preserved in the agonies of childbirth; and shall be saved as well as the man, yet generally in the endurance of this superior effect of the curse; yea, through the incarnation of Jesus Christ, the promised seed, all of them shall be saved with an everlasting salvation who exercise themselves in true faith in God through Christ, and in love to him, his people and cause, and in a holy, chaste, sober, meek, and temperate, behaviour,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Nothing can more testify our love to men than much fervent prayer for them. And none ought to have a more certain share in our prayers than the rulers in church and state. It is greatly advantageous for the success and honour of the gospel when magistrates rule well, and are a terror to evil-doers, and a praise of them that do well. The extent of God's grace, and of Christ's mediation, to all sorts and ranks of men, should excite us cheerfully and powerfully to pray for them. And infinite is the mercy that in God's grace and Jesus' merit there is room for us all. The gospel and ordinances of God are now confined to no place in the world; but faithful ministers may preach it to every creature; and men may every where have full access to God in his worship. But let us always remember the holiness and reverence with which we ought to approach him.—Since sin entered by a woman, what reason have women to be remarkably holy and humble, and to avoid all ostentation of dress, which is but a badge and memorial of sin! And there is need of faith and love, and an holy conversation, in order to their safe and sanctified endurance in childbirth.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.

2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

3 Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but patient; not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity;

5 (For, if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

6 Not a novice, lest, being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.

7 Moreover, he must have a good report of them who are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil.

8 Likewise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For they that have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly:

15 But, if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

16 And, without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.

CHAP. IV.

(1) Foretells a fearful apostasy from the doctrines and practices of the gospel, particularly to Popery; 1—5. (2) Directs Timothy to piety, diligence, prudence, and faithfulness, in his personal conduct and discharge of the duties of his office; 6—16.

NOW the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; their own children and servants in a truly Christian manner. 13. And to these things they ought carefully to attend, as their faithful and prudent execution of their office for a considerable time will render them highly respected in the church, and increase their gifts and graces answerably to their station; and will embolden them to an open, free, and courageous, profession of the doctrines of Christ, and of their faith in him, by which they have derived grace from him to render them faithful in fulfilling their trust for his glory. 14. These things I write for the present direction of you or others, hoping, ere long, to see you at Ephesus, or some where else, and give you further instructions. 15. But, if our interview should be deferred beyond my expectations, this letter will serve to direct your behaviour in that religious society which the only living and true God has formed and established, for his own spiritual residence and honour, of credible professors, of his truths, animated by his Spirit; and which holds forth and maintains the doctrines of the glorious gospel upon which it is founded, and of which Jesus Christ is the sum and substance. 16. For, without all controversy, that doctrine, which furnishes us for, and animates us to, the strictest piety towards God and love to our neighbour, is a great, glorious, and incomprehensible, mystery; viz. that the eternal Son of God, one in nature, and equal in glory, to his Father and blessed Spirit, was manifested in his incarnation and debasement in this world;—and, having satisfied God's law and justice by his obedience, sufferings, and death, was acquitted and accepted of God as the Surety and righteous Head of his church; and, being by the Holy Ghost raised from the dead for our justification, was honourably attested in the miraculous confirmation and success of the gospel,—and, as angels had all along admired and ministered to him, they did, in his resurrection and ascension, and will at his second coming, attend him:—and, being raised from the dead and ascended to heaven, he was, is, and will be, preached to both Jews and Gentiles,—and, by faith, received by multitudes of them, particularly the latter, as their only and all-sufficient Saviour:—yea, as he was gloriously received up to his Father's right hand to receive all glory and power, so he has been and shall be gloriously received, owned, and professed, by multitudes under the glorious dispensation of his Spirit; and shall, after his judging the world, be solemnly introduced, with all his mystical body, into all the inexpressible glories and felicities of the eternal state.

Jude 3. 4, 18. 2 Thes. 2. 3, 4, 7, 9—11. Rev. 9. 2, 11. & 13, 5, 6, 13, 14. & 17. 5. & 18. 2.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Highly should we esteem the Christian church, which, animated by his Spirit, is the peculiar dwelling of the Most High. Yea, God in infinite mercy has provided for her officers to manage both her spiritual and temporal concerns. Earnestly then should such labour for the important qualifications of solid experience, knowledge, blameless character, faithfulness, gravity, generosity, and affability; and be the most exemplary in the regular government of their passions, appetites, tongues, and families. And the more faithful, prudent, and diligent, they are in discharging the duties of their office, they will be the more honoured in the church and bold in their holy profession. While the church holds forth and maintains the truth, upon what a glorious mystery of godliness is she herself founded! Unfathomable is the depth, importance, and glory of it, as it shines forth in God manifested in the flesh, to make atonement for sin, and mediate between God and men;—raised from the dead, received up into glory, and attested by the Holy Ghost, in the justification of his person and cause, and of believers in him;—beheld, witnessed, ministered to, and adored by, angels;—preached far and wide to, and believed on by, multitudes of Jews and Gentiles;—exalted to his Father's right hand, and to be Head over all things to the church;—and at last, after the final conquest of his enemies, entering heaven with all his angels and ransomed saints!

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. And, to stir you and others up to a steadfast adherence to this mystery of godliness, and to the rules which Christ issues forth for the government of his church, know that the Spirit of God has revealed to me, as well

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. And, with respect to offices in the Christian church, it is certain that he, who, having suitable qualifications, is inclined, from a regard to the glory of God and the edification of souls, to enter upon the office of a pastor or overseer in it, aims at a very honourable, important, and useful, though laborious office; 2. It is nevertheless necessary that you, and all others concerned in their admission, take care that their qualifications be truly proper and edifying. Every pastor or ruler in the Christian church ought to be of an unexceptionable moral character; must never be connected with more than one wife at once; must be very circumspect and diligent in his work; watchful against Satan and all his instruments, and over his own spirit, words, and actions, and for the souls of those committed to his charge.—He ought to be very moderate in his appetites, passions, and pleasures;—to be affable, courteous, prudent, and engaging in his behaviour;—to be ready, according to his ability, to relieve the necessities of the poor, and entertain godly ministers, or others properly recommended;—and should be furnished with a good stock of Christian knowledge and experience, that he may be capable of expressing his sentiments with freedom, clearness, and propriety, for the instruction of others, and for supporting and defending the truths of the gospel, on all suitable occasions. 3. He must by no means be given to long or frequent drinking, nor be of a furious and quarrelsome temper; nor so fond of earthly riches, as to be ready to procure them by unworthy means; but should be of a meek, calm, peaceable, and forbearing spirit: not abusive, noisy, and clamorous, in talking or disputing; nor covetous of what belongs to his neighbour; nor inordinately attached to the things of this world. 4. And if he have a family, he must be one who maintains a prudent authority over his children and servants, obliging them to submit to his lawful commands respecting either religion towards God or decent behaviour towards men. 5. For, if a man do not govern his own family right, it cannot be expected that he has prudence or resolution enough to be a ruler in the more high and difficult affairs of the church of God, where every thing must be conducted with decency and order. 6. Nor ought he to be a raw upstart; nor, in ordinary cases, one newly converted to the faith of Christ; lest, being lifted up with a high conceit of his own abilities, early honour, or popular applause, he should, through the instigation of Satan, fall by pride into eternal ruin, as the devil did. 7. Moreover, he ought to have a clear reputation among the unbelieving world around, whether Jews or Gentiles, who earnestly watch for the halting of church officers; lest the stain of his character should bring a reproach upon the name, doctrine, and ways, of the Lord, and so the devil seize an advantage against him, to the hurt of his own soul, the marring of his usefulness, the discredit of religion, the triumph of its adversaries, the grief of the godly, and the stumbling of young converts. 8. The deacons also, whose office it is to manage the public funds of the church, ought to be men of a grave, decent, and venerable behaviour, and of good report; not given to speak one thing while they mean another, nor to talk contrarily at different times to serve a turn;—not indulgers of themselves in the too free use of intoxicating liquors, which would blemish their character, and render them unfit for their work;—not of an avaricious temper, that might tempt them to withhold from the poor, or apply it to their own use. 9. And, as to their religious character, they ought to be steadfast adherents to the pure, unmixed, but mysterious and incomprehensible, truths of the gospel, with all the sincerity of a heart purified by faith, and purged from an evil conscience, by the blood of Christ. 10. And it is proper that their qualifications, moral and religious, be well tried and manifest before they be admitted to their office. 11. And, if they are in a married state, their wives, for the credit of religion and of their husbands, ought to be of a grave, chaste, and decent, behaviour, free from all lightness of temper, words, dress, or deportment;—not slanderers, nor injurious tale-bearers, but watchful over their tongues and tempers; moderate in eating and drinking, and frugal in their management;—faithful to God, to their husbands, and every trust committed to them. 12. The deacons also, as well as the pastors, must have but one wife at a time, and should avoid all unlawful divorces; and, for an example to others, should rule

their conscience ^dseared with a hot iron ;

3 ^cForbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them who believe and know the truth.

4 ^eFor every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving :

5 ^bFor it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, ^kthou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained.

7 ^lBut refuse profane and old wives fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

8 For bodily exercise profiteth ^mlittle :
but godliness is profitable unto all things ;
ⁿhaving promise of the life that now is,
and of that which is to come.

9 ^oThis is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance.

10 ^pFor therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we ^qtrust in the living God, who is the ^rSaviour of all men, ^sspecially of those that believe.

12 ^uLet no man despise thy youth ;
but be thou an ^vexample of the believers, as to the ancient prophets, that, in some future period of the Christian dispensation, many professors will apostatize from the doctrines of Christ, and give heed to such as shall seduce them into idolatrous principles and practices, viz. the worshipping of angels and saints as a kind of subordinate gods or mediators ;

2. And who, under hypocritical pretences of zeal for religion, will utter falsehoods to delude their followers and establish their own authority ; and will refuse nothing, however wicked or absurd, to carry on their corrupt designs ; their consciences being as unaffected with the guilt or dreadful consequences of sin as flesh seared with an hot iron is incapable of feeling ; 3. And will forbid clergymen or others to marry, thus exposing them to temptations to unchastity ; and will prohibit the use of those wholesome meats, which God at first created for the sustenance of mankind, and which now, under the gospel dispensation, He allows all Christians their full freedom to use : 4. For every thing, as God made it, is answerable to the purposes for which he created it ; and nothing that is proper for food ought to be forbidden or scrupled, providing it be received with religious acknowledgments of God as the Author and Giver of it : 5.
For it is sanctified to our lawful use of it by the gospel of God, which has removed all ceremonial uncleanness from it, and by his commanding a blessing on it, in answer to our prayers before and after our meals. 6. If you, my dear son in the faith, warn the Christian brethren of this great apostasy, and other things which I have mentioned to you, you will act the part of an useful, wise, and faithful servant of Jesus Christ, ordering your ministrations suitably to the circumstances and dangers of the times, and as one who has thoroughly digested and experienced the pure doctrines of faith in Christ. 7. But, as for the fabulous traditions and useless genealogies, either of Jews or Heathens, have nothing to do with them ; but exercise yourselves with the utmost labour, diligence, and vigour, in promoting and exemplifying the doctrines and duties of true piety and obedience to God through Jesus Christ : 8. For no labour, in the mere external acts of religion, is either acceptable to God or useful to the souls of men ; but evangelical, vital, and practical, godliness in heart and life, is every way profitable, having manifold blessings annexed to it, by the promise God, in this life and in that which is to come. 9. And these promises of divine favours, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, are infallible in their accomplishment, and worthy of our highest regard, esteem, and entertainment, as they afford a rich encouragement to serve the Lord, and cleave to him amidst all difficulties, oppositions, and dangers : 10. Yea, in virtue of our assured trust in these promises of God,—who has all life in himself, and is the Bestower and Preserver of all created life ; and who is the providential Deliverer of all men, and the spiritual and eternal Saviour of true believers,—we patiently and cheerfully undergo the greatest fatigues and most abusive revilings in our holy ministrations, to advance his glory, interest, and kingdom, and gain souls to him. 11. These things therefore fully explain, and, by the authority of Christ, inculcate upon the consciences of your hearers ; 12. Endeavour also, by his gracious assistance, to acquit yourself therein with such diligence, gravity, good judgment, prudence, and fidelity, and such evidence of your faith, and experience of what you preach to others, that none may have occasion to slight and condemn your person or admonitions, your office, or administrations of it, on account of your youth. And, to prevent this, study to be always an amiable and shining example to other believers in the excellency of your doctrine and edifying discourse ; —in the regularity of your religious and moral behaviour ;—in the sincerity and ardour of your love to God, to Christ, and to immortal souls ;—in your spiritual mindedness, fervent zeal for God, and abounding in the fruits of the Spirit ;—in a steady and lively exercise and profession of your faith, and maintenance of the doctrines thereof ;—and in all chastity and purity of heart. 13. And, till I have an opportunity of seeing and further directing you, addict yourself to, and in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

13 ^rTill I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14 ^sNeglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

15 ^tMeditate upon these things ; give thyself wholly to them ; ^uthat thy profiting may appear ^vto all.

16 ^wTake heed unto thyself, and unto thy doctrine ; continue in them : for in doing this ^xthou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.

spend much of your time in, reading and praying over the holy scriptures, for the improvement of your own soul in gifts, graces, and comforts, that you may be the better qualified to instruct, exhort, and comfort others, for their conversion, or their establishment and growth in grace. 14. Yea, as God has richly furnished you with extraordinary gifts for his service, according to the predictions of the Spirit of God concerning you, and in consequence of your solemn ordination to your office by a meeting of church rulers, constituted in the name of Christ his Son, take care that you stir them up, and exercise and improve them to the best advantage. 15. Let the things which I have just now mentioned, and other important articles of divine revelation, be the constant subject of your most earnest meditation ; let your attention to, ministration of, and prayer for, a blessing upon them be the entire and delightful business of your life, that your proficiency in wisdom, gifts, and grace, and the experience of God's love, may in all things appear evident to all about you. 16. And, if you wish your ministerial labours to succeed, see that your heart be right with God, in its principles, frame, temper, motives, and ends ; that your gifts be duly cultivated, and the whole of your behaviour towards himself, or your fellow creatures, be well-pleasing in his sight through Christ ; and then take heed what doctrine you preach ; that it be sound, clear, important, and seasonable ; evangelical and practical ; and that it be well explained, confirmed, defended, and applied.
And in a constant, persevering, and increasing, study of this kind you will, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, be instrumental in promoting the spiritual and eternal salvation of yourself, and others who attend your ministry.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Dreadful plagues to the Christian church are apostasy and error, especially those of the Roman Antichrist ! and yet what a verification are they of the divinity of the scriptures in fulfilling their predictions ! Seducers in a most fearful manner turn things upside down, pretending sin to be duty, and what is lawful to be sin. But no uncertain traditions must be regarded in religion, and no bodily service must be rested in.—It is only lively practical religion that entails present or future blessings on men by the promise of God. And the more we labour for the spiritual edification of others, the more shall we be edified and fitted for our work.—With determined courage may ministers, or even Christians, both labour and suffer, if they trust firmly in God himself. And great exemplariness in faith, in love, in all holy conversation—much study of divine truth—much self-excitement—and heedfulness of their own state, temper, practice, and doctrine—is necessary to render ministers accepted of God in their work, or useful to souls. But it is infinitely absurd and criminal for ministers to indulge idleness, or apply themselves to worldly business, when their own and other men's eternal salvation so much depends upon their fidelity and diligence in their awful employment.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1, 2. And, as the most decent behaviour is necessary to protect you who are so young from contempt, take care that you reprove aged professors, and especially church rulers, when they fall into any sinful infirmity, with the utmost humility and meekness, treating them with all honour and respect ; but such as are young rebuke in a more free, yet meek, affable, affectionate, and evidently modest and pure manner. 3. Take care that Christian widows, who are poor, and have no relations able and willing to support them, be honourably provided for by the church. 4. But if any religious widows have children or grandchildren who are able to supply their necessities, let those children, from a conscientious regard to God, and gratitude to their mothers for their labour, care, and kindness, about them when young, exert themselves to provide for them ; for such behaviour is in itself equitable, worthy, honourable, and well-pleasing to God. 5. Now a widow, who is a proper and encour-

6 But she that liveth †in pleasure is dead while she liveth.

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But, if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own ||house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be *taken into the number, under threescore years old having been the wife of man,

10 Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows refuse: for, when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal °they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also, and busy-bodies, speaking things which they ought not.

14 I will therefore that the younger women Pmarry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary †to speak reproachfully.

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

raging object of the church's charity, is one, who, being destitute of relations to relieve her, trusts her temporal and eternal concerns to the care of God, and, in consequence thereof is addicted to daily and fervent prayer for his gracious fulfilment of his promises.

6. But the widow who gives up herself to a jovial, loose, and voluptuous, manner of life, under the power of carnal inclinations, appears dead in trespasses and sins while she enjoys a natural life; and renders herself unworthy of the care of either her friends or the church. 7. These things are of such importance to the edification of professors, and to the reputation, beauty, and order, of churches, that you ought solemnly to declare and enforce them in your public and private ministrations; that such persons may walk orderly, and occasion no reproach to the church for misapplying her charity. 8. And, if any professor unnaturally neglect, or refuse to do what he can for, the support of his near relations, and chiefly his aged parents, wife, and children, he ought to be held as a practical renouncer of the gospel of Christ, and worse than a mere Heathen.

9. Let no widow be admitted as an assistant to the deacons, in helping and ministering to the poor and sick, unless she be at least sixty years of age, and have lived in a chaste and faithful manner with her own husband.

10. Nor, indeed, unless she be well known to have faithfully and prudently discharged the duties of the married state, in the careful and religious education of her own children, and in hospitable and kind entertainment of strangers, particularly ministers and saints,—and in tender compassion to the afflicted;—and, in fine, unless she has laboured with care and diligence to perform every good office toward God or men, as opportunity offered.

11. But let no younger widows be admitted; for they will perhaps grow voluptuous and lascivious, contrary to their profession of Christ, and consult their own ease and pleasure rather than his glory; and at last, to get rid of their restraints and labours, marry into an Heathen family,

12. And thus expose themselves to shame and condemnation in the view of the world, to the censures of the church, and even to the righteous judgments of God here and hereafter, because of their rejection of their former Christian profession of faith in Christ, and desertion of the trust committed to them.

13. And moreover, young widows, addicted to pleasure, soon contract a habit of idleness, and trifle away their time in gadding abroad for their amusement; nay, they even grow impertinent, flirting, loose, and foolish talkers, officious pryvers and intruders into other people's affairs, and thus invent and carry about reports hurtful to the reputation and peace of their neighbours.

14. Instead therefore of admitting younger widows into the public service of the church, let them be allowed to marry in the Lord, if a proper opportunity offer itself; and in that station carefully educate the children which the Lord may give them, and manage their household and relative affairs with such faithfulness, prudence, diligence, sobriety and modesty, as shall oblige their enemies to forbear reproaching them, or the ways of Christ on their account.

15. I speak the more particularly and earnestly on this point, as some young widows have by the instigation of Satan, already turned aside from their Christian profession, and followed the sinful courses which I have just mentioned.

16. And I again insist that, if any have mothers or grandmothers, or other near relations, in widowhood, if capable, they shall supply their necessities, that the church stock, being eased of that burden, may be the more sufficient for the relief of such as have no friends able or willing to assist them.

17. It is very necessary that church rulers be duly provided for and honoured: let therefore all of them, who conduct themselves in a prudent and faithful manner, be reckoned worthy of high esteem and necessary maintenance; especially such of them as addict themselves to the painful and laborious work of faithfully preaching the gospel.

18. For the ancient law, which allowed the oxen, while treading out the corn, to eat of it for their necessary refreshment, plainly hinted that they, who employ their time and talents in instructing and governing

17 Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn: and, The labourer is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder receive not an accusation but ‡before *two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin, rebuke before all, that others also may fear.

21 I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things °||without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.

24 Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before the judgment; and some men they follow after.

CHAP. VI.

- (1) Prescribes the duty of servants towards their masters, whether believing or not; and charges Timothy to insist on it, in opposition to the judaizing teachers, who perverted the gospel; 1—5. (2) Shews the advantage of godliness with contentment, and the danger of a covetous pursuit after riches; 6—10: and inculcates upon Timothy to avoid worldly-mindedness, and follow piety and virtue; 11, 12. (3) Solemnly charges him to adhere faithfully

other church members, should, in return, partake of a liberal maintenance from such as receive spiritual benefit by them: and Jesus Christ has expressly declared that his labouring servants are worthy of a proper subsistence.

19. And as the support of their character is necessary to their usefulness, another branch of honour due to them is, that no accusation be received against them but before sundry witnesses, and where two or three credible persons are ready to confirm the truth of it.

20. But, if they, or any others, be found guilty of public and enormous crimes, they must, without respect of persons, be publicly rebuked in presence of the whole church, that others, as well as themselves, may be deterred from the commission of the like wickedness.

21. And as an impartial regard to the censuring of offenders, and to other things which I have mentioned, is of great importance to the church, and very irksome to the administrators, I solemnly charge you, as in the presence of the all-seeing and heart-searching God; and of Jesus Christ, the only Head of his church, who will shortly judge the quick and the dead; and of those holy angels whom he has chosen to everlasting happiness; and as you will answer at his tribunal at the last day;—to take heed that you maintain and practise these directions, without any partial respect to, or prejudice against, any man whatsoever.

22. But, in order that you may have as little of the disagreeable work of censuring church officers, as possible, be always extremely cautious, and careful and deliberate, in your enquiries into their character before they are admitted to their office: beware, lest, by any precipitant and unadvised steps, you render yourself a partaker in the guilt and mischievous influence of unsound and ungodly ministers.

24. For, as some men's erroneous principles and practices are so notoriously sinful as renders it a plain duty to refuse them admission to any office in the church, so there are others who can artfully conceal their sentiments and wickedness till after they have obtained a call or admission.

25. In like manner the religious sentiments, gifts, graces, and moral temper and behaviour, of some men are so remarkably good and manifest, as to render their admission perfectly clear,—while it will require much prudent, tender, and close, converse with others of a bashful and recluse temper, to satisfy a conscientious inquirer whether they be fit or not.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Aged persons, and such as are in office in the church, should be treated with great veneration even when overtaken in a fault. And with kind concern should the very youngest be cautioned and reproved for their sins of infirmity. Friends and church rulers should take great care of poor widows. And it is necessary for the credit of religion, that all widows behave in a grave, prudent, orderly, and holy, manner. Alas, that any of them, unaffected with their husband's departure into eternity, should ever wax wanton against Christ and his law!—It is not merely in acts of devotion, but in all our business, and particularly in managing our families, that we should serve God.—Church governors, particularly preaching elders, have a divine right, from both Old and New Testaments, to high respect and a liberal maintenance from their people, according to their ability. And what awful obligations to faithfulness in their work lie on ministers! they are Christ's deputies, and to him they must give an account. With great prudence, faithfulness, tenderness, courage, and impartiality, must they therefore proceed in rebuking the scandalous, or ordaining, other, church officers. And the damnation or salvation of souls is deeply connected therewith. An ignorant, careless, and scandalous, ministry is a great plague and reproach to a church. And it is hard for the most faithful to keep themselves from being partakers in other men's sins. But great is the mercy that Jesus, their master's blood, cleanseth from all sin. Yea, he kindly allows them a moderate use of creature refreshments as their labours and bodily infirmities require.

LET ^aas many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are ^bbrethren; but rather do them service, because they are ^cfaithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

3 ^cIf any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness;

4 ^dHe is [†]proud, knowing nothing, but [†]boasting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil-surmisings,

6 ^fBut godliness with contentment is great gain.

7 ^gFor we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

8 ^hAnd, having food and raiment, let us be therewith content.

9 ⁱBut they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10 ^kFor the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have ^{*}erred from the faith,

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. As some judaizing teachers, to the discredit of religion and the violation of natural rights, encourage slaves or other servants, when converted, to renounce their servitude, I earnestly admonish you on all proper occasions to instruct and urge servants, however enslaved, to honour, reverence, and obey, their Heathen masters; that so the honour of God and credit of the gospel may not be reproachfully stained as if it discharged men from their just obligations, and the natural or civil duties of their station. 2. And, if any Christian servants are so happy as to have masters of their own religion, let them prize it as a great privilege, and honour and obey them the more cheerfully, affectionately, and diligently, because they are faithful believers, beloved of God, and partakers of all the blessings of redemption through the blood of his Son. 3. If any man teach what is contrary to these directions, and does not, in heart, speech, and behaviour, embrace and practice the pure and salutary doctrines of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, concerning his person and offices, which is formed, designed, and blessed, for promoting practical religion in all the branches of piety towards God and relative duties towards men from regard to his authority; 4, 5. Notwithstanding all his pretences, profession, or station in the church, he is but a haughty, self-conceited, creature, puffed up by the vanity of his own mind, who knows nothing aright of the truth of the gospel, or of his own duty to God or to men; but, like a brain-sick person, is madly fond of impertinent, useless, and entangling questions, and empty disputes, about words rather than matter; and which are fit for nothing but to kindle and inflame invidious thoughts and passions, angry debates, blasphemous and reproachful railings, injurious and ill-grounded jealousies, preposterously curious, vain, and froward, disputings,—proper only for persons of erroneous minds and vicious inclinations, who are utter strangers to Christ and the gospel, and to the reality of grace in their hearts, and reckon religion only so far valuable as it is subservient to their carnal views. Have nothing to do with such persons; abhor their principles and practices; and, if they continue obstinate therein, let them be excluded from the church. 6. But, whatever such carnal men think,—true practical godliness, in which all suitable graces are exercised, in worshipping and serving God through Jesus Christ, under the influence of his Spirit, according to the gospel, attended with an holy and gracious contentment and satisfaction in the disposals of Providence towards us in this life, is the most pleasant, satisfying, and profitable, course that can be conceived, and incomparably preferable to an affluence of temporal enjoyments, which at best are empty, precarious, and perishing: 7. For, as we brought none of these earthly enjoyments with us into this world in our birth, but hold them by the mere bounty and sovereign disposal of God, so we must quickly leave them all behind us at death. 8. If then the kind providence of God supply us in this world with necessary food, raiment, and dwellings, we ought to be fully contented with our lot, and thankful for what we enjoy, as very good, nay best for us. 9. But they, whose hearts are set upon riches, and resolve to have them at any rate, as if they were their chief good, plunge themselves into manifold temptations to dishonesty and other wickedness, and into the deep defilement of many foolish and hurtful lusts and passions, which will effectually swallow them up in temporal and eternal destruction: 10. For an inordinate esteem of, and affection for, wealth is the pregnant source of all sinful, injurious, and miserable, principles and practices, in which, while some have indulged themselves, they have apostatized from their Christian profession and practice; and, instead of finding the satisfaction they and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

12 ^mFight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

13 ⁿI give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate ^owitnessed a good [†]confession;

14 ^pThat thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15 Which in his times he shall shew, who is ^qthe blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

16 Who ^ronly hath immortality, ^sdwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; ^twhom no man hath seen, nor can see: ^uto whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

expected, have plunged themselves into the most painful agonies of mind and distress of body. 11. But do you, Timothy, whom God hath so richly endowed with the gifts and graces of his Spirit, and who have solemnly devoted yourself to his service, abhor and flee from these corrupt principles, inclinations, and practices, and, in the strength of grace, earnestly endeavour after the richest attainments of the knowledge and exercise of righteousness in all your behaviour towards men,—and of strict and evangelical piety in all your dealings with God,—of faith in Christ, and in God through him,—of that love which is the fruit of faith—of patience amidst wants, perplexities, and sufferings,—and of an humble and gentle temper towards all men. 12. In this manner, contend earnestly for the doctrines of faith; and in the exercise of faith, fight, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, against the devil, the world, and the flesh: press forward in faith and holiness, till you obtain the full possession of that eternal life to which you were effectually called by the gospel, and to the honour of which you have, in your ordination, preaching, conversation, and sufferings, borne the most public and solemn testimony. 13. And, as this matter is of infinite importance to the glory of God and the salvation of multitudes, I solemnly charge you, in the name, and before the face of that all-seeing and almighty God who quickens dead souls, and will quickly raise the dead to the last judgment,—and by the authority, and in the presence, of Jesus Christ, the great Messiah; at whose awful tribunal you must quickly give an account of your conduct; and who, when arraigned before Pontius Pilate the Roman governor, set you a glorious example of courage and steadfastness, in bearing a free and open testimony to the truth, when he knew it would cost him his life. 14. That you faithfully and diligently, and to the end of your life, perform your ministerial work, and sincerely and exactly follow the instructions which I have given you,—in the full expectation of the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ to judge the world, and of the account we must give to him of our whole conduct: 15. Which appearance he will make in the most public view of angels and men in the appointed season thereof,—who in himself is the infinitely happy and all-sufficient God, the only supreme and almighty Ruler over, and source of, all authority to, all kings and lords on earth, being infinitely more glorious and excellent than any of them: 16. And who alone has an absolutely eternal life of glory and blessedness, originally, necessarily, unchangeably, and independently, in himself, and is infinitely pure and inconceivable in his nature, and manifests himself on his heavenly throne in inexpressible and unapproachable glories. 17. In view of the importance of your trust, and of that awful account which you and others are to give of your conduct, solemnly and faithfully charge those Christians, who have some share of worldly riches, to beware of being lifted up with pride, self-sufficiency, and contempt of others, or of trusting in earthly possessions, which are so precarious and fleeting; and teach them to put their whole confidence in the only living and true God, who, of his infinite mercy, freely bestows upon us all the blessings of time and eternity. 18. Charge them also that, instead of hoarding up their riches, or lavishly spending them on themselves, they do all the good they can with them; and study to abound in better riches, to their own and others' advantage, even in every good work which their affluence renders them capable of, cheerfully and liberally bestowing it in supplying the necessities of the poor, and promoting the cause of Christ: 19. Making Christ, and him crucified, the sole foundation of their hopes of eternal life, as a purchased possession, and proving and exercising their faith in works of liberality, which through Christ, shall be for ever graciously rewarded in heaven, when they shall have obtained the full possession of eternal life. 20. And, as it is a matter of infinite importance, let me conclude, solemnly beseeching you, my dear son and brother in Christ, carefully to maintain and hold fast the doctrines of the gospel pure and uncorrupted, and employ to the utmost all your gifts and graces in fulfilling your ministerial office according to the directions I have given you, as a sacred trust committed to you by the Lord Jesus, to be managed in his name and for his glory, and of which you must give him an account; and, for this purpose, avoid and detest the impious trifling and noisy talk of judaizing teachers, as well as the vain philosophy of the Greeks, by both which, under the name of knowledge, they wickedly carry on an opposition to the gospel of Christ; 21. And by an attachment to which some professed Christians have already lost sight of, and renounced, the doctrines of revelation.—And, to direct, establish, and prosper, you in all your important work, may the love and favour of God through Christ, in all its manifestations and fruits, be abundantly vouchsafed to you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—It is a great honour and encouragement to believing servants, that in Christ and the new covenant they are on a level with the highest. But it is base and reproachful to their profession to abuse this privilege as a reason of disregard to their masters, whether profane or religious.

The gospel was never designed to destroy civil distinctions, but to make men truly adorn them in performing the duties thereof. And the more kind and condescending masters are, the more respectful and obedient servants ought to be. Relative duties make a very important article of true Christian religion. And they who teach otherwise, or propagate any doctrine contrary to a holy practice, are evidently but troublesome, selfish, and worldly-minded, seducers. But they who are fond of disputes in religion are seldom tender in their practice.—There is no true godliness but what springs from gospel principles;—no true contentment with our lot but what springs from true godliness;—no true care but where our soul is our first and chief concern.—What a poor empty world is this, where no enjoyment is certain to us for a moment! Nature is satisfied with little, grace with less, and covetousness with nothing, however much! The love of money, and hastening to be rich, is very ruinous to men's souls and characters, and even to their estates. What need then have the rich to be humble amidst their affluence, which tempts so many to pride; and to place their faith, hopes, and delights, not in wealth, but in God through Christ! And carefully should they prove the sincerity of their faith by such genuine charity as will entail a gracious, but everlasting, reward. Large measures of gifts, grace, cares, and labours, are necessary for ministers to render them duly useful and faithful. For the opposition they will meet with is great, and their account very awful and solemn.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1. I Paul,—called and qualified to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the free and sovereign appointment of God the Father, to bear witness to, and preach, the once crucified, but now risen and exalted, Saviour among Jews, and especially Gentiles; according to the promise of eternal life, which was given in him before the foundation of the world, and in due time made to Abraham, to be fulfilled in his divine seed, by whom that life is purchased and dispensed, and in whom it is deposited; and which is obtained through faith in him, 2. To Timothy, my dear son in the faith, of whose conversion to Christ, and appointment to the ministry, God made me the honoured instrument—with the most abundant and manifold manifestations and effects of God's free favour and infinite compassion; and all peace and prosperity, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, from God the Father, as the first Mover in the work of our salvation, and from Jesus Christ, our common Lord and Saviour, as the mediatorial purchaser and bestower thereof. 3. I heartily thank and praise that only true God, whom, after the example of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and other pious ancestors, I now religiously worship and adore with a heart and conscience purified by faith in the blood of his Son, that, in my daily prayers, morning, evening, or at noon, I am particularly led out to recommend you to his grace and care, 4, 5. Being exceedingly desirous to see you once more before my approaching death, that I may leave with you my dying charges and paternal instructions;—and my desire is much inflamed by my deep and lively remembrance of that affectionate and filial grief which you manifested at our last parting, and of the manifold evidence you have given of that sincere and unfeigned principle of faith which dwells in your heart, as it did in the heart of your worthy mother and grandmother. 6. Therefore, in my great affection for you, and in consideration of God's distinguished favour in so remarkably dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy 'mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

fitting you for ministerial service, I again earnestly beseech you, by diligent reading, meditation, and prayer, to cherish, improve, and stir up to action, those spiritual gifts which were so plentifully and freely bestowed upon you in your ordination to the sacred office of an evangelist. 7. And let no opposition of adversaries discourage you from, or in, the exercise of it; for God has not formed in us a cowardly temper of fear or timidity, but a spirit of holy fortitude and undaunted courage, to encounter all difficulties and danger,—and of fervent love to Christ, his cause, people, and the souls of men,—and of a sober and judicious government of ourselves, in stedfastly adhering to, and patiently suffering for, the gospel of Christ. 8. Never then be discouraged in, or ashamed of, bearing a bold and open testimony to our Lord Jesus, and to his gospel, in which he attests his own character and work by the declarations and influences of his Spirit,—or of owning, vindicating, and visiting, me his imprisoned apostle; but let your whole soul be animated to sympathize with me and others in our persecutions, and cheerfully to endure the like yourself, for the sake of the gospel, in an humble dependance upon the supporting, encouraging, and strengthening, assistance of that God of infinite mercy and grace, 9. Who, to glorify himself and furnish us for every good word and work, has provided for us an almighty Saviour, and a free, infinite, and everlasting, salvation in him;—and has by the gospel, and the influences of his Spirit, effectually called us to holiness and happiness,—not as influenced by any foresight of our good works, but entirely of his own free favour, according to his sovereign purpose and his mere unmerited kindness, which was fixed upon us in Christ our Head, before the world was created: 10. Which gracious purpose lay, from eternity, as a secret in the mind of God, and was long concealed under dark types and predictions,—but is now discovered with illustrious brightness, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to purchase and apply our redemption;—who, by dying for our sins in our nature and stead, and rising again as our conquering Head, has taken away the sting of death, broken its power, and turned it into a blessing to them that believe, and delivered them from eternal death;—and who, by the preaching of the gospel, has made a certain and plain revelation of a blessed, excellent, spiritual, and eternal, state of happiness and glory for both soul and body in the heavenly world, and of the proper means of our arriving at it through him: 11. For the ministration of which glorious gospel I am immediately furnished and commissioned by Jesus Christ, as an authentic publisher and inspired messenger, to declare unto men, especially the Gentiles, the glad tidings of salvation therein contained, that they may hear and believe to the saving of their souls: 12. And it is for my faithfulness and zeal in discharging that office that I now actually suffer all the disgrace and severities of my present imprisonment, and am daily expecting martyrdom; but, in consideration of the glorious excellency of the cause, instead of being ashamed of Christ, or of his or my sufferings, I glory in them, and have the most joyful expectation of a happy issue of them in the future state:—for, in the light of God's word, and upon long trial and experience, I well know what a gracious, all-sufficient, faithful, and divine, Saviour he is whom I have received and relied on by faith,—and on the most certain and infallible grounds am persuaded that he has a firm purpose, full power, authority and will, to secure my soul, and all its eternal concerns, with which I have intrusted him, against the day of the last judgment, in which the everlasting misery or happiness of every man will be publicly, solemnly, and unalterably, decided. 13. Whatever trials therefore you meet with or may expect, in the cause of Christ, see that, encouraged by my example of faith, patience, and hope, you keep in memory, cleave to, and resolutely profess, and publish, the platform of the uncorrupted, wholesome, nourishing, and healing, doctrines of the gospel so productive of faith and love, which I have taught you by word or writing—as things which you, through Christ's grace, heartily believe and love,—and in order that faith in and love to him may be produced among your hearers. 14. And those useful and edifying gifts and doctrines, and that ministerial office, which have been committed to you in your ordination, see that you faithfully maintain and improve, by the assistance of the Holy Ghost, who, in his person and influences, dwells in us, and other faithful ministers and believers, to enable us to fulfil the duties of our station in the face of all opposition and danger. 15. In these things you ought to be the more faithful and diligent, as you cannot but know, to your grief, that the generality of the Asian professors of Christianity, at least those here at Rome, have shamefully deserted me in my present sufferings, as being afraid or ashamed to stand by me in them. 16—18. But may the God of all grace multiply his merciful favours, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, upon the family of Onesiphorus, as a return for his distinguished kindness to me; for, notwithstanding the cowardice of pretended friends and the fury of open enemies, with a truly Christian courage and compassion, he often relieved, comforted, and refreshed me in my various distresses, by his kind visits and necessary supplies.—Yea, instead of being ashamed of me, or my ignominious imprisonment and reproach, from love to Christ and his cause, and to me, when he came to Rome, he took great pains to inquire after and obtain access to me.—May that Lord Jesus, for whose sake he shewed me this kindness, according to the riches of his grace, reward him, not only in this world, but especially in that which is to come, mercifully owning him in the last judgment before his Father and an assembled world, and publicly adjudging him to eternal life.—And you know that at Ephesus, in many instances and forms, he supplied and comforted me under my trouble.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It is delightful for ministers to have a clear call from Christ to their work, remarkable success in it, and an habitual practice answerable to it. It is a singular mercy to have religious parents; and great is the blessing when God's grace is continued from age to age in a family. Happy they who receive the gospel with unfeigned faith and love, and serve God with pure hearts, after the example of pious progenitors, and diligently apply themselves to propagate it to others. For O the transcendent excellency of the gospel! It promises eternal life through Christ; it lays open the gracious purposes of God; it is the mean of our effectual calling by his power and grace; it

(1) Exhorts Timothy, in Christ's strength, courageously, diligently, patiently, and perseveringly, to labour in his ministerial work, in hopes of an happy issue; 1—13. (2) Warns him against unprofitable and erroneous doctrines and teachers; 14—18. (3) Comforts him that God would maintain his church and save his elect, though different sorts of professors would always be found in her while on earth; 19—21. manifests death conquered, and immortal blessedness secured for men in Christ. Who would not delight to be an authorized teacher of it! Who would not, without fear or shame, cheerfully undergo the severest persecution for the sake of it and its blessings! Who would not, on the footing of it, commit his eternal salvation to the care of God!—A deep concern to discharge their office and improve their gifts; a holy fortitude, love, sobriety, wisdom, and sound judgment; great regard of, love to, sympathy with, and earnest prayers for, their fellow labourers, should signalize every minister of Christ. And infinite is the mercy that, when some shamefully desert the cause of Christ and his persecuted servants, others are, by his grace, emboldened to own and regard them; nor shall they in the last judgment lose their gracious reward.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Considering therefore the importance of your work, and the danger of mistakes in it, or apostasy from it, I beseech you, my dear Son in the faith, fellowship, and ministry, of the gospel, not to be self-confident, nor to trust in any grace that you have already received; but always to depend on the inexhaustible fund of grace which is treasured up in Christ your Head, and in the free favour of God, residing, manifesting, and exhibiting itself, in him, that out of his fulness you may continually receive grace for grace. 2. And, setting out in this strength for every duty, and for propagating the true doctrines of the gospel, which are so abundantly attested by the law and the prophets, and which, in a most public manner, I committed to your trust at your ordination,—take heed that you transmit them pure and uncorrupted to such other ministers as manifest themselves faithful believers, who have the glory of Christ and the welfare of souls at heart, and are furnished with knowledge and utterance, gifts and graces, to dispose and qualify them for explaining, proving, defending, and applying, the whole counsel of God to their hearers. 3. And, as your office and work are so honourable, let no difficulties nor dangers discourage you; but, considering your sufferings as lying in the way to victory and triumph, act always with holy resolution, vigour, and courage, like a good soldier, that voluntarily fights in the cause, and under the banner of Jesus Christ, who is able and willing to support you under, and carry you through all your toils and troubles, and to crown them with everlasting honours. 4. And, to carry on the allusion, you must give yourself wholly to your ministerial work:—must not follow any civil calling, unprofitable reading, or unnecessary diversion, to entangle your thoughts or swallow up your time; but your whole time, thoughts, words, and actions, must be occupied in the spiritual service of Christ your sovereign Lord, that you may acquit yourself agreeably to his will who has appointed, called, and authorized, you to fight the good fight of faith, till you lay hold on eternal life. 5. And, in allusion to the laws of combatants in the Grecian games, you, who have entered into the service of Christ, must exert yourself, with the utmost labour and diligence, according to the prescriptions of his word, for overcoming all the opposition of sin, Satan, and the world, as ever you expect that Christ should crown you with a glorious reward. 6. Yea, again, to allude to labourers in a field or vineyard, you must first be laborious in preaching the gospel for the glory of Christ and good of souls, and wait with patience for the coming of the Lord, when you shall abundantly share the fruits of your work. 7. Consider these things seriously, that you may look on yourself as a soldier, combatant, and husbandman, in the work of the Lord, and may expect labours and hardships in attending your service, but comfortably hope for a blessed and gracious reward at the end of it. And may the Lord Jesus enable you thoroughly to understand and practise these instructions, and every other thing which concerns you, as a Christian or minister of Christ. 8. The grand article which I enjoin you constantly to bear in mind, for your own support and encouragement under your trials and sufferings; and to preach to others, for their conversion and establishment in the faith and hope of the gospel; is, that Jesus, the anointed Saviour, who, according to the flesh, proceeded from the loins of David the renowned king of Israel, having suffered unto death as a sacrifice for sin, was raised from the dead for our justification, according to those glad tidings of salvation which I have laboured to preach chiefly among Gentile sinners: 9. For the preaching of which I am at present persecuted and restrained as an evil doer, not fit to live; but thanks be to God that, though I am restrained from preaching the gospel in my wonted manner, yet it is still doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: For, if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman, that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain babblings; for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymeneus and Philetus;

18 Who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.

19 Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his.

published far and wide with remarkable success by others, and even confirmed by my patient and joyful sufferings for its sake. 10. And, in view of that which God hath and will do by the ministrations of it, I cheerfully submit to all the distresses which are or can be laid upon me, from a principle of love and zeal for the spiritual and eternal welfare of those whom God has from eternity chosen to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth,—that they, encouraged by my example, may be induced to believe, cordially embrace, and boldly profess, the truth and excellence of the gospel, notwithstanding the violence and persecution of the times; and may, in this way of God's appointment, arrive at the full possession of that eternal blessedness and glory which is purchased by and reserved in Christ, and to be enjoyed in immediate fellowship with him. 11. Nor is this doctrine of Christ's death and resurrection, and the future glory of his people, more important than true and comfortable; for if, in conformity to him in his death, and by virtue derived from him, we, in our state of vital union with him, be dead to sin and to this world, and willing to lay down our lives for his sake, we also in conformity to him, in and by the power of his resurrection, shall certainly be quickened, and raised up to a glorious and eternal life, with him in the heavenly state. 12. If we patiently endure reproach and trouble for his sake, as he did for ours, we shall also be exalted to sit with him on his throne, as kings and priests unto God; but if, for fear of losing our worldly honours, ease, wealth, liberty, or life, we, as ashamed of him, renounce our profession of his truth, or give up our Christian practice, he also will be ashamed of us, and publicly profess, before an assembled world of angels and men, that he never approved of nor accounted us his children or servants. 13. And, whether we believe these comfortable truths on the one hand, or awful denunciations on the other, he, who is the God that cannot lie, the faithful and true witness, will certainly perform his gracious promises to all true believers, and execute his just threatenings on apostates. For it is not consistent with the perfection of his nature or will to act contrary to his settled declarations of mercy or judgment. 14. Of these points, so closely connected with the eternal salvation of souls, seriously and solemnly, on the authority, and as in the presence of Christ, put them in mind, who are in, or may be admitted to, the ministerial office; that they may attend to what is really substantial, and not to trifling debates, which tend only to puzzle men's minds, and pervert them from the truth of the gospel. 15. And let it be your constant care to yield and manifest yourself as a faithful and approved servant of God, who has no occasion to be ashamed on account of neglect, unskilfulness, unfaithfulness, or imprudence; but who, with care and judgment, separates between truth and error, things important and trifling; and applies the word of God to men according to their circumstances; and, by ministration and example, marks out before them the right way of truth, holiness, and happiness. 16. But always avoid and oppose all irreverent, defiling, and noisy, but daring and empty discourses, which degrade the nature or perfections of God, or the purity of the gospel;—for these will gradually render men more and more erroneous and profane; 17. And will by degrees infect, and, as it were, incurably eat out, the whole system of truth and vitals of religion in the church, as too plainly appears in the case of Hymeneus and Philetus. 18. Who by such vain babblings have been carried away from the truths of revelation into the most destructive errors, supposing that whatever Christ, or any of the inspired writers, have spoken of the resurrection of the dead is to be taken mystically, with respect to some events already past, and not to any resurrection of the bodies of men at the last day; and by their bold and subtle reasonings they have seduced some from the truth which they once professed. 19. But, notwithstanding all this, the doctrine of the general resurrection is certainly a fundamental truth of God, sealed by his miraculous approbation of the preachers of it. And, notwithstanding such melancholy instances of apostasy, the electing purposes and gracious promises of God—and Jesus Christ, as the sure foundation

And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honour, and some to dishonour.

21 If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.

23 But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.

24 And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient;

25 In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth;

26 And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will.

CHAP. III.

The apostle (1) Foretells the rise of Antichristian or other dangerous enemies to the truth and holiness of the gospel; 1—9. (2) Proposes his own example for Timothy's imitation, in opposition to them; 10—13. (3) Exhorts him to perseverance in the doctrines which he had learned from him, and from the scriptures, which are inspired by God, and sufficient to direct to salvation; 14—17 of eternal salvation, and the state and structure of grace built upon him—shall remain firm and unchangeable; plainly manifesting that, whatever becomes of others, the Lord will claim, and for ever keep, through faith unto salvation, those whom he chose in Christ before the world began, and in time united to him by faith; and that, as holiness and happiness are inseparably connected in the decree, and every step of the execution of it, all such as profess to trust in Christ for eternal happiness must labour, in heart and life, to keep at the furthest distance from sin.

THIS know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

20. But, as in the houses of great men there are vessels of different materials, excellency, and use; so in the visible church there are ministers and professors, some excellent, honourable, and approved of God, and others who are mean, contemptible, dishonourable to, and disapproved by, him.

21. If any one, who claims a share in the blessings, privileges, and services of the great Lord of the church keep himself from corrupt teachers, errors, and practices, he will appear formed for the noblest purposes, and purified, consecrated, and qualified, by the Holy Ghost, for whatever use he may be called to.

22. And, if you, Timothy, would approve yourself to God, and to your own conscience, in the discharge of your work, labour diligently by his grace to flee from all youthful ambition, self-conceit, rashness, or sensuality, and in your preaching and practice pursue after what relates to righteousness before God and men, faith in, and fidelity to, Christ, and to God through him, and to a charitable and peaceable temper and carriage towards all those worshippers of him whose hearts are sincere, and consciences purified by his blood.

23. But shun, as an infectious plague, all impertinent, fruitless, inquiries and debates, knowing for certain that they tend only to beget angry contentions, to the disturbance of the church and the hindrance of the success of the gospel.

24. It is very unbecoming for any minister of the gospel of peace, or even private Christian, to engage in disputes with a litigious temper of spirit; yea, on the contrary, he ought to be kind and courteous towards all men, conveying the truth into their minds in the most clear and scriptural manner, patiently bearing with their infirmities, and even their prejudices.

25. Endeavouring to win upon the adversaries of truth by softness, calmness, and sweetness, of temper, as well as by strength of argument,—in hopes that God in due time may convince them of their error, and lead them to embrace and boldly profess the truth as it is in Jesus;

26. And that by these means they may be awakened out of the ensnaring errors and practices by which they had been lulled asleep and intoxicated, and in which Satan had caught and held them fast as captives, to be enslaved, domineered over, and ruined, by him, according to his malicious will and pleasure.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Ministers have need always to depend on, and receive constant supplies from, the inexhaustible grace of Jesus Christ. And transcendent is their encouragement to depend on, confess, and honour, him. He is raised from the dead: his purpose, his promise, his love, secure his people's salvation, while, in the most endearing manner, they oblige and animate them to depart from iniquity. They, who bravely suffer for him in this world, shall for ever gloriously reign with him in the next; and in the last judgment he will proceed according to his promises and threatenings in his word. With great care and openness ought the gospel ministry to be committed to able and faithful persons. And with what careful disentanglement from secular affairs—what readiness to undergo the hardest labours or sufferings—what deep concern for the eternal salvation of the elect—what desire to approve themselves to Christ as faithful, diligent, and prudent—what zealous avoiding of dangerous errors—what exemplariness in practice—what care, by scripture arguments and Christian tempers, to convince and reclaim the erroneous or unruly—ought they to begin and persevere in their work! Happy is it if by all these they become instruments of recovering souls out of the hand of the devil! Alas, how few called ministers have these things written on their heart and exemplified in their conduct!

laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, stood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: 'men of corrupt minds, †reprobate concerning the faith.

for their folly shall be manifest unto all men, as their's also was.

came unto me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; what persecutions I endured:
but out of them all the Lord delivered me.

12 Yea, 'and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. And there is the more need that you and other ministers show me with the greatest faithfulness and caution, as, even in the gospel period, manifold troubles, persecutions, and especially corruptions in doctrines and manners, will gradually work in the church, till they issue in the great apostasy of Popery, toward the latter part of his dispensation: 2. For a set of men shall arise, under the Christian name, who shall be of a notoriously selfish spirit, aiming merely at their own secular honour and ease, without any regard to the good of others; insatiable in their desires and pursuits after the riches of this world;—vain-glorious boasters of their own endowments, advantages, and merits;
—defamers of Christ's offices, people, doctrines, and ways;—undutiful to parents, contemning their authority over their children;—basely ungrateful to God, princes, and other benefactors. 3. Destitute of that natural affection due to relations and neighbours!—perfidious violators of the most solemn engagements, promises, and contracts;—false and diabolically malicious accusers of others;—abandoned to ungovernable lusts and passions;—furious and cruel in their tempers and treatment of others;—contemners and haters of persons or things that are good; 4. Betrayers of civil or sacred trusts, or of their neighbours and relations;—headstrong, rash, daring, and precipitant, in their words and behaviour;—puffed up with self-conceit of their own excellencies or prerogatives;—entirely addicted to sensual pleasures; 5. Cloaking and disguising their horrible wickedness with fair shows of holiness and zeal for Christ, and many external forms of piety and devotion, while they remain utter strangers and enemies, in both heart and life, to their powerful influences.—Such false pretenders to the Christian name abhor and reject, and hold no spiritual fellowship with them as church members; 6. For many of them are extremely subtle in their insinuations; with a shew of innocence, they will, like snakes, wind themselves into families, pry into their secrets, and exercise an absolute tyranny over their estates and consciences, and surprisingly entice and ensnare the hearts and affections of weak women, or other simple and ignorant persons, who are under the power of sinful lusts and passions, and are easily misled by every thing which soothes and flatters their corrupt inclinations; 7. And so are always running after every new teacher, and imbibing every new doctrine,—and hence never attain to any clear, judicious, and saving, knowledge of the true gospel of Christ. 8. Now, as the two famous magicians of Egypt set themselves, by wicked reasonings and false miracles, to oppose Moses, when he came, by God's appointment, to deliver the Hebrews from their bondage; so will these Popish or other false teachers set themselves in opposition to the scriptures and truths of Christ, and to his servants, whom he hath sent to preach spiritual deliverance to the captives of sin, Satan, and their lusts,—having their minds altogether corrupted with ignorance, error, and vice, and quite alienated from the pure doctrines or grace of faith; 9. Nevertheless, God shall limit and restrain, and in due time stop, their success, and manifest to all men the folly and madness of their sinful opinions, and the baseness of their conduct, as he did in the case of the Egyptian magicians. 10, 11. But, to guard you against all such seducers, and their corrupt principles and practices, I recommend to your imitation what you have seen in my behaviour;—for, having been so long my companion in travels and ministrations, you cannot but thoroughly understand the excellent doctrine, according to godliness, which I taught;—and my self-denying, holy, and religious, conversation in a manner answerable to those doctrines;—the sincerity and steadiness of my aims as I pursued for promoting the glory of God and good of souls;—my fidelity in preaching the pure gospel of Christ, under the power of that faith which I have in him, and endeavour to promote in others;—
the forbearance and lenity which I have all along shewn toward the weak, ignorant, or unteachable; the love which I have shewn to God, to Christ, and the souls of men, and the patience I have exercised;—under all the abuse and persecution which I have, in different places, met with for the sake of the gospel;—
but under all which, for your and others' encouragement, the Lord graciously supported, and at last delivered, me. 12. And indeed, such is the general corruption of mankind in every age, particularly in this, that whosoever will tion of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for in-

CHAP. IV.

Paul (1) Most solemnly charges Timothy to be diligent in his ministrations, as an apostasy from the truth was advancing; 1—5.
(2) Encourages him, from his own approaching but glorious and happy martyrdom; 6—8. (3) Desires him to come to Rome as quickly as possible, and bring Mark and some certain things with him,—as his brethren there were generally gone, or sent off from him; 9—13. (4) Cautions against Alexander the coppersmith; but trusts that God, who had stood by him, would always preserve and support him; 14—18. (5) Concludes with salutations, and his usual benediction; 19—22.

I 'CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ,
'who shall judge the quick and the dead
at his appearing and his kingdom;

2 'Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season; 'reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine.

* Luke 14. 23. Hos. 8. 1. Prov. 25. 11. Acts 20. 7. 1 Tim. 5. 20. Tit. 2. 15. & 1. 9, 11, 13. ch. 2.

resolutely and perseveringly live in a truly religious manner, in an holy profession of Christ's name, in his strength and after his example, and according to the rule of his word, will be exposed to suffering for his sake; and God has appointed that all his mystical members, like himself, shall, through much tribulation, enter into their eternal glory. 13. But hypocritical professors, and particularly seducers, instead of submitting to suffering for righteousness' sake, refuse nothing to avoid it, and are continually going further and further into error, violence, and wickedness, doing all they can to seduce others to follow them, while themselves are miserably deceived by Satan and their own lusts.
14. But, whatever others do, see that you, Timothy, stedfastly and immoveably continue in their belief, profession, and preaching, of the pure, uncorrupted, and important, doctrines of the gospel, which you have embraced upon the fullest conviction, having learned them from Jesus Christ, the faithful and true Witness, by the ministrations of me his immediately-commissioned and well-attested servant; 15. And which, by means of your early religious education, you cannot but perceive to be entirely consonant to the writings of the Old Testament, which were indited by the Holy Ghost, and delivered by holy men about holy things; and which contain all the principles of, and directions, obligations, and motives to, holiness; and, together with those of the New, are, by the blessing of God, sufficient and effectual to instruct you in every important truth, and render you duly wise in every thing necessary to the obtaining of eternal salvation through faith in Christ. 16. All these writings of the Old and New Testament are of a divine original, God having, by his Spirit, directed and inspired holy men to deliver them exactly according to truth;—and they are of manifold and excellent use for revealing important doctrines concerning himself and ourselves, our duty to him and to one another, and concerning our state by nature and grace, and the whole scheme of salvation through a Redeemer;—or for reproofing and convincing of, and reclaiming from, sins and errors;—or for directing how to obtain righteousness in Christ, and derive renewing and sanctifying virtue from him, to render us holy in heart and life; 17. That, by this absolutely perfect rule of faith and practice, every Christian, and particularly ministers, may be perfected in knowledge, faith, and holiness, and thoroughly furnished, in their station, to instruct, convince, and comfort, others.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—There is great need to be well-furnished with the knowledge and grace of the gospel in these perilous times. And it is dreadful to think how many selfish, worldly-minded, vain-glorious, proud, ungrateful, impious, profligate, professors of Christianity are in the world. With wonderful art and assiduity seducers propagate their delusions, and entice followers, especially the ignorant and unsettled. But great is the mercy that God has them under his controul, and can confute, restrain, or expose them, whenever he pleases. And it is very necessary for ministers to avoid connection with them.
It is a great honour and happiness for the church when Christ's ministers are proper patterns of soundness in doctrine;—of stedfast regard to the honour of Christ and welfare of souls; of faith and faithfulness; and of lenity, love, and patience, under troubles; and are sharers in happy and wonderful deliverances.
It is a mercy to have early instruction in the oracles of God, and to persevere in adherence to the truths therein contained. For complete is the authority, ful-ness, and fitness, of the scripture for instructing, directing, exciting, and encouraging, men in every necessary sentiment, word, or work. May they make me wiser than my teachers, and be my heritage for ever!

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Since therefore you are so much surrounded by enemies, and so richly furnished with the infinitely excellent and useful oracles of God, and the gifts and graces of his Spirit, I solemnly charge you, as in the immediate presence of the all-seeing God and heart-searching Saviour, and as you will answer it to him, when he shall appear in all the glories of his divine and mediatorial dignity to judge the world. 2. Preach the inspired truths of God with the utmost earnestness, diligence, and perseverance, on the Lord's day, or other

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

8 Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.

15 Of whom be thou aware also; for he hath greatly withstood our words.

16 At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.

17 Notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.

18 And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen occasions,—in times of peace and of persecution, in public or in private, as often as you have opportunity;—and in a free, open, and faithful, declaration of the whole counsel of God—with all meekness, patience, constancy, and perseverance—apply them as occasion offers, for convincing, reproving, and reclaiming the erroneous and immoral, and for counselling, exhorting, and encouraging, believers to go on in the way of righteousness.

3. For, as already some Jews, so hereafter many pretended Christians, being, through their own pride, lusts, passions, and prejudices, provoked at and enraged against the wholesome, pure, unmixt doctrines of the gospel, will not endure to hear them, but will seek out, and multiply to themselves, such false teachers as will tickle their ears with new and unscriptural notions, agreeable to their vitiated taste; 4. And through their love of novelties, to gratify their curiosity and corrupt inclinations, will turn a deaf ear to the truths of the gospel, and eagerly listen to, and favourably embrace, every vain, empty, or senseless, story, to amuse themselves and keep their consciences easy:

5. Be therefore on your guard against such persons and their errors, and take every opportunity to confute them and establish the truth in opposition to them: watch against all temptation, and over your own spirit and conduct, and for the souls committed to your care, in every circumstance. Bear, with meekness and patience, whatever tribulations your adversaries bring upon you; and, notwithstanding all their attempts to dishearten and silence you, go on in the name and strength of the Lord, thoroughly performing all the parts of your ministry with fidelity, care, and diligence, to the edification of believers and the conviction of gainsayers. 6. For as for me, I am on the point of pouring out my blood, as a martyr for Christ, and in confirmation of the doctrines which I have preached; and the time when my soul shall leave my body, and depart from earth to heaven, there to be for ever with the Lord, and my body be dissolved into its original dust, is now at hand. 7. Yet in this situation I have the comfortable testimony of the Spirit of God, and of my own conscience, that I have been enabled to act, like a good soldier of Jesus Christ, with courage, fidelity, and success, in fighting under his banner and direction against all his and his church's enemies. I have held on my way, through all the trials, labours, and difficulties, to which I have been called; and am just finishing my course of life, obedience, suffering, and services: and I have all along lived by faith on the pure doctrines of the gospel, and been faithful in professing, publishing, and defending, them, and acting agreeably to them.

8. And the rich experience I have had of the grace of God assisting, animating, and succeeding me in my work, encourages my joyful hope and confidence that I shall in a little time receive that glorious reward which is laid up in Christ and reserved in heaven,—that perfection of holiness and happiness, purchased by his righteousness; and which he, as the faithful and righteous Judge of the world shall publicly and freely bestow upon me in the last judgment; and not only on me, but on all those who have by faith, and with pleasure and suitable preparation, waited, looked, longed, and hoped, for his second and glorious appearing.

14, 15. Alexander the coppersmith, has by his false accusations and otherwise, proved a most malicious and bitter enemy to me. I therefore leave him, as an utter and irreclaimable apostate, to the righteous vengeance of God, to be punished according to his deeds in time and eternity. Beware of him, for he has violently set himself against, and inflexibly opposed, the gospel of salvation, which I preach to the Gentiles as well as Jews. 16, 17. At my first appearance to take my trial before the emperor Nero, none of my Christian friends, who might have been of use to me, had courage enough to own and countenance me, or to appear as witnesses on my behalf, but all deserted me, as his disciples did my Master Christ. I heartily pray the Lord may forgive them their sin in so doing, and render them deeply penitent for it. But, while they deserted me, my almighty and fast friend, the Lord Jesus, appeared for me, and strengthened me by his Spirit to make such a bold and plain representation of my cause, as fully manifested that the gospel, in its matter and success, is of God, and no way hurtful to the interests of civil government, and gave many of the Gentiles who were present an opportunity of hearing it; yea, he marvellously delivered me from the rage and cruelty of the emperor, who, under the influence of his father the devil, sought to destroy me. 18. And, by his word and my past experience, I have an entire confidence in his power, faithfulness, and grace, that he will always keep me from doing any thing unworthy of the Christian or minister, though it be to escape the most cruel persecutions or death, and enable me, with faith and patience, to persevere in his way till he transport me to his glorious kingdom above.

22. May the Lord Jesus dwell in, and fill all the powers of, your soul with his presence, graces, and influences,—to guide, support, strengthen, comfort, and sanctify, you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Ministers, as well as others, have great need to be excited to their work by serious reflections on the last, the general judgment.—How extensive is their office! There is need of much activity, patience, perseverance, boldness, and impartiality—and happy and honoured are they who are faithful—in it. Christ stands by, assists, and delivers, them in their warfare, and at last graciously rewards them, and all his friends, with inexpressible blessedness. And it is a mercy to have him with us when some basely desert or oppose us, or are necessarily at a distance from us. To what dreadful lengths in wickedness apostates from Christ will go! and to what certain ruin they expose themselves! But not the best can stand fast, unless the Lord Jesus be with their spirit.

TO

T I T U S.

This epistle, as well as the two preceding to Timothy, chiefly contains directions for those in the ministerial office. Titus, to whom it was written, was a Gentile, early converted to Christ, perhaps by Paul's ministry. Being found faithful and diligent in the improvement of his spiritual gifts and evangelical trusts, Paul left him in Crete, now Candia, a large island in the Mediterranean sea,—as an Evangelist, to put in order the affairs of that infant church.—In this epistle, he directs him to appoint proper officers, who might, by their life and doctrine, confute the judaizing preachers and wicked Heathens; chap. i.: and to recommend, by his example and instruction, a truly religious behaviour to Christian professors in every station, answerable to that grace of the gospel, which they had heard and experienced; ii. iii.

CHAP. I.

Here Paul (1) Asserts his apostolic character, salutes Titus, and reminds him of the work for which he had left him at Crete; 1—5. (2) Describes the qualifications of a faithful pastor; 6—9. (3) Represents the wicked temper and practices of Judaizing teachers, who ought to be zealously confuted: 10—16.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Paul, —who, as a Christian and minister, is the devoted servant of the ever blessed God, and who is graciously dignified with the commission, qualifications, and powers, of an extraordinary messenger of Jesus Christ, to preach his gospel of salvation in all at its extent to Gentiles, as well as Jews,—according to the doctrine of faith which is embraced by, and the means of working faith in, all those whom he chose for his peculiar people before the foundation of the world ; and according to their knowledge, approbation, and confession of its infallible truth, which is suited, designed, and made effectual to them for promoting practical godliness in heart and life, in all the duties thereof towards God or man : 2. Which truth is believed and professed, and godliness practised, in the exercise of a lively hope of the incorruptible and undefiled inheritance of eternal life, which the infinitely sincere and infallibly faithful JEHOVAH promised to them in Christ, as their Covenant head, before the world began, and quickly after the fall published to our first parents in paradise ; 3. And which now, in the fulness of time, he has clearly made known by the publication of his gospel, which is revealed and committed to me as his apostle, to dispense it to Gentiles as well as Jews, according to the express commandment of Jesus Christ our divine Saviour, from sin and wrath. 4. To his dearly beloved Titus, of whose instruction in the principles of the Christian religion, spiritual regeneration, and saving faith, God made him the instrument,—heartily wishes all the abundant manifestations of divine favour, and all peace and prosperity, in time or eternity, from God the Father as the fountain of all good, and from our Lord Jesus Christ as the revealer of, purchaser, and bestower of it. 5. You well know that I left you at Crete, when I departed from it, that you might complete whatever remained unfinished, with regard to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and manners, in the Christian congregations there planted ; and particularly, that, as an evangelist, you might preside in the election and ordination of teaching and ruling elders or bishops, to take the oversight of the professed Christians in every city there, and feed them with knowledge and understanding according to the orders which I left with you ; 6. Remember therefore that these overseers ought by all means to be persons of an unsponsored moral character, unblemished with polygamy or causeless divorce ;—careful to bring up their children in the nurture, admonition, and ways of the Lord ;—and never suffering them to live disgracefully in a luxurious, dissolute, refractory, ungovernable, disobedient, manner. 7. For the nature of an evangelical office, the honour of religion, and the good of souls, require that church rulers, particularly ministers, be under no reproach or scandal in their life and conversation, be not chargeable with neglect, unfaithfulness, or partiality in dispensing the mysteries of God ;—nor of a head-strong, conceited, obstinate, inflexible temper,—nor of a hasty spirit, falling into a passion upon every slight provocation ;—nor lovers of, nor addicted to, immoderate drinking of liquor ;—nor contentious and violent in their behaviour, ready to strike such as displease them ;—nor of a niggardly, sordid, covetous, spirit, bent to catch and keep all that they can of base worldly gain, by which the consciences of men are so frequently defiled : 8. But persons who take pleasure, on all proper occasions, to exert themselves in acts of benevolence, particularly to religious strangers, travelling preachers, and persecuted Christians ;—being hearty lovers and encouragers of whatever is good, having a cordial affection for all sincere and pious men,—and being modest and humble, grave and prudent, upright and faithful, in all they say or do ;—exemplarily holy in their whole conversation,—and chaste and moderate in their designs and pursuits after the pleasures of this life. 9. They ought also to be well enlightened and established in their faith and profession of the pure truths of the gospel, as they have learned them from their inspired writers and publishers ; that, by a due application thereof they may be able to comfort believers, and excite them to their duty ; and to confute

9 'Holding fast the faithful word, ||as he hath been taught; that he may be able, by sound doctrine, both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.

10 "For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, especially they of the circumcision :

14 ^dNot giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 ^oUnto the pure all things are pure : but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure ; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

16 They profess that they know God ; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work *†*reprobate.

CHAP. II.

Directs Titus, with all becoming authority; 15. (1) To inculcate upon professing Christians, younger and elder, such duties as became sound doctrine, and to exemplify them in his own practice; 1—8: and to inculcate on servants their proper conduct for adorning their profession; 9, 10. (2) To enforce these duties from the holy nature, design, and tendency, of the gospel;—the joyful prospect which it gives of eternal happiness, and the end of Christ's death; 11, 14.

the errors, silence the cavils, and rebuke the perverseness, of opposers. 10. For in Crete, as well as in other places, I understand there are many pretenders to Christianity, especially Jewish zealots for the Mosaic ceremonies, who are refractory and disorderly, not submitting to any divine rule in their doctrines or manners; but are most pernicious, proud, self-conceited, disputers about trifles, and crafty seducers of the simple; 11. Whose mouths ought to be stopped, and their errors confuted, by scriptural proofs, solid arguments, and good examples, since they are so indefatigable and subtle, insinuating themselves into Christian families, and carrying them off from Jesus Christ and the gospel to the ceremonies and law of Moses,—teaching and urging upon them things utterly false, and inconsistent with the true method of salvation by Christ alone;—and all this to procure for themselves the sordid and defiling treasures of this world by methods suited to the lusts of the Cretians; 12. For you will remember that Epimenides, their own poet and supposed prophet, describes that nation as constantly addicted to lying, and as crafty and savage in their temper; luxuriously, and even ravenously, gluttonous, and exceedingly lazy and idle, and so exposed to every temptation. 13, 14. And indeed the perfidious, mischievous, and sensual, conduct of the judaizing Christians and their disciples still confirm the justness of that description: it is therefore necessary that you deal plainly and sharply with them, that neither seducers nor seduced may dare to persist any longer in their evil principles and practices, but be recovered to, and settled in, the true and uncorrupted doctrines of faith, and may no more attend to, or believe, and be carried away with, the fabulous traditions of the Jews, or the imperious injunctions of men prejudiced against, and gone off from the truth of the gospel,—relative to ceremonial rites of clean and unclean meats or drinks, which are no longer obligatory under the New Testament dispensation. 15. By real Christians, whose hearts and consciences are, through faith, purged by the blood of Christ, every kind of wholesome food may be lawfully eaten; but by those who are still unregenerated, and under the power of unbelief with respect to gospel truths, and who are cleaving to Mosaic institutions instead of Christ, nothing, however good or lawful in itself, can be used without sin or defilement, as their own understanding and conscience, those leading and directive powers of their soul, are quite misguided and corrupted. 16. They indeed make high professions and boasts of their knowledge of God and his will; but their practices are a plain confutation of all such pretences, and manifest them to be detestable enemies to God and godliness, unbelievers of the gospel revelation, disobedient to its authority, and utterly injudicious and unfit for performing any thing good, and so disapproved of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Nothing is of higher authority, for our direction, than such inspired epistles. Nor can anything be more honourable than to be a servant of God and an inspired messenger of Christ. Nothing is more answerable to our need, or conducive to our happiness, than grace, mercy, and peace. Nothing more sure or comfortable than a promise of eternal life from God, who cannot lie. Nor can anything be better framed to convey these blessings to us than the gospel of Christ. As the work of preaching is of infinite importance, and the opposition to it strong and manifold, it requires many great qualifications in ministers, and great care in trying and setting them apart to their office.—False teachers and unruly professors create ministers much and hard work. But where wickedness abounds, professors are apt to be tainted with it. Men hardened in error need plain refutations; and stubborn sinners need severe rebukes. Such as have not right principles of grace implanted in their heart, and sound principles of truth in their belief, must necessarily err in their conduct. And it is not high professions, but holy lives, that characterize true Christians.

BUT ^a speak thou the things which become sound doctrine:

2 ^b That the aged men be ^c sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience;

3 ^c The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness; not ^d false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may teach the young women to be ^e sober, ^f to love their husbands, to love their children.

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient, to their own husbands; that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men likewise exhort to be ^g sober minded.

7 ^h In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity,

8 Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.

9 Exhort ^k servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not ^l answering again;

10 ^m Not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; that they may ⁿ adorn the doctrine of ^o God our Saviour in all things.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. While therefore so many deluding and deluded persons of corrupt minds and practices surround you on every side, take peculiar care to preach, and insist upon, such truths and duties as are agreeable to, and put honour upon, the solid, pure, wholesome, and soul-healing, doctrines of the gospel of Christ, and which lay all the professors thereof under the strongest obligations to piety and virtue, of whatsoever sex or station they be. 2. Exhort therefore the more aged Christian brethren to be very watchful, circumspect, and sedate, in their temper and carriage;—to behave with a venerable gravity in their words, actions, deportment, and dress;—to be prudent in their conduct, and temperate in eating and drinking;—to be sincere believers of the pure doctrines of the gospel, and to live answerably to them;—fervent in love to God, to the saints, and to all men; not peevish, but patient under weakness, tribulations, and offences. 3. Exhort aged women to be exemplary in their dress and deportment, as becomes the professors of religion and holiness;—not false accusers, slanderers, or backbiters of others;—not inclined or addicted to immoderate drinking of liquors;—but careful instructors of children and others in the solid truths of the gospel and laudable practices of virtue. 4, 5. And let them particularly instruct and encourage young women to be wise, cautiously avoiding every thing that savours of lightness or lewdness; and, if married, to love their husbands and children in the most affectionate, endearing, and dutiful manner;—to be discreet, prudent, and obliging, in their whole behaviour;—quiet, modest, virtuous, and chaste;—careful and industrious in their attention to their families;—of a meek and humble temper;—kindly submissive and obedient to their husbands in every thing lawful;—that so God and his gospel may not be reproached as encouraging disorderly practices. 6. In like manner, advise and excite young men, professing Christianity, to be considerate, chaste, meek and sober, and to guard against the impetuous, rash, proud, wilful, and frolicsome, temper common to youth. 7, 8. And, if you would have these things believed and practised by others, be yourself an exact pattern of every thing good and beneficial:—and in all your preaching, deliver nothing but the pure unmixed doctrine of Christ, with a disinterested and single aim at the glory of God and good of souls; with becoming seriousness and gravity, with all simplicity and godly sincerity, and in plain, significant, scriptural, and determinate, language,—that none may misunderstand it, or be misled by it; that so your most critical, carping, and cavilling enemies may be put to shame, when they can find nothing to object either to your doctrine or practice. 9. And, whereas some judaizing teachers attempt to persuade converted slaves that they are not bound to remain in subjection to their Heathen masters, be you careful to inculcate on believing servants to continue, as much as ever, and from better principles, obedient to their masters in every thing lawful; and to behave towards them in the most courteous, obliging, and diligent, manner, cheerfully executing their commands without murmuring or disputing, and never returning any insolent or saucy answer when reprov'd or ordered to work. 10. Charge them to be strictly honest; never daring to waste, embezzle, or apply to their own use, any part of their masters' goods, money, victuals, or time, beyond their allowance;—but always faithfully obeying their orders, and doing all they can for their honour and advantage,—that thus they may be a credit to the gospel, and their profession of it, and may even strike conviction into the consciences of their Heathen masters, of the excellency, purity, and power, of it, to render men virtuously in every station of life. 11. For the gospel of the grace of God, particularly in the New Testament dispensation of it, which so clearly displays the free favour of God, and so powerfully works grace in men's hearts, as it brings glad tidings of deliverance from sin and misery of every form, and of eternal happiness, and shews the way of obtaining salvation by faith in Christ, has now shone forth upon all nations, and upon all sorts and ranks of men. 12. Instructing, and effectually determining and obliging, us who, believe, that, renouncing, abhorring, and utterly forsaking, all infidelity, idolatry, and impiety, of every kind, contrary to the first table of the moral law, and all irregular inclinations and desires, which worldly men indulge and gratify, contrary to the second,—we should carefully live in all purity and holiness in a due government of our passions and appetites,

11 For ^a the grace of God ^b that bringeth salvation hath ^c appeared to all men, 12 Teaching us that, ^d denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world;

13 Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;

14 ^e Who gave himself for us, ^f that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

CHAP. III.

Directs Titus (1) To inculcate obedience to civil magistrates, a good behaviour towards all men, and a diligent study of good works; 1, 2, 8, 14: as enforced from the consideration of the marvellous change made by converting grace on believers; 3—7. (2) To avoid idle disputes, to censure erroneous persons, and excommunicate them if obstinate; 9—11. (3) Speedily to visit him at Nicopolis, along with Apollos and Zenas; 12, 13, 15.

PUT ^a them in mind to be subject to ^b principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, ^c to be ready to every good work, and in a just, honest, and benevolent, behaviour towards men, and in all acts of public and private devotion towards God, in the exercise of every grace, and celebration of all his ordinances, and observation of all his commandments, as long as we continue in this ensnaring world. 13. Always encouraging and animating ourselves by believing, expecting, and patiently waiting and longing for the perfect, all-comprehending, and everlasting, felicity which is the great object of our hopes,—and for the glorious appearing of the great and mighty God, even our Lord Jesus Christ, who at the last day will manifest himself on his throne of judgment, in all the majesty, beauty, grandeur, and brightness, of his divine and mediatorial glory, and in all the glory of his Father, and of all his holy and surrounding angels, and to be glorified in his saints. 14. And what may we not look for and hope from him, who so loved us as to give himself, soul and body, to the most painful ignominious death, of the cross, that he might effectually redeem us from all the guilt, pollution, power, punishment, and in-being of our sins; and sanctify, cleanse and separate, us to himself, as his own special, precious, and peculiar people, made his by his Father's gift, his own purchase, and our free and full consent in the day of his power,—that we might with the most fervent zeal, glorify him in the performance of every duty appointed in his word, from the best principles and motives, and in the best manner, to the best ends. 15. These are things of such vast importance, and so vehemently opposed or corrupted by the enemies of Christ and his gospel, that you ought, in his name and authority, earnestly to explain and inculcate them, and sharply to confute and reprove the contrary errors and vices. And let your whole conduct be regulated with such prudence, faithfulness, and gravity, as may raise you and your office above the contempt of your most inveterate and scornful enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—With gravity, sincerity, faithfulness, authority, and scriptural evidence, ought ministers to preach the gospel, and apply it for exhortation, comfort, or reproof, as there is occasion: Nor can they expect that others will believe, or adversaries be silenced, unless their practice be answerable to their doctrine.—To adorn his profession, and honour the Lord Christ, every professor according to his age or station in the world, must act up to God's commands himself, and promote holiness in others. The aged should be patterns and teachers of every Christian virtue and work; and the younger heartily disposed to receive their instructions, and follow their advice. Sound principles, sober gravity, temperance, charity, holiness, humility, diligence, honesty, and faithfulness, should deeply mark every Christian character. The grace of God, the tenor and scope of the gospel, the certain appearance of Christ to judgment, his death to redeem us from all iniquity, and the heavenly glory which he has prepared for us, in the strongest manner require and enforce our mortification of every lust, and earnest performance of every holy duty. A gospel of God's redeeming grace, manifested to all ranks and sorts of men, requires universal holiness from all. We cannot manifest grace to be in our hearts unless we renounce every known sin. We can have no right hopes of heaven, unless we are given to the study of holiness as the preparation for it. We have no marks of being Christ's redeemed while sin is our pleasure and work. And we can have no evidence of being his peculiar people, if, in our temper and conduct, we are confirmed to the world that lieth in wickedness.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. And, as the same judaizing teachers, dissuade Christians from owning the authority of Heathen magistrates, see that you earnestly admonish and charge your people to be peaceably submissive to their supreme or subordinate civil governors, as the deputies and ministers of God; and to pay a conscientious obedience to all their just laws; and to perform every duty becoming their stations, whether it relate to God or to men. 2. Caution them against reviling any, of whatever rank, nation, or religion, or charging things falsely upon them, or even exposing their real faults, but in so far as some valuable end is to be gained thereby. Warn them against a litigious quarrelsome temper and behaviour; and teach them, on the contrary, to be of an equitable, candid,

For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serv-malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost;

Which he shed on us abundantly

That, being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they who have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works.

But avoid foolish questions and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable

yielding, spirit; and to manifest an humble, mild, and good, temper in all their words and actions towards all sorts of men, the very worst not excepted. 3. For indeed none can be worse than we once were, and should still have been if left to ourselves; for, in our unregenerate state, we were destitute of all spiritual wisdom and knowledge relating to duty or happiness;—were disobedient to God, and his holy, just, and good laws;—were wanderers from him, and the way of life and peace; seduced by Satan, the world, and our own treacherous hearts;—were perfect slaves to many diversified sinful inclinations and sensual pleasures;—were foolishly spending our time in maliciously wishing and doing all the hurt we could to such as did not please us; and envying the honour or happiness of such as were above or around us;—and, on the whole, were most hateful and detestable in ourselves to God and to all good men, and full of bitter and implacable enmity one against another, according to our different passions, interests, or nations. 4. But, while we were in these awful circumstances, the transcendent kindness and infinite mercy of God, (the original Fountain of our salvation, through Jesus Christ) towards men, shone forth with reviving and almighty efficacy, in the preaching and application of the gospel, to make an no y and happy change on us. 5. And it neither was, nor could be, any good work which we, who were so detestable and wicked, had performed, but merely of his own free, self-moving, undeserved, nay, abused and provoked, mercy, and its compassionate propensions, that he brought us out of that deplorable condition into a state of salvation, through the cleansing virtue of regenerating grace, represented in baptism, and effected by the powerful operations of the Holy Ghost. 6. Whom, in his gifts and graces, God the Father graciously and abundantly bestowed upon us, according to his promise, through the mediation, merit, exaltation, and intercession of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: 7. That being by the free gift of God discharged from guilt and condemnation, and accepted as righteous unto eternal life on account of the righteousness of Jesus Christ imputed to us, we might be adopted into his family as his children, and made heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, according to the ground of hope laid down in the promises of the gospel given to us, and according to that grace of hope wrought in our souls by which we expect eternal hope through our Redeemer. 8. The important things which I have mentioned are true and faithful; and to be firmly believed, and frequently insisted upon in your ministrations, that they who have believed in God through Christ, according to the gospel revelation, may be induced and excited, with all carefulness and diligence, to abound, excel, and lead the way to others, in all such works as are honourable to God, to Christ, and to their Christian character. And these doctrines, and the good works to which they manifestly tend, are every way excellent in their own nature; and though God cannot be profited by them, they are exceeding useful and beneficial to mankind. 9. But avoid and discountenance all senseless and idle debates, of which Judaizing teachers are so fond,—as about descent from this or that particular tribe or family of Israel, or about the sense and obligation of the ceremonial law, which they desire to introduce into the gospel dispensation. 10. If any professed Christian entertain, and boldly assert such errors as overthrow the fundamental principles of the gospel, especially if he appear to do it from prejudice against the truths themselves, as directly contrary to his own lusts; or out of a proud inclination to make himself the head of a party; let him be once and again solemnly and in the most convincing manner admonished of his sin and danger; and if, after all this, he obstinately persist in his destructive errors, let him be excommunicated from the visible church, and all familiarity with him, not required by the laws of nature be carefully avoided by her members: 11. For it is sufficiently manifest that such a man hath utterly turned away from Christ the foundation, and from all true goodness, and that he sins against his own soul, and against the divine authority, light, and truth of the gospel revelation, if not against the conviction of his own conscience. And his persisting to avow such error is sufficient proof against him; yea, thereby he practically condemns himself as not fit to have any fellowship with the true church of Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Nothing is more absurd than for princes to hate and persecute true Christianity, which so effectually renders men good subjects. For nothing can more effectually influence men to every good word and work, than the believing consideration of their marvellously-gracious redemption by God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Dreadful is the wickedness in heart and life of every man by nature: and transcendent the grace, precious the blood, and almighty the influence, that can save such sinners; that can without, nay, contrary to their own deserts, renew their hearts after the image of God, justify their persons before him, and render them his adopted heirs of eternal life. Base is our conduct if, after all, we willingly employ either heart or tongue, hand or foot, in iniquity. The doctrines of the gospel believed with the heart are the most real and effectual means of making us careful to maintain good works. Honourable would it be if every professed Christian were thereby distinguished from others. And happy would be the church if all useless controversies were shunned and stifled; every erroneous and schismatical person, after due pains taken for his conviction, were solemnly excommunicated; and faithful ministers were all of one mind, heart, and way, in the truth as it is in Christ.

7 ^hFor we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee, brother.

20 Yea, brother, ^vlet me have joy of thee in the Lord: refresh my bowels in the Lord.
21 ^yHaving confidence in thy obedience, I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

hear of, and especially they who receive your favours, may be excited to make the most grateful acknowledgments of those kind and holy dispositions which, by virtue derived from Christ, and to his honour, work for the relief and support of his servants and poor members for his sake. It is a great comfort to me in my imprisonment, and to Timothy, my brother here, to understand that the hungry appetites of poor private Christians and holy ministers are abundantly relieved and satisfied by your charitable donations.

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful ministers affectionately care for, and rejoice in one another's gracious comforts and success. And it is an honour for the wealthy to bestow abundantly on the cause, servants, and poor members of Christ. God can marvellously bring great good out of great evil; can make robbery, and the running away from lawful service, an occasion of bringing a person to the gospel, attended by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven—and sinful falls the means of bringing about saving conversion. What an inexpressible alteration for the better converting grace makes on a person! And readily we ought to forgive such as have offended and injured us, if they return to their duty, and especially if God's grace has made them our brethren in Christ. An high esteem and affectionate regard should Christians shew to the instruments of their conversion. And with earnestness and prudence ministers, or others, should interpose their influence in favour of those who penitently return to their duty.—Thrice happy is that church where ministers and people are knit together in cordial affection, and labour for one another's real welfare, temporal, spiritual and eternal, by much fervent prayer; and where peculiar care is taken to refresh, comfort, and provide for, the aged, poor and persecuted.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

The manner of reasoning in this epistle, the writer's close connection with Timothy, his imprisonment in Italy, and his concluding benediction, as well as other circumstances, manifest it to be Paul's. The prejudice of the Jews, and even the Christians in Judea, against Paul, on account of his zeal for the abolition of the typical ceremonies, might make it prudent for him to conceal his name in a letter which so closely handles that delicate point. In the first part, from chap. i—ix. 19, he represents, with great earnestness and prudence, the dignity of Christ, in his person and office, as above angels and prophets; and, in particular, above Moses, Aaron, and Abraham, whom the Jews chiefly respected, and by whom these ceremonies had been introduced into their church and nation,—and the transcendent worth of his sacrifice above all the Levitical oblations. In the latter part; chap. x—xiii.: he exhorts them to improve Christ in his person and office, in boldly approaching to God,—in exact and constant attendance on his ordinances,—patient waiting for the fulfilment of his promises,—perseverance in the vigorous exercise of faith, patience under affliction, peace, holiness, purity, imitation and reverential service of Christ,—mutual love, chastity, contentment, and regular subjection, to church rulers.

us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds;

3 Who, being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 And again, when he bringeth in the first begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.

8 But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

10 And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hath laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the works of thine hands.

11 They shall perish, but thou remainest: and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool?

CHAP. II.

The apostle (1) Recommends the improvement of Christ's dignity, by an earnest attention and steadfast adherence to his gospel; 1-4. (2) Further represents him as higher than the angels, notwithstanding his sufferings for a time: 5-10. (3) Shews that his sufferings were necessary to our salvation and his own mediatorial glory,—and that his assumption of our nature, not the angelic, was necessary to the discharge of his priestly office for us; 9-18.

THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.

2 For, if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward;

3 How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4 God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.

senger infinitely more glorious, even his eternal, only begotten, and incarnate Son, who being by nature the most high and only true God, has an original right to inherit all things; and who, as Mediator, is God's first-born, Head over all things to his church; and by whom, in the strictest connection and co-operation, he made the heavens and the earth, and all that is in them, and forms all the different ages and dispensations of time and eternity; 3. Who being in his divine person, the illustrious brightness of the glory, and the most exact character and image of the person of the Father, having the very same nature and essential properties, and supporting and governing all ranks, orders, and individuals of creatures by the almighty operation of his mere will; when, as our great High Priest, he had by his own obedience and suffering fully expiated all the sins of his people, did in virtue of his finished atonement, and in correspondence to the dignity of his person, ascend to heaven in our nature, to take possession of a glorious state, the most fixed, durable, and inexpressibly exalted. 4. Being in his person, and in his office of Mediator, inconceivably superior to the highest angels; having by nature, and by his Father's appointment, a name, title, and character far too high to be applied to any of them. 5. For (to consider this matter with respect to his divine nature) whom, even of the loftiest angels, did God ever represent as his essential, his eternal, his only-begotten Son? 6. Nay, when he brought him into our lower world to obey and suffer in our stead, he required all his holy angels to pay all divine honours to him, as his Son and their Creator. 7. Again, when he speaks of Angels, those noblest of creatures, he represents them as created to be his servants for executing his will with great strength, speed, and activity. 8. But, in a manner inexpressibly more exalted, he represents his Son Christ as a divine person, the true God, whose dominion is everlasting and unchangeable, and as ruling his extensive empire over all things with infinite equity, truth, and righteousness; 9. And as one who has a natural and necessary regard to holiness and equity, and hatred of all iniquity, and who has brought in an everlasting righteousness, and is furnished with gifts, graces, and glory infinitely above the measure of angels or believers. 10-12. Yea, as the Creator of heaven and earth, who himself existed from eternity, and as unchangeable in himself, while he changes all creatures at his pleasure. 13. But which of the loftiest angels did ever God call to sit enthroned in majesty, power, and glory at his right hand, till sin, Satan, death, and all his and his people's enemies, should be subdued under his feet as vanquished rebels? 14. Nay, are not all these spiritual beings placed in an infinitely lower station, being no more than messengers and servants of Christ, whom he employs in revealing his mind to, and in protecting, serving, and assisting in life or death his chosen people, who under him, and in his right, are through grace appointed to be highly honoured, and eternally to enjoy his complete salvation?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Blessed be God that he had spoken so much in mercy and grace to men, and that we have so full evidence of the divine authority of both Old and New Testaments. Wisely hath he suited the manner of his revelations to the state of his church and the necessities of mankind. And now we enjoy the fullest, the clearest, and last discovery of his will that is to be expected on earth. Unbounded is the glory of our Redeemer, as the Son of God and our Mediator. Being essentially one God with, but personally distinct from and equal to his eternal Father, he is the creator, proprietor, and preserver of all things. His blood, infinitely precious and powerful, atoned for and purged away our sins, and in virtue thereof he is enthroned at the right hand of God; there he for ever reigns the self-existent JEHOVAH, the eternal and immutable God, the object of adoration to angels and men. How honoured then are his saints, who are members of his flesh, his blood, and his bones. Safe are they under his care, and guarded and ministered to by millions of his angels. And rich is their provided, their prepared, their infallibly-secured inheritance of eternal salvation. How dead then ought they to be to this perishing world and all its concerns!

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Since Christ is thus infinitely superior to the ancient prophets, and even to the loftiest angels, it highly concerns us who live under the more eminently glorious dispensation of the gospel, both in respect of duty and interest, to attend the more diligently, affectionately, and steadfastly unto, and with humble faith and love to esteem, embrace, meditate upon, and seriously improve the everlasting doctrines thereof, which have been delivered unto us in the ministry of the word; and to retain them carefully in our hearts and memories, and persevere in our holy profession of them; lest at any time, through the corruption, heedlessness, treachery, and prejudices of our hearts, or the temptations of Satan, and the snares of this evil world, we should be carried away from the truth, and suffer it to slip out of our minds, and so should lose the benefit of it, and perish under its gracious administrations. 2 For if the law of Moses, which was given at Mount Sinai by the ministration of angels, acting as Christ's messengers, was established by divine authority, and enforced with an awful sanction; and every contemptuous violation of any of its precepts, or act of wilful disobedience to the authority of God in it, was severely punished with death; 3. How can we expect to escape the judgments of God, in time or eternity, if, through carelessness or unbelief, we despise and reject the glorious gospel, which alone reveals, exhibits, and offers to us that spiritual, heavenly, and eternal salvation, which was purchased by the infinitely precious blood of Christ, and comprehends in it deliverance from so great sinfulness and misery, and an advancement to so great holiness, happiness, and glory, as answers all our wants, and infinitely transcends all our conceptions: the first clear publication of which, without the veil of typical shadows, was begun in the personal ministrations of our Lord Jesus Christ himself on earth, and was further explained and confirmed to us Jews by his inspired apostles, evangelists, and others, who themselves heard him preach these glad tidings of salvation: 4. Yea, to assure us of the infallible certainty of their testimony, God himself attested their integrity, and the truth of their doctrine, by manifold miraculous operations and effects on the bodies of men, and by an abundant bestowal of spiritual gifts, such as prophecy, wisdom, knowledge, and utterance, speaking with or interpreting languages they never learned; which were dispensed by the Holy Ghost in their different kinds and degrees, according to the good pleasure of his sovereign will. 5. But to proceed in our comparison of Christ, with the holy angels: it is manifest that, in his mediatorial office as well as in his divine person, he is infinitely superior to them; for though God employed them as his heralds in publishing the law at Sinai, and employs them as ministering spirits

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, ^kWhat is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

7 Thou madest him [†]a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour; and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 ^mThou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For, in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him.

9 But we see Jesus, who ⁿwas made a little lower than the angels, ^ofor the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that ^phe by the grace of God should taste death for every man.

10 For ^qit became him, ^rfor whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing ^smany sons unto glory, to make ^tthe Captain of their salvation ^uperfect through sufferings.

11 For both ^vhe that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them ^wbrethren, 12 Saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren; in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, ^bhe also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death ^che might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil;

15 ^dAnd deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily ^ehe took not on him the nature of angels; but ^fhe took on him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made ^glike unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

(1) Shews the superior excellency of Christ, in his person and office, to Moses, their noted prophet, deliverer, and lawgiver; 1-6.

WHEREFORE, ^aholy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider ^bthe Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus; ignorance of an happy immortality, had long rendered the thoughts of their death ensnaring and terrible. 16. For to accomplish these important ends, he did not lay hold upon the nature of angels, by taking it into personal union with his divine, as if he intended to recover any of them who fell from their original holiness and happiness; but passing by them, he laid hold on, and personally united to himself the far inferior nature of man, as derived from the patriarch Abraham, to whom God promised that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. 17. From which it is plainly evident that, in order to Christ's duly answering the great design of his office as their Redeemer and Saviour, it was thought fit and necessary that he should partake of their nature in all its essentials; and be made in suffering, and every thing but sin, like unto those brethren whom he was bring to glory, that so, by his own experience of sufferings in their stead, he might be the better qualified, and the more feelingly engaged, to act the part of a compassionate tender-hearted High Priest for them towards God, in making satisfaction to his Father's justice for their sins, and in purchasing and procuring peace and reconciliation for them. 18. And having thus experimentally endured the temptations of Satan and troubles of this world, as well as the weight of his Father's wrath, and triumphed over them, he is the more fit and inclined to sympathize with, support, comfort, and relieve his brethren, when exercised with any like temptations, afflictions, or trials.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—In the superior excellency of its principal preacher, in its manifold and marvellous attestation, and in the full and extensive salvation which it exhibits, the gospel far transcends the law of Moses. With great care and reverence then ought we to hear, receive, and retain it, and all the spiritual and eternal blessings which it conveys. To neglect so great a salvation is one of the most atrocious crimes, and exposes men to the most terrible vengeance of God. How astonishing is it that God should leave angels to perish in their sins, and fix his love upon men, and unite his Son to them! But never can we sufficiently adore the excesses of that love through which we behold him in our nature for a time, debased, suffering, and dead; and then gloriously exalted to his Father's right, as Head over all things to his gospel church, and expecting till all his enemies be made his footstool. Infinite is the mercy that God should thus bring sinful men, as his chosen, adopted, and regenerated children, to eternal life through the sufferings and death of his Son. Yea, herein all his perfections are highly glorified, and his Son qualified to be an exalted intercessor and Captain of salvation. Delightful is Jesus' connection with us, as our elder Brother, and the source of all our sanctification, comfort, and victory over sin, Satan, fears, troubles, and death. And amazing is his Priesthood, and kind his manner of executing it. But great indeed are the effects of this love, that by the death of my divine Saviour I am made alive and free, and sin, devils, and death are conquered; that by his temptations and trials I am succoured under and delivered from mine! Since he then is merciful, let me always flee into his bosom; and since he is faithful, let me always adore and trust him.

CHAP. III. Ver. I. Since the great Author of the gospel is so much more excellent and useful than all the former prophets, and even angels, let me beseech you, my dear brethren by descent from Abraham, and in the judgment of charity, brethren not only to me and all the saints, but even to Christ himself; separated to him by profession, devoted to his service, sacrificed by his blood and Spirit, and effectually called by the gospel to a state of union and fellowship with him, and to a full right to and anticipating possession of all the privileges of the new covenant, more attentively to consider and seriously reflect upon the supereminent dignity of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, as the Messenger of God, reveals to us the whole of the gospel truth which we profess, and as our great High Priest is the subject matter thereof, who confirms and ratifies it by his death, and so is the author, life, and glory of our heavenly calling, and of

to the news or salvation, yet he has not given them any headship or ruling power over the new Testament church, nor are its doctrines, ordinances, privileges, or blessings derived from, or even published by them. 6-8. But the inspired psalmist, David, when contemplating the magnificent works of God, breaks out into a rapture of admiration, that God should so favour, support, and assist man; and, after a short debasement, constitute him the universal Lord and Sovereign of all his creatures, not one excepted; that he might conquer, subdue, and triumph over his enemies, casting them like slaves and captives beneath his feet. Now it is fully evident from observation and experience, that never since the fall neither mankind in general, nor any particular one of them, has ever had an absolute and universal dominion over all things. 9. But though Jesus Christ has not yet put an end to all the opposition of his and his people's enemies, we certainly know, from the testimony of inspired writers, and from the marvellous effusion of the Holy Ghost in his miraculous gifts and graces, and the wonderful effects of the gospel in convincing and converting multitudes,—that he, in consequence of his debasement, obedience, sufferings, and death, in the stead of all his children, Jews and Gentiles, is exalted to the highest glory, power, and authority, that he might be in full capacity to accomplish the great end of his death in their effectual salvation. 10. For, however offensive the doctrine of his debasement may be to carnal Jews, who only look for a temporal deliverer, it infinitely well became and tended to the singular glory of the justice, holiness, wisdom, goodness, and other perfections of God, the Creator, Preserver, and last end of all things,—and of his holy law and government,—in bringing his chosen, adopted, and regenerated children to their complete happiness in heaven, to prepare and consecrate his only begotten Son as their Prince, Leader, and Author of eternal salvation, to his heavenly work of intercession and government, by his suffering on their behalf and in their stead. 11. For both Jesus the Redeemer, who by his blood purges away the guilt and filth of our sin, and we his redeemed, who have our sins purged away, are, by the constitution of the covenant of grace, one in the view of the law; and are partakers of the same human nature, in the same condition of weakness, trouble, and mortality; on which account Christ, however great and glorious, does, and in the last day will more openly avow us, however mean and despicable, to be his brethren; 12. Engaging to his Father that he, in his personal ministrations and by his servants, will make known the glory and celebrate the praises of his perfections and counsels among his brethren, effectually called and gathered to him as his peculiar people. 13. And like one having communion with us in human affections, sufferings, and graces, he represents himself as trusting in God for support, assistance, success in and reward of his work, and as ready to do whatever is necessary for our future or eternal salvation, who, as his spiritual seed, were given to him by his Father. 14. Since therefore these children, whom God has given to his Son to be saved by him, are equally partakers of immortal souls and mortal bodies as the rest of mankind, he also having existed the Son of God from all eternity, did in the fullness of time assume a true human nature, with all its essential properties and sinless infirmities, into personal union with himself, that he, as their Kinsman-Redeemer, in the same nature which sinned, might make a proper satisfaction to the law and justice of God: and that thus—by means of his meritorious death which he suffered in their room and stead, to take away their sins and the curse of the law, and to purchase their happy resurrection and eternal life—he might entirely conquer, overthrow, and make void the power of that great destroying adversary the devil, who by means of Adam's first transgression had brought sin and death upon men, and has a limited empire over death, to inflict it upon obstinate and incorrigible sinners, and to be their everlasting tormentor in eternal death; 15. And that through his suffering of death he might destroy death in its destructive influence; and deliver his people from the sting, dominion, and terrors of it, and in due time give them a complete victory and triumph over it; even though their inward sense of guilt, the terrors of the Jewish dispensation, or Heathen

our holy profession of his name, and of all our love to and hopes towards God through him; 2. Who being chosen, called, ordained, and sent by God, to declare his whole will relative to the faith, worship, obedience, and salvation of the church, performed his work with a fidelity infinitely superior to Moses, his noted type, whom God himself attested as singularly faithful in publishing the whole system of laws and revelations given him, and in his whole government of his chosen people in the wilderness. 3. But, notwithstanding this honourable testimony, Christ is infinitely more honourable in himself, being not a mere man like Moses, but truly God-man in one person, and is worthy of infinitely greater honour, as he is the Former, Proprietor, Lord, and Head, of the church, whereas Moses was but a member of it. 4. Nay, being the great Provider of all the materials, and Manager of all the affairs, of the Jewish or gospel church, for his own glory, he can be nothing less than God himself. 5. And Moses indeed, not as a lord or proprietor, but as a servant, acted most faithfully in deliveridg the laws and ordinances of God about every thing relative to the Jewish church, that he and they might be distinguished figures of the far more excellent things which were to be more clearly revealed under the New Testament. 6. But, though Christ graciously condescended to take upon him the form of a servant in his human nature and office capacity, yet, in what he has done relative to the church, he acted not merely as a servant, but as his Father's equal and only begotten Son, Heir of all things; and Lord of it, as his house or family, which he purchased with his blood, gathered and formed, furnished, ordered, and governs, by his word and Spirit;—and of which all of us are members, who, being truly united to him by faith, do, notwithstanding all the tribulations which befall us, stedfastly persevere in the faith, profession, hopes, comforts, and holiness of the gospel.—7. To warn such of you as are but nominal professors against utter apostasy, and quicken real believers to hold on and hold out to the end in their holy profession of Christ and his gospel, let me remind you of the charge given by the Holy Ghost to our fathers in the days of David. Now immediately, and without delay, while the present season of God's mercy and patience lasts, and his messengers are sent to you, if ye would attend to, regard, and embrace, what he says by them, for your spiritual and eternal advantage. 8, 9. Take heed that ye do not wilfully shut your eyes against his light, nor stop your ears against his voice, and resist his Spirit, and so harden your hearts against his fear, and against all his methods of wisdom and love, for your present and future happiness, as your fore-fathers did, by their provoking unbelief, strifes, and murmurings in the wilderness of Arabia. I tried them by diversified dispensations of providence; and they for forty years, beholding my marvellous work of mercy and judgment, often put my faithfulness, power, kindness, patience, and just vengeance, to the trial; as if they had doubted my ability and willingness to fulfil my promises or threatenings. 10. Therefore, being all that time sorely displeased, and at length wearied out, with their repeated and aggravated unbelief and insolent behaviour, I solemnly declared them incorrigible in the error and perverseness of their hearts, and obstinately ignorant of, and inattentive to, my doctrines, laws, and ordinances, or any upright, holy, and peaceable conversation. 11. And, to render my threatening absolutely irreversible, I swore by myself that, on account of their high and numberless provocations obstinately persisted in, not of them, from twenty years old and upward, except Caleb and Joshua, who were men of another spirit, should ever enter into Canaan, which I had promised to Abraham and his seed, as a land of quietness, peace, and safety, in which I myself, in the ark of the covenant, would dwell among them; but should every one of them disgracefully die in the wilderness. 12. Being therefore warned by these awful examples, left for our admonition, and excited by a consideration of the dignity of Christ's person and office, and of our near concern with him, and of the rich advantages we may hope for from him, take heed, my dear Christian brethren, examine and watch over yourselves to the utmost, lest at any time, through the influence of Satan, the world, and your own corrupt hearts, unbelief,—which, proceeding from an habitually sinful temper of soul, by distrusting God, and giving him the lie, reflects the highest dishonour upon his authority, sincerity, uprightness, faithfulness, power, and grace; and is the most noted and effectual

11 So I 'sware in my wrath, *They shall not enter into my rest.)

12 'Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But 'exhort one another daily, while it is called To-day; 'lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made 'partakers of Christ, 'if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end;

15 While it is said, 'To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 'For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit, 'not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with 'them that had sinned, whose carcasses fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, 'but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that 'they could not enter in because of unbelief.

(1) Inculcates an holy fear and care to prevent coming short of the heavenly glory through unbelief; 1, 2. (2) Shews that the gospel and the heavenly rest is more excellent than that of Canaan; 3—10. (3) By the most awakening and encouraging arguments, excites to faith and hope in our approaches to God; 11—16.

spring and root of obstinate and final apostasy from God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who has all life in himself, and is the Author of all spiritual and eternal life to believers,—should prevail in you. 13. And, as a mean of preventing this dreadful evil, not only guard against the first workings of unbelief and apostasy in yourselves, but, while your life and the day of gospel grace, is continued with you, stir up and encourage one another, without delay, and upon every opportunity, to stedfastness in the faith, and to an holy and circumspect watchfulness against carnality of mind and negligence, and against the temptations of Satan, the allurements and terrors of the world, and every things which tends to carry you away from Christ and the gospel; lest any of you should be lulled asleep and stupefied, and so led aside from him, through the guileful and treacherous influence of indwelling corruption, magnifying the terror of sufferings for his sake, and the advantage of worldly ease, pleasure, affluence, or safety; and with fair pretences varnishing over the destructive ways of sin. 14. And it is of the utmost consequence, for preserving us from this deceitfulness of sin and hardness of heart, to take heed that we be indeed real Christians; for it is manifest that we have a happy partnership with Christ in his righteousness, Spirit, grace, and benefits, as persons vitally united to him and interested in all that he is and hath, when we hold fast our spiritual subsistence in him, and stedfastly maintain, and, to the end of our lives, persevere in, our holy profession of him against all opposition and danger. 15. Take heed therefore now to yourselves, and do all that in you lies to fortify one another against apostasy; and if, while life and opportunity are continued, ye would believe and obey what God inculcates upon you for your good, beware of contracting an insensibility and hardness of heart, as your fathers did, when they provoked the anger of the Lord against them by their unbelief and rebellion in the wilderness. 16. For most of them, after they had heard the law awfully published by God himself at Sinai, and had received the instructions relative to their ceremonial worship, instead of being suitably affected by it, indulged themselves in the highest provocation against God; nevertheless, Caleb and Joshua were men of a better spirit and conduct, and entered into the promised land. 17. But with whom of these Israelites was God so highly offended forty years, as to exclude them from the promised land of Canaan? was it not with those only who had repeatedly and notoriously rebelled against him through unbelief?—and whose dead bodies, on account of their wickedness, lay slain, like miserable and detestable objects, in the Arabian desert, through which they travelled to Canaan? 18. And against whom did God, in his just and awful indignation, swear that they should never be admitted to enjoy the privileges, peace, and blessings, of that rest in Canaan? was it not against those only who, notwithstanding all their professions and obligations, warnings and excitements, rejected God and his gifts by their unbelief? 19. It is therefore plain, from the whole, that unbelief was the root and spring of all their other provocations, by which they forfeited all right and claim to the promise of admission into the typical rest of Canaan.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—In dignity how far, how inconceivably far, Jesus, the God, the Maker, the Lord, the Proprietor and Governor of the church, transcends Moses, a mere man, formed by himself a member, a servant in it! Faithful was he to his Father, who constituted him mediator. And worthy is he to be contemplated, adored, trusted, and rejoiced in, and openly professed. But, unworthy are those to be held members of his church who are not washed in his blood, sanctified by his Spirit, and effectually called by his grace.—Alarming and earnest are God's calls and invitations to men: indispensably necessary is a present attention to his voice, and acceptance of his favours: and fearful is our guilt, and dreadful our danger, if we harden our hearts, and contemn his offers of grace. In nothing does the deceitfulness of sin more appear than in men's obstinate unbelief. If it reign in our heart, there is no apostasy but may be expected in our life, and no plague or damnation will be too dreadful for our reward.—Alas, what multitudes of gospel hearers perish in this sin! And who knows what numbers are, by an angry God, consigned over to the power of it, and to irreversible condemnation for it, even in this life!

1 John 5. 10.

LET us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

3 For we who have believed do enter into rest; as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:

7 (Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To-day, after so long a time; as it is said, To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For, if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day, 9 There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.)

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief

12 For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

14 Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the son of God, let us hold fast our profession.

15 For we have not an High Priest who cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

16 Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Since therefore God, as a warning to us, dealt so severely with our fathers for their disobedience and unbelief, it ought to be our deep concern to maintain an awful reverence of his greatness, holiness, and justice, and a religious dread of provoking him;—not to dismay and dishearten, but to excite us to the utmost diligent use of all appointed means, in an humble dependance on his grace, for our own and others preservation from apostasy and its terrible consequences,—lest, when God, who is the Contriver, and Author of, and who delights in, this rest, has recorded, exhibited, and given to us, in the gospel, a gracious promise of admission to a state of peace and lively fellowship with him through Christ, in truly evangelical worship and obedience in this world, and of a glorious peace in the world to come, ye should, through sloth and unbelief, reject and forsake that promise or rest, or seem to faint in your Christian course towards it. 2. For the gospel of salvation has been now preached to us, as it was more obscurely to them; but the precious truths of God did not in the least turn to the real advantage of many of them, when they heard it by Moses, or other inspired messengers of God; because they did not closely apply and appropriate the same to their hearts, and feed thereon by faith as the nourishment of their souls: and no more will that which we hear be eventually profitable to us, unless we receive and digest it by faith. 3, 4. But, as all entrance into God's promised rest is by believing, so those of us, who have by a true and lively faith received and rested on Christ alone for salvation, do enter into a state of spiritual and evangelical rest and peace with God through him, according to the light and grace of the New Testament dispensation, and we now, by faith and hope, in gospel-worship enter into the heavenly rest, as a pledge and assurance of our personal entrance into the full enjoyment of it in due time:—for, by comparing the several passages of scripture which speaks of God's rest, it is plain that there remains for us New Testament believers a rest far more excellent than that of Canaan. Even God's oath, excluding the unbelieving Hebrews from Canaan, supposed that all true believers should enter into his rest; so that here was a rest promised 2500 years after the rest of the creation had taken place, on the seventh day of the week and of time. 5. And, moreover, this oath, as it stands in David's Psalm, must not be understood as merely relating to the Hebrews' entrance into Canaan, which had taken place more than 400 years before, but also to a rest which then remained to be entered into. 6. Since then God's threatening against them who believed not, implied that some should actually enter in, and those to whom that typical rest was first preached, through their unbelief, did not enter; 7. Therefore God, by David, fixes another day of entering into his rest, and calls the Jews carefully to improve it, plainly intimating that what is there said related to a rest which was to be enjoyed long after they were in possession of the promised land: 8. For, if Joshua the son of Nun, that noted type of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, had put the Hebrews into the full possession of the rest ultimately intended in that psalm, the Holy Ghost would not, by David, have mentioned another season in which the Hebrews, who dwelt in possession of Canaan, were to seek a further rest, which could be no other than that which, being typified by the former, was to be introduced by Jesus Christ the Messiah. 9. Since therefore neither the rest of the seventh-day sabbath, nor the rest of the settlement in Canaan, could be intended by that TO-DAY mentioned by David, it is evident there must still remain, under the gospel state, a more complete and glorious rest, typified by the former, which is to be inherited by the true people of God, and which includes a spiritual rest by faith in Christ from Jewish ceremonies—from the law as a covenant—and the holy and joyful rest of the New Testament sabbath, in commemoration of his resurrection; and principally that heavenly rest of perpetual and immediate communion with Christ, of which all the preceding rests are but types, pledges, or foretastes: 10. For our Lord Jesus, having finished his obedience, sufferings, and death, rose again, and took possession of his heavenly glory, and so rested from his labours of purchasing our eternal redemption; even as God, when he had finished his work of creation, rested on the seventh day, and formed no more new kinds of creatures. And every believer, who has entered into the spiritual rest of the gospel state and New Testament sabbath, ceases from loving, or wilfully practising, his former works of wickedness, and from resting on his once beloved works of self-righteousness;—and, when, after finishing his course of obedience, conflicts, and trials, he enters into the complete and heavenly rest, he will perfectly cease from every thing selfish, sinful, or troublesome. 11. Since then there remains for us a rest inexpressibly more safe, sweet, glorious, and lasting, than that of Canaan, let us, in the use of all appointed means, and in dependance on divine grace, with the utmost diligence, labour to overcome all difficulties, and break through all oppositions and discouragements, that we may here enjoy all the refreshing and delightful privileges and blessings of the gospel state, and hereafter arrive at the still more refreshing and delightful heavenly glory,—and stir up one another to seek after it: lest, through our slothfulness, carnal fear, and unbelief, we should fall short of it, as the Israelites in the wilderness, notwithstanding their distinguished relation to God, fell short of the rest in Canaan through their unbelief and cowardice. 12. And there is the greatest reason to maintain a godly jealousy over ourselves and one another, and there is noble encouragement for the utmost care and caution;—for our Lord Jesus Christ, as the Word of life, has life in himself, and is the author of it to others,—and the written word, by the Spirit, has quickening virtue to raise dead souls:—yea, Christ, who is the almighty, omnipresent, omniscient, and heart-searching God, renders it a powerful mean of convincing the conscience, searching and affecting the whole heart, and subduing every thought and affection to the obedience of himself. 13. Nor can any of us escape his critical observation, or the searching influence of his word,—there being no creature, of whatever rank or kind, that lies concealed from his all-comprehensive view, but all persons and things, even the most secret thoughts, desires, hopes, and fears, tempers, and dispositions, are most evidently exposed and clearly manifested to the critical and all-seeing eye of him, to whom we must give an exact account of our state, qualities, inclinations, and conduct, in the last judgment. 14. Since therefore it is so dangerous to despise, neglect, or apostatize from, the truths of the gospel, and since we have in this Jesus Christ, our present Observer and future Judge,—so incomparable an High Priest, inconceivably great, divine, and excellent,—thoroughly qualified for, and exalted in, his office—the most difficult and fundamental part of which he has performed on earth, and the remainder of which he is now executing in heavenly intercession for us,—let us be thereby encouraged in the exercise of faith, love, and holy obedience, and with steadfastness, diligence, and constant perseverance, to maintain a free and open confession of him, and professed subjection to him. 15. Nor is this our glorious High Priest less willing than able to sympathize with and relieve us under all our distresses; nor is he even in heaven, insensible of, or unaffected with, our wants and weaknesses, miseries and dangers; but having, in his estate of humiliation, experimentally known whatever we undergo in our temptations and troubles, though without sin, he is at once infinitely fitted to be our pattern in bearing them, and to sympathize tenderly with us in them, and to take away the iniquity which we unavoidably fall into by means of them. 16. Let us therefore, in view of his superlatively excellent and efficacious Priesthood, and his execution of it, in offering himself a sacrifice to satisfy God's justice and make atonement for our sins, and his continual intercession for us at his right hand, boldly draw near to God, by faith in prayer and every other ordinance of gospel worship,—since he is now seated, not on a throne of justice, to execute deserved vengeance upon us, but on a throne of free and condescending mercy and grace, to commune with and bless us,—that, with familiar and holy freedom and humble confidence in him, as our reconciled God and Father, we may ask of, and receive from, him the most merciful forgiveness of our sins, and compassionate relief under all our straits and miseries; and, finding favour in his sight, may obtain all gracious assistances and supplies, in every season of want, difficulty, trouble, temptation, or danger, especially the most perplexing.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Graciously has God maintained his gospel in the world all along since Adam's fall, though in different degrees of light. And, when it is now set before us in its fulness and clearness, we ought carefully to beware of contemning and rejecting it. Alas, what multitudes hear it, without ever being profited by it!—No hearing, without cordially believing,

FOR every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 ^bWho *can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.

3 ^cAnd by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 ^dAnd no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5 So also ^eChrist glorified not himself to be made an high Priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec.

7 Who in the days of his ^fflesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and ^gwas heard, ^hin that he feared;

8 ^kThough he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

will avail to the salvation of our souls. And, unless we immediately receive and digest what we hear, God may quickly swear in his wrath that we shall never enter into his rest.—Greatly preferable to that of Canaan, yea, infinitely excellent, is that new covenant, evangelical and eternal, rest into which true believers enter along with Christ!—Powerful and efficacious is God's written word in the hand of Christ, the living and life-giving Word. With divine efficacy it penetrates into men's souls, for their conviction, reformation, and comfort; or for their condemnation and confusion. And infinitely awful, almighty, and heart-searching, is he himself, to whom we must quickly give an account in the last judgment. But Blessed be God that, while he is his Son, he is our great atoning, and interceding, High Priest and almighty Saviour; and that, having had a sinless experience of our temptations and troubles, he is qualified with the tenderest compassion towards us, and is ascended into the highest heavens, now to appear in the presence of God for us. His character and work powerfully and delightfully encourage to steadfastness and openness in our Christian profession, and to familiar boldness in our dealings with God. Let, then, all my requests and hopes of pardon, help, comfort, and glory, depend on JESHOVAH'S grace and esus' merits.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. To encourage us to improve the grace and power of our glorious and ascended, but affectionate and sympathizing, High Priest, in such holy reverence and confidence in approaching to God, let us consider that, even under the typical dispensation, every high priest was sanctified and set apart to his office from among the children of Israel, as one who partook of the same nature with themselves, and was appointed to represent, and transact for, men with God; that, in their name and stead, and for their benefit, he might present to him all their legal offerings and sacrifices, animate or inanimate; 2. And thus the multitude of infirmities, sinful or natural, with which he was compassed about, did require, and, as it were, qualify him to bear with, and readily atone for, the sins of others, which had been committed through ignorance or mistake; 3. On account of which infirmities he was required to offer up sacrifices for his own sins, as well as for the sins of the people. 4. And it was further necessary that no man should assume to himself the office of priesthood, till he had a most plain and manifest call from God to it, as Aaron and his sons had. 5, 6. In like manner Jesus Christ,—who in our nature made atonement for our sins by the sacrifice of himself, that our persons and prayers might be accepted of God, as presented by and through him,—and who, in his estate of humiliation, experienced every sinless infirmity and temptation, that he might manifest the greatest forbearance and compassion to ignorant and wandering sinners,—and who, having no sin, had no occasion to offer up any sacrifice for himself, but only for his people,—did not in his incarnate state, by any private act of his own, assume to himself the honour of the gospel high priesthood; but was from eternity called and appointed to it by his Father, by whom he was from eternity begotten, and by whom, in his resurrection from the dead, he was attested as his only necessary and essential Son; and who in the most solemn manner, declared him an eternal Priest, without predecessor or successor, after the high order of Melchizedec, and not after the inferior order of Aaron; 7. Which glorious High Priest, while in our world, compassed about with the sinless infirmities of human nature, and overwhelmed with the most fearful pressures of divine wrath on our account, did, in the most fervent, humble, and pathetic, manner present his addresses and entreaties to God his almighty Father,—who, if willing, could have delivered him from the terrors of death; and on account of his holy reverence, had his prayers accepted; and, in answer to them, obtained proper assistance under, seasonable deliverance from, and the happy issue of, his sufferings in the glory of God and the redemption of his church. 8. Though he was the eternal Son of God, the same in nature and perfections with the Father, and infinitely dear to him, yet having condescended to the office of high Priesthood, and assumed our nature, that he might therein execute it, such was his zeal for the glory of God and love to his church, that he submitted in the exercise of faith, patience, self-denial, resignation, humility, and readiness of mind, practically to learn what and now good it is to obey his Father's commands, even unto the death of the cross;—yea, to learn by severe experience what difficulties and distresses, and yet rich advantages, attend obedience;—and how to sympathize with us in our sufferings. 9, 10. And, having completed his whole obedience and suffering, and being thereupon fully consecrated to the high intercessory work of his Priesthood, he became the procuring and efficient cause of eternal salvation from every thing sinful or miserable, and to every thing holy and happy, to all such as diligently hearken and yield up themselves to him as the Captain of their salvation;—whom God has represented and styled a Priest, not constituted after the order of Aaron, but after the superior order of Melchizedec: 11. Concerning whom, in his kingly, but especially in his priestly, office, in which he typified our Redeemer, we, gospel preachers, have many important things to deliver,—which, on account of your remaining sloth, ignorance, and rigid attachment to the ceremonial law, can scarcely be yet rendered plain to your minds: 12. For, when, considering the great advantages for instruction, which have been afforded you, and the time ye have enjoyed the gospel dispensation, ye ought to have been capable of instructing others in the knowledge of Christ,—ye have made so little proficiency, that ye need to be taught over again the plain fundamental principles of the Christian faith, revealed in the infallible dictates of the Old and New Testament: and some of you have so declined in knowledge, that no instructions can suit your capacity but the most easy and familiar articles of Christianity,—being unable to understand the more mysterious points—how all the ancient types are accomplished in the person and office of Christ. 13. For every one, who has no appetite for, or ability to understand, any thing but the first principles of the doctrines of Christ, is very ineexpert at understanding, receiving, and improving, the great truths of the gospel; in which the righteousness of God is revealed from faith, to faith, and Christ is represented as the end of the law, moral and ceremonial, for righteousness to every one that believes,—and in which we are taught to live in the practice of righteousness, as persons united to, and justified in, Christ. 14. But the more sublime doctrines are most fit for the nourishment of those believers who are far advanced in the knowledge of the truth, and who, by much consideration and experience, and by much reading, hearing, meditation, and prayer, have their spiritual senses qualified to discern and distinguish between what is good or what is bad, true or false, beneficial or pernicious, and know how to choose and embrace the one, and refuse the other.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—No sin can be pardoned without an atoning satisfaction. And wonderful are the glories of Jesus Christ our great High Priest and atoning sacrifice. How divinely high, holy, and pure; and yet certainly bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, and compassed about with all our sinless infirmities! Solemn was his call to his work, and high his order, yet deep his condescension and self-abasement.—Fervent and successful his prayers—great his sufferings—and perfect his obedience. And by all these he becomes the complete Author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him. No true happiness can be had without holiness as an ingredient of it.—Alas, that, after all the discoveries of him in the gospel, many should have such indistinct conceptions of him, and be so indolent in improving the means of grace offered them! And transcendent is his mercy in providing food for weak as well as for strong Christians in his word. But how great must be their presumption, their danger, who intrude themselves into the ministerial office, when Christ entered not on his without his Father's call.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1, 2. But, since it was unworthy of Christians to be always babes in knowledge, let us, for the present, forbear insisting on the fundamental principles of Christianity, such as an evangelical grief for, and turning from, sinful courses, which mark men spiritually dead, and prepare them for eternal death:—and of a cordial belief of God's being and perfections, and humble trust

2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do if God permit.

4 For ^{it} is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,5 And ^{have} tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come ;6 If they shall fall away ^{to} renew them again unto repentance ; seeing they ^{crucify} to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put ^{him} to an open shame.7 For the earth, which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them ^{by} whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God :

8 But that which beareth thorns and briars is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing ; whose end is to be burned.

9 But, beloved, ^{we} are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.10 For ^{God} is not unrighteous, to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.11 And we desire that every one of you do ^{shew} the same diligence, ^{to} the full assurance of hope unto the end :

in him for the accomplishment of all his promises ; (which two points were figured out by the ancient ceremonial washings, and the laying on of hands on the heads of the sacrifices) ;—and of the resurrection of both righteous and wicked at the last day, to receive their everlasting reward ;—and of the general judgment consequent thereupon, in which men's eternal happiness and misery shall be finally and irreversibly determined by Christ :—and let us discourse of, and embrace with holy care and diligence, those great mysteries of the gospel relative to the person and offices, particularly the High Priesthood of our Redeemer. 3. And this, by the direction and assistance of God, I shall quickly proceed to, in order to prevent your apostasy from him. 4—6. For, if professed Christians, who have been once remarkably enlightened in the knowledge of gospel truths by his word and Spirit, in his common and miraculous operations,—and have had a remarkable inward experience of the powerful virtue, and sweetness of God's word, and of the powerful operations of the Holy Ghost peculiar to the New Testament church,—wilfully apostatize from the profession of the gospel to Judaism, or Heathenism, they absolutely reject the only remedy which God has appointed for their recovery, and provoke him to abandon them to a desperate voluntary blindness of mind and hardness of heart ; leaving no room for an effectual renovation and recovery to any true and saving repentance ;—because they practically approve the wickedness of those who crucified the eternal Son of God, and persecute him in his members ; yea, manifest that they would again crucify him as a noted impostor, if they had an opportunity :—and, after distinguished trials of the power, excellency, and sweetness, of his truths, openly renounce them, and him in them, as if they had found him as infamous and deceiving as ever his enemies pretended. 7, 8. For, to compare professed Christians to fruitful and barren soils, those—who, being inwardly renewed by God's grace, bring forth fruits of righteousness, which are, by Jesus Christ, acceptable to God, and for the praise of his glory—shall be further owned and blessed of him with his spiritual favours and influences, that they may still more abundantly increase in faith, love, and holy obedience, and become more and more meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light : but they, who partake only of the forementioned illuminations, external means and advantages, without an habit of true grace in their soul, and produce nothing but unbelief, impenitence, hardness of heart, and the entangling, hurtful, and self-ruining, fruits of wickedness proceeding therefrom, are on the very point of falling under the immediate execution of God's curse upon them, and of being, in time and eternity, burnt up by the fire of his wrath. 9. But, as to most of you, whom I look upon and love as sincere believers, beloved of God, I am confident that ye have experienced better things than the above-mentioned privileges, attainable by reprobates,—even the special and saving blessings of regeneration, justification, adoption, and others, which flow from vital union with Christ, and infallibly secure and issue in eternal salvation ;—though, for your warning and the awakening of false professors, I have suggested to you what terrible apostasy and ruin men may fall into after distinguished appearances of grace. 10. And my persuasion of your perseverance and eternal happiness is founded on the stability of the covenant of grace ; for God, who is equity and truth itself, never did, nor will, unfaithfully violate his promises of gracious rewards, to be conferred through the merits of his Son ; nor will be unmindful of those acts of holiness and righteousness, by which ye have manifested your faith in, love to, and regard of, his person, honour, and authority ; and particularly of that compassion, tenderness, and liberal assistance, which ye have and do still manifest to his despised and afflicted saints, in these days of poverty, peril, and reproach. 11. But, knowing that the end and means are connected in his gracious purposes and promises, I earnestly beg of him, and beseech you to labour in his strength, that every one of you may constantly persevere, and more and more abound in such diligent care and endeavours to bring forth the genuine fruits of faith and love ; till, by the blessing of God thereon, ye have a full and fixed 12 That ye be not slothful, but ^{fol-}lowers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13 For, when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself,

14 Saying, Surely, blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, ^{after} he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.16 For men verily ^{swear} by the greater : and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the ^{heirs} of promise ^{the} immutability of his counsel, ^{confirmed} it by an oath :18 That by two immutable things, in which ^{it was} impossible for God to lie, we might have ^a strong consolation, ^{who} have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us :19 Which ^{hope} we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that ^{within} the vail,20 Whither ^{the} forerunner is for us entered, ^{even} Jesus, ^{made} an High Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec.

assurance of your irrevocable interest in Christ and the promises of eternal life 12. That, to obtain it, and under the influence of it, ye may be excited to the utmost diligence in using the means of grace, and fulfilling the duties of your station, in imitation of, and following after, those believers in former ages, who, notwithstanding manifold tribulations, have, through a fixed faith in God's promises, and patient waiting for the accomplishment thereof, got beyond all their sins and troubles, and entered into the possession of the heavenly inheritance. 13, 14. And, to encourage your hope and perseverance in faith and patience, consider how God has condescended to give us the utmost assurance of his punctual and faithful accomplishment of his promises : for, to instance in one leading promise, upon which all the rest depend, when God promised to Abraham a seed from which the Messiah should descend, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed, he confirmed it by an oath as the strongest security for the fulfilment of it : and, because he could not, like us in our oaths, appeal to a greater, he appealed to his own being and perfections, and, as it were, solemnly pledged them for the truth and performance of his promises ; in which he engaged himself abundantly and certainly to bless Abraham with all the blessings of time and eternity, and to give him innumerable multitudes of descendants, temporal and spiritual. 15. And accordingly, after he had long waited with patience and hope, under manifold trials of his faith, God fulfilled his promise, in blessing him with greater worldly prosperity, and in multiplying his children during his life, as an earnest of his divine and spiritual seed,—and in admitting him at death, through faith in the Messiah, who was to spring from his loins, into the full possession of eternal life. 16. And herein God gave him the fullest assurance possible of his veracity, according to the most valid and approved method which men use for the satisfaction of their fellow-creatures as to the truth of what they affirm or promise ;—for, on important occasions, it is their custom to ascertain and fix their declarations and promises with an oath, in which they call the infinitely great God to attest their sincerity, and to punish them if they falsify their affirmation or engagement ; and such an appeal is reckoned the most strong and decisive evidence that can be given of the truth of what they say, to the satisfying of all doubts, determining of all debates, and silencing of all contradictory testimonies. 17. In this strongest form of assurance, to put an end to all the doubts, fears, and disputes, of his people, who are the heirs of the promised blessings, with respect to his promises of grace and salvation ; and to give superabundant evidence that his free and eternal purposes of love, manifested in his promises, are unchangeably the same, and shall never be repealed, defeated, or falsified, hath God sealed and confirmed his designs : 18. That, by the unchangeable word and oath of the unalterably true and faithful God, we might have the firmest ground possible for the most abundant, prevailing, and solid comfort, to overcome all doubts and fears, and support us under all our afflictions and temptations,—who have been enabled, under a sense of guilt and danger, to flee with the utmost eagerness and speed, concern and vigour, for deliverance and safety to Christ, the promised seed, and to lay hold on him, and on all the blessings of salvation in him, as proposed to our faith and hope in the declarations and promises of the gospel. 19. Which object of hope, as laid hold on and trusted in by faith, secures our souls from destruction, and holds them fast and steady, amidst all the dangers and troubles of this present life,—since he hath passed into the highest heaven, and our hope in him penetrates through the invisible heavens, and fastens upon him, and his Father, through him, as exhibited in his promises ; 20. Into which heavenly, blessed, and glorious, state, Jesus, our exalted Head, and Saviour, is entered, not alone, as the Aaronic high priest, into the holy of holies, but as our Forerunner, to open for us abundant entrance, notify our coming, and prepare mansions for us ;—and, as our everlasting High Priest, after the order of Melchizedec, to make continual intercession for us, upon the footing of his righteousness, fulfilled in our stead.

(1) Represents the superiority of Melchizedec and his priesthood to that of Aaron and his,—as typical of Jesus Christ and his priesthood; 1—10. (2) Represents the difference and superior excellency of Christ as a priest above the Aaronical priests, as being descended from another tribe, appointed by a better and more durable law, as more powerful to save, as more solemnly consecrated, and as an holy and immortal priest, perfectly holy and self-sufficient:—all which is encouraging to our faith and hope: 11—28.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—With great care we ought to learn the fundamental principles of the Christian religion. But, not content with this, we should make daily progress in knowledge, for our spiritual edification, and establishment in faith, comfort, and holiness. Men may go great lengths, even in a kind of experimental religion, and nevertheless remain destitute of the grace of God. But inexpressibly dangerous is apostasy from the truths of Christ after such high attainments. And hardened and loose professors terribly expose themselves to redoubled damnation in hell, if not also fearful miseries in this life. With great care and prudence should ministers faithfully awaken the secure, so as not to distress the weakest believer. Love to God, appearing in kindness to his poor saints, and in an holy conversation, is a certain mark of true grace in the heart; and diligence in religion is the way to thrive in it. And, if we have any good hope of eternal salvation, we ought to labour after a full assurance in it. Faith and patience, implanted in our heart, will produce a perseverance in our life. And the example of former saints should quicken us to it, while the promise and oath of God, and the exaltation of our Redeemer, give us the fullest and surest ground of encouragement in it. Rich, numerous, and suitable are the blessings which God has prepared for them that fear him: and marvellous is his condescension in giving such abundant security for the accomplishment of his kind purposes, and gracious promises of eternal life. Happy are they, who deeply convinced of guilt, and pursued by storms, have fled to Jesus Christ for refuge; and who, amidst all their troubles, have anchored their souls by faith and hope on him, as exalted to his Father's right hand to prepare a place for them. Storms of every kind can but drive them home to their High Priest and Saviour.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. For this famous Melchizedec, of whom our Lord Jesus, in his kingly and priestly office, is the great Antitype, was a renowned king of the ancient accursed Canaanites at Salem, and divinely called to officiate as a priest among them; and, meeting with Abraham in his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer's army, he not only refreshed his fatigued warriors with bread and wine, but in the execution of his priestly office, authoritatively pronounced a blessing on him, and all those Jews or Gentiles who are represented by him as his seed; 2. To him Abraham, in acknowledgment of his superior character of priesthood, paid the tithes, or tenth part of all the spoil which he had taken in the war: and his name, and that of his abode, represent him as, first, a king of righteousness, and then king of peace; 3. Yea, his whole genealogy of ancestors or successors, and his birth, death, and the beginning and ending of his priesthood, are entirely concealed by the Holy Ghost in scripture, that, by this means, he might be a more eminent type of the eternal Son of God, who is at once our most glorious, generous, and compassionate, King and great High Priest, in and by whom all his faithful servants and people are blessed with all spiritual blessings, and to whom, even the greatest, acknowledge their dependence, and to whose superiority they submit;—and who, being our righteousness and peace, rules in righteousness, and procures and bestows on all his subjects peace with God, with their consciences, and with one another;—and who, being without mother as God, without father as man, has no predecessor or successor in his office, but, as immediately appointed by God, abides a priest for ever, to make continual intercession for us. 4. Now, that he may have the more clear and exalted views of the excellency and dignity of Christ's priesthood, think seriously how great a man Melchizedec, who but typified him, must have been, when Abraham, the progenitor and covenant head of the whole Hebrew nation, acknowledged him his sacred superior, by giving him the tithes of his spoil. 5—7. Ye cannot but observe also, that the Jewish priests, descended from Levi, receives tithes

9 And, as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, ^lpaid tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father when Melchizedec met him.

11 ^mIf therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law), what further need was there that another priest should rise ⁿafter the order of Melchizedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For, the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprang ^oout of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident; ^pfor that after the similitude of Melchizedec there ariseth another priest;

16 Who is made, not after ^qthe law of a carnal commandment, but ^rafter the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, ^sThou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchizedec.

18 ^tFor there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 ^uFor the law made nothing perfect, ^vbut the bringing in of ^xa better hope did; by the which we ^ydraw nigh unto God.

20 And, in as much as not without an oath he was made Priest; only from their brethren and equals, and that by virtue of a law from God, assigning them that portion which belonged to God himself: but here one of a very different stock received tithes from Abraham, their most honoured progenitor, and authoritatively blessed him in the name of God; and common sense dictates that he, who authoritatively blesses another, must be superior to him in dignity. 8. Besides, the Levitical receivers of tithes are represented to us as mortal men, dying one after another: but this Melchizedec, by the veil cast over his history, is never represented as one dead, but only as living. 9, 10. And moreover all those Levites, who, by the Mosaic law, receives tithes from their Hebrew brethren, really though indirectly, paid tithes to Melchizedec, being all in the loins of Abraham, as their ancestor, covenant head, and representative, when Melchizedec met him; and so must be greatly inferior to Melchizedec, who, after all, was no more than a type of our infinitely more excellent and dignified Jesus Christ, the great King and High Priest of his church. 11. Now it is plain that, if perfection of atonement for sin or acceptance with God, or in the form and fellowship of the visible church, and especially in holiness and happiness, could have been really and effectually obtained by the Levitical priesthood, in connexion with which the Jews received, and in part observed the law of Moses, there could have been no need to introduce an high priesthood after another and higher order.

21 (For those priests were made ^zwithout

2. It therefore necessarily follows that the Levitical priesthood, and the ceremonial law connected with it, must be changed and abolished to make way for a better priesthood, and an evangelical dispensation in the person of Christ: for if the priesthood, established by, and connected with, the ceremonial law of Moses, be altered, that law, the administration of which was chiefly confined to the Aaronical priesthood, must also be abolished, to make way for this evangelical constitution, which derives its efficacy from that more excellent and exalted order of priesthood. 13, 14. And, as one evidence hereof, it is manifest that Jesus Christ, who was prefigured by Melchizedec, did not spring of the tribe of Levi, to which the legal priesthood was restricted, but of the tribe of Judah, none of which had any warrant from God to officiate as priests, in offering sacrifices, burning incense, or the like. 15—17. And another evidence that the Levitical priesthood, and the ceremonial law which depended on it, must be abolished, is, that there is now, according to ancient predictions, divinely raised up an High Priest after the different and more excellent order of Melchizedec;—even an High Priest who is not appointed to his office according to the ceremonial law of carnal ordinances given by Moses, by which the frail and decaying descendants of Levi were appointed to theirs, but by a far more excellent and abiding constitution, suited to that unchangeable life which he has in himself as the eternal Son of God, and to that eternal life of glory and honour to which he is now advanced as God-man Mediator: for, as hath been repeatedly hinted, God, by solemn oath, declared him, in his one Person, a Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec. 18. And in this new and everlasting priesthood of Christ there is really supposed or implied an abrogation of the whole ceremonial law of Moses, as insufficient and unavailable to purge men's consciences from guilt, or to justify them to eternal life: 19. For that law was of itself quite incapable of perfecting its worshippers in any thing belonging to their conscience and reconciliation with God, and was merely intended to prefigure Jesus Christ and his priestly character and work, and the gospel state of the church founded thereon;—by the introduction of which is presented to us a better ground of confidence towards God, and a better, nearer, and more advantageous access to him, than ever the Jews or even their priests, had by the law. 20, 21. And, to assure us hereof, Christ was not chosen and installed in his priestly office in the less solemn manner of the Aaronic priests; but to mark the excellency, unchangeableness, and perpetuity, of 24 But this man, "because he continueth ever, hath an "unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore "he is able also to save them †to the uttermost that come unto God by him, "seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

26 "For such an High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, "and made higher than the heavens :

27 Who needeth not daily, as "those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's : for this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests "who have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh "the Son, who is †consecrated for evermore.

CHAP. VIII.

(1) Further demonstrates the excellency of Christ's Priesthood above that of Aaron, in respect of the place where he now officiates, the sacrifice which he offered, and the covenant of which he is the Mediator; 1-6. (2) Shews the excellency of the covenant of grace and gospel dispensation above the legal covenant and ceremonial dispensation; 7-13, his Priesthood, his father constituted him a priest for ever in his own person, with the irrevocable solemnity of an oath. 22. Yea, in the proportion to the superior excellence of his Priesthood to the Levitical, in his nature and form of instalment, Jesus, our once-crucified but now exalted Saviour, was divinely constituted the undertaker, promiser, and sponsor, for us in the infinitely more excellent covenant of grace; particularly with respect to its last dispensation under the gospel, when, by his death, it was put in force, and clearly dispensed to men in the form of a testament, in which all his purchased blessings are freely bequeathed to the heirs of promise. 23, 24. And further to manifest the weakness and unprofitableness of the legal or ceremonial dispensation, the priests, being all mortal, succeeded one another in their different generations, and could never, after death, resume their office;—but Jesus Christ, being God-man, who could never die out of his office, but perpetually and everlastingly abides in the execution of it, without any interruption by his death, has, in his own single person, an unchangeable and everlasting Priesthood, which cannot pass away from him to another. 25. From what has been said concerning Christ, as our great High Priest, it necessarily follows that he has not only all divine ability originally in himself, but also all official power and authority, as well as willingness to give complete deliverance from all sin and misery, fears and dangers, and to advance to all the glory and blessedness of the heavenly state,—to the utmost of their wants, desires, hopes, and capacities, and to the utmost boundaries of infinite duration,—all those that, in prayer, or other parts of gospel worship, come unto God through him as their only Mediator,—seeing he ever liveth as God in their nature, and as their great High Priest and Advocate, to make continual intercession for them; pleading that, through the merits of his obedience and suffering, all the spiritual, temporal, and eternal blessings of the new covenant may be given them in due time: 26. For such an excellent, almighty, and ever-living, High Priest was necessary and alone fit for us, who is, in every respect and degree, pure from sinful pollution in heart and life, and who, in holiness, as well as in dignity, authority, and exaltation, far transcends all the holy angels and glorified saints in the heavenly state; 27. Who needed not, in the manner of the Aaronic priests, first to offer up sacrifice for his own sins, and then for the sins of his people, nor needed to repeat his sacrifice for their sins; his one offering of himself as an atoning sacrifice being of such infinite worth as to finish transgression, and make an end of sin, obtain eternal redemption, and perfect for ever them that are sacrificed. 28. For the ceremonial law appointed men priests, who were sinful, weak, and mortal; but the oath of God, which was afterwards intimated, invested the eternal Son of God, who is absolutely unblemished and perfect, with a priesthood which is of perpetual duration and efficacy for the salvation of men.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Superlative is the excellency and royal dignity of our great High Priest Jesus Christ. In his supernatural and divine call;—his transcendent ability to fulfil all righteousness, and bless his people;—in the dignity and moral qualifications of his person;—in the solemn manner of his instalment;—and in the spiritual nature, marvellous efficacy, unchangeable and incommunicable nature and perpetual duration, of his Priesthood, he far transcends all the Levitical priests of the Old Testament. Consider, O my soul, how great this God-man is. Never, by attempts towards self-righteousness, strive to put him from, or deprive him of the honour of, his Priesthood. And, while he lives as a Surety, a righteous advocate, with the Father, let nothing,

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum. "We have such an High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 "A minister "of the sanctuary, and of "the true tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 "For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices : wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.

4 For "if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law :

5 Who serve "unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle : "for see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 "But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the Mediator of a better †covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 "For, if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For, finding fault with them, he saith, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah :

9 "Not according to the covenant "that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them not even sin itself, while felt and lamented over, hinder my boldest approaches to his throne of grace.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. Now all that I have said, in comparing Christ to Melchizedec and the Aaronic priests may be summoned up in this—that, in him, we have a transcendently more glorious High Priest, who, after offering himself as a sacrifice of infinite value and efficacy, is, in virtue thereof, advanced to the most glorious state of rest, dignity, power, and authority, in heaven. 2. That there, in the heavenly sanctuary, and in the tabernacle of his own manhood, both of which were framed, not by human influence, but by the immediate operation of God himself, he may, for ever, carry on the intercessory work of his Priesthood for the effectual promoting and securing of our eternal salvation: 3. For the especial business of every high priest, for which he is appointed and authorized of God, is to present oblations and sacrifices of atonement, which must be slain and offered, before he carry the blood into the most holy place, and in order to his carrying it in; it was therefore absolutely necessary that Jesus, our great gospel High Priest, should have a sacrifice to offer answerable to the dignity of his person, and the glory of his exalted state in heaven, where it must be presented before the throne of God: 4. For, if Christ had continued still upon earth, he could not have executed that most glorious part of his priestly work which was to be performed in the sanctuary; since, according to the Jewish law, none could be admitted to present oblations in their Holy of Holies but the Aaronic high priests. 5. Who, as ministers thereof, perform the whole service of that tabernacle and sanctuary, which were intended but as a typical draught of that true sanctuary and tabernacle in which our Lord Jesus now officiates as our interceding High Priest:—as was obscurely intimated in God's giving Moses an heavenly model of it, and charging him to form every thing, even the most minute, exactly according to that model: 6. But now our blessed Lord, in his exalted state is, by virtue of his Father's appointment, actually engaged in a far more excellent, honourable, and beneficial ministration, than ever any was before him,—in proportion to the incomparably greater excellency and advantage of the new covenant dispensation, of which he is the only Mediator; for, taking away all differences between God and his people, and purchasing all its spiritual and eternal blessings for them, by his sacrifice of himself, and ratifying and securing to them all its promises and blessings, and enabling them to accept of it, and yield up themselves to God, according to the tenor of it. And this covenant was authoritatively established upon more spiritual, advantageous, heavenly, and absolute, promises than were contained in the law or legal dispensation appointed at Sinai. For, if God's covenant of peculiar relation to the Israelites, or the legal dispensation of the covenant of grace which they were received, had been every way sufficient in light, grace, and efficacy, for perfecting the state of the church on earth or in heaven, "there had never been any ground for God to contrive or establish, or his people to desire, another more spiritual and complete administration of the covenant of grace on earth, as it is plain there was: 8. For, after accusing and reproving the Jews for their breaches of that covenant under which they were, and which did not secure their obedience, in a most solemn manner he promises irrevocably to establish with all his chosen people, Jews or Gentiles, a new covenant dispensation of free and absolute promises; 9. Which should be inexpressibly more gracious, spiritual, effectual, and lasting, than that covenant of peculiar relation which he had made with the Israelites after he had, by almighty influences and numbered miracles, delivered them from Returning to his main argument, the apostle (1) Gives an account of the Jewish sanctuary and its utensils; 1—5. (2) Shews their use and meaning in their figurative services and sacrifices; 6—10. (3) Explains how their signification was accomplished in Christ; 11—22. (4) In application of what had been said, infers the necessity, superior dignity, and efficacy, of his priesthood, and sacrifice; 23—28.

their miserable bondage in Egypt; or than the legal dispensation of the covenant of grace, to which they were subjected;—both of which, through the treachery of their own hearts and the temptations of Satan and the world, they had despised and violated; and had thereby provoked God justly to reject them from being his peculiar people, and to cast them out of his land. 10. In which new covenant, made with his spiritual Israel of all nations, God promises effectually to enlighten and renew their understandings, and make them savingly to discern the laws, doctrines and promises, of his word,—and, by an almighty influence, to impress them upon their conscience, will and affections to the renewing thereof,—and to be a God to them, being all to them, and doing all for them, that is necessary to their temporal, spiritual, and eternal happiness;—and by his grace to enable and determine them to believe in, love, and devote themselves to him, and own and serve him, as persons redeemed, adopted, and saved by him; 11. And thus to give such experimental, believing, affectionate, and practical, knowledge of his own perfections, counsels, and will, and of the way of salvation through the Messiah to all of them, that few or none of them shall need to be taught the fundamental principles of religion; 12. And, for preventing all obstruction of the saving benefits promised, to give them a full, free, and irreversible, pardon of all their sins, original, or actual, through the atoning righteousness of his Son. 13. Now this very promise of a more gracious, spiritual, and efficacious, dispensation of the covenant of grace under the gospel, plainly intimates the weakness and unprofitableness of the Mosaic dispensation; and that it was to be set aside and disannulled, as a thing out of date; and indeed, being already almost useless, it will, with all its rites, ceremonies, and institutions, be quickly and utterly abolished, in the destruction of your temple and the dispersion of your nation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Contemplate, O my soul, in what an exalted and efficacious manner Jesus my High Priest has ascended to his Father's right hand, and in my nature, continually intercedes for men—for me—upon the footing of his own finished righteousness! In a most delightful manner the shadowy priests and offerings are now abolished by him, and his righteousness and intercession; and firmly hath he established his blessed covenant of grace and gospel dispensation, in which God binds himself to give all necessary instruction, renovation, and forgiveness, and is himself ALL in ALL. Unchangeable and lasting are its blessings, and issuing in the eternal happiness of all the heirs of promise.

CHAP. IX. Ver. I. But, to return to our comparison of the earthly and heavenly sanctuary,—the Sinai covenant of God's peculiar headship over Israel, and the legal dispensation of the covenant of grace, therewith connected, had various typical ordinances of God's appointment for religious worship, and a magnificent tent or temple for the celebration of those ordinances, formed by men out of earthly materials. 2. In the first or eastern apartment of this tent or temple stood the golden candlestick, with its seven burning lamps, representing Christ, his Spirit, oracles, and ordinances, as the light of the church;—and the golden table, with its twelve loaves of shew-bread, which represented him as the abundant, suitable, and never-failing, provision of his people,—and them as in him, presented before God in their respective generations. 3, 4. Passing through this eastern apartment, called the sanctuary, you entered into the western, called the ORACLE, or HOLY OF HOLIES,—where was the golden censer, in which the high priest carried the burning coals from the altar of burnt-offering,

4 Which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant

5 And over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercy seat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now, when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God.

7 But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people:

8 The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

9 Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience;

10 Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ, being come an High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood; he entered in, to save us by his own blood.

to burn the incense before the ark on the day of expiation, as a representation of Jesus' intercession, founded on, and deriving its virtue from, his atoning sacrifice;—and the ark, which contained the law of the covenant made with Israel, and represented Christ as the reconciler and rest of JEHOVAH, and end of the law for righteousness to believers;—and the golden pot of manna, which represented him as the true and ever-living bread which came down from heaven;—and the budding rod, with which Aaron and Moses had wrought many miracles, and which represented Jesus Christ as growing out of dry ground, but manifested to be our ever-glorious and flourishing High Priest;—and, in fine, the two tables on which God at Sinai wrote the ten commandments of the moral law, lodged in the midst of the ark, intimating their fulfilment in Christ, as a covenant, for the justification of his people, and their continuing an unchangeable and perpetual rule of holy obedience in his hand. 5. And above the ark were two glorious cherubims of gold, which represented holy angels and gospel ministers as looking into, admiring, and ready to promote, our redemption to God through the righteousness of his Son.—But these things not being so directly to my purpose, I shall not insist upon them.—6. Now this sacred tent or temple being thoroughly prepared, according to the divine model given to Moses or David, the ordinary priests, in their turns, entered into it every day, to offer sacrifice, burn incense, and dress the lamps. 7. But the high priest alone, and only upon the day of the great annual expiation, entered into the Holy of Holies, and that not without blood of expiatory sacrifices, one for himself and another for the Israelites' sins of infirmity and ignorance: 8. By this restricted access to the Holy of Holies, the spirit of God plainly signifying, that the access of believers to the throne of grace, or heavenly state, was not, as now, clearly revealed, while the ceremonial tabernacle, temple, and services thereof, continued to be established and observed by divine institution. 9. For these structures, and all the services pertaining to them, were, by the appointment of God, no more than temporary, imperfect, and figurative representations of those good things which have been manifested and fulfilled under the gospel:—None of their oblations, bloody and unbloody, having the smallest influence to remove the moral guilt of sin from their conscience, but only to remove the ceremonial defilement and prevent temporal punishments. 10. Consisting in meat-offerings and drink-offerings, manifold washings and sprinklings, and numberless other ceremonies, which only removed external ceremonial pollutions, and consecrated to external service;—and which, because of their insufficiency to purify the conscience and perfect the state of the church, were appointed to continue no longer than till the Messiah, being come, should establish in the church a complete state of spirituality and holiness, light and grace. 11. But he, having at last actually appeared in our nature as an High Priest, hath accomplished what had been long prefigured by ceremonial ordinances, and purchased and procured for his people the expected blessings of grace and glory, by officiating in his transcendently excellent manhood, and in the heavenly state, both of which were formed by the immediate operation of God himself. 12. Nor did the sacrifice, by virtue of which he entered into the heavenly state, in dignity and excellency less transcend the Levitical sacrifices; for it was not, as in the case of the Jewish sacrifices, by the blood of mean, though useful animals, but by his own precious blood; that he, through the vail of his own flesh, entered into the heavenly oracle; to present himself God man, with the merit of his perfect and ever available sacrifice for us, before the immediate presence of God; having thereby purchased and secured for us, not a figurative pardon or annual reprieve, but a complete and everlasting forgiveness, and deliverance tered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

13 For, if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh;

14 How much more shall the "blood of Christ, who *through the eternal Spirit offered himself *without spot to God, "purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?

15 And for this cause he is the Mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they who are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity *be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon, neither the first testament was dedicated without blood.

19 For, when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people, according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkleth both the book and all the people, 20 Saying, This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover, he sprinkled likewise with blood both the tabernacle and all the vessels of the ministry.

from sin, Satan, and the broken law, the incensed wrath of God, a present evil world, and death,—and a full and unchangeable right and title to an eternal inheritance of all blessedness and glory:

13. For, if the blood of bulls and goats, and other mean and insignificant animals, or the ashes of an heifer, mingled with running water, were, by God's appointment, effectual to purify men from the external ceremonial impurities from their bodies, and give them a re-admission to public worship in the tabernacle or temple, and into the congregation of the Lord, from which they had been excluded on account of the defilement,

14. How much more effectually and gloriously shall Jesus' finished righteousness, his unblemished and infinitely valuable sacrifice of himself—which he, through the infinite dignity and supporting influence of his divine nature sanctifying his gift, and through the unmeasurable unction and inconceivable influence of the Holy Ghost, did, with the utmost readiness and submission to his Father's will, with entire trust and confidence in him, with fervent zeal for his glory, and with the most amazing love and compassion to his people,—fulfil and offer up to God, as an offended Judge,—purge your consciences from all the guilt and defilement of your unprofitable, abominable, and destructive, works of wickedness, and free you from all dreadful apprehensions of condemnation and wrath on their account; and animate and enable you, with confidence and cheerfulness here, and in perfection hereafter, to believe in, worship, and obey, the only living and true God.

15. And, for bringing about this great end, he undertook and executes the office of Mediator of the new and better covenant, and particularly of the New Testament dispensation of it; that by means, not of legal sacrifices, but of his own death, as an atonement for the sins of those under the Old as well as New Testament, who, in whatever period, have been or are effectually called into a state of union to, and fellowship with him,—they might, in a free and honourable manner, be made partakers of the blessings of grace here, and glory hereafter.

16, 17. And the new covenant, as dispensed to us, being of a testamentary nature, in which Jesus Christ, who purchased all possible blessings, and, as Trustee of the covenant, has them all lodged in his hand, actually bequeaths them to sinful men; his death was also necessary to render this testamentary disposition firm and irrevocable, and of full force to all them who by faith claim their title under him.

18-20. And it was chiefly in order to prefigure this that the Sinai covenant and establishment of the legal dispensation was ratified and confirmed by the blood of typical sacrifices; and that Moses, the typical mediator, having recited to the Israelites the principal laws of the covenant respecting them as a church and nation, did, in a solemn manner, sprinkle the book in which those laws were written, and all the representatives of the people, with the blood of the sacrifices offered on that occasion,—solemnly intimating that that sprinkling of blood was a divinely instituted confirmation of the covenant between God and them, whereby his faithfulness for fulfilling his promises, and their obedience in performing the duties of it, were mutually engaged.

21. Moreover, when the tabernacle was first erected, and afterwards, once every year, on the great day of expiation, it, and all the vessels of service therein, were ceremonially purged from defilement, and consecrated to their sacred use, by a sprinkling of sacrificial blood.

22. Nay, so important was the blood of sacrifices under that dispensation, that almost all purification from ceremonial defilement was effected by the offering and sprinkling of it; and without the bloodshedding of typical sacrifices no typical forgiveness of sin, or removal from temporal judgments, could be obtained.

23. Now, if it was necessary that the book and the people, the tabernacle and its furniture, which were but figurative representations of spiritual and heavenly things, should

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And, as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment, 28 So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

CHAP. X.

To warn the Hebrews from the Levitical dispensation, the apostle

(1) Demonstrates the insufficiency of their legal sacrifices to take away sin; 1-4. (2) Represents the necessity and efficacy of the one sacrifice of Jesus Christ to purchase and secure all substantial blessings, according to the tenor of the new covenant; 5-18. (3) Encourages them to improve his priesthood and sacrifice in bold approaches to God, steadfastness in the faith, mutual excitement to good works, careful attendance on ordinances, and earnest perseverance in their Christian profession and practice;—remembering the dreadful danger of apostacy; 19-39.

Ch. 8. 5. & 9. 9, 11, 23. 24. 2. 17. ch. 9. 2, 13, 16. & 7. 11, 13. ver. 3, 11-14.

FOR the law, having a shadow of good things to come, and not the be purified and consecrated to their sacred use by typical sacrifices and sprinklings, it was certainly proper that Jesus Christ and his people, and all the spiritual and heavenly things, places, and furniture, should be consecrated by the infinitely more excellent sacrifice and blood of God's only begotten Son:

24. For Jesus Christ, the anointed High Priest of his church, has not, like the Jewish high priest, entered into holy places formed by the art and labour of men, which were but mere figures of the heavenly sanctuary, but has, in his human nature, ascended into heaven itself, that there, in the immediate presence of God, he might continually present himself as our Representative, and the merits of his blood as the price of our eternal salvation.

25, 26. Nor was it necessary that Christ, like the Jewish high priests, should repeat his atoning sacrifice, that he might again and again enter into the heavenly sanctuary; for, had that been the case, it had been necessary very often, since the fall of man, to have suffered unto death, that he might make atonement for one generation after another; but such is the infinite dignity, perfection, and virtue of his sacrifice, and such its extensive influence to former, present, and future, generations, that his single manifestation of himself in the end of the ceremonial dispensation, and beginning of the gospel period, to offer his soul and body as personally united to his divine nature, was absolutely sufficient and effectual to expiate the guilt and abolish the power and fruits of all the sins of his people.

27. And as, by the righteous appointment of God, all sinful men must, in the ordinary course of nature, once die, and after that appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that a final and decisive sentence, relative to their eternal happiness or misery, may pass upon them, according to their qualities, thoughts, words, and actions: 28. So Christ, to fulfil the law of God as a broken covenant, and to abolish the curse and purchase eternal happiness, was once, and but once, offered in his sacrifice, to bear the imputed iniquities, and suffer the punishment, of all the unnumbered millions of his chosen people: and unto them, who, by faith, hope, desire, and love, expect, and patiently wait for, his coming again to judge the world, he will, at the last day, appear, not as formerly, charged with sin, or bearing the punishment of it, but in the most transcendent glory and majesty, to give them the complete enjoyment of that heavenly and eternal happiness which he purchased for them by his death.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—The great things concerning Jesus Christ, and salvation through him, were gradually, but for a long time obscurely, and by dark shadows, revealed to the church. But infinitely glorious and useful must he be, our great High Priest, to prefigure whom, in his person and service, so many ancient types were necessary. Unbounded is the value and efficacy of his atoning sacrifice, and extensive his virtue through time and through eternity. Full of blessings to sinful men, and infinitely free, firm, and irrevocable, are the promises of the new covenant, ratified by his death. And necessary for his honour, and for our salvation, is his intercession at his Father's right hand—and how efficacious and successful! Certain and unavoidable are death and judgment. Happy are they who, having all their sins forgiven through his blood, are looking for his glorious appearance to judge and save them.—Quickly shall he, my soul, who bore the curse, hung on the cross, and lay in the grave, sit down on his great white throne to judge and save me.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. From the hints which I have suggested, it is plain that the Mosaic law, with its ceremonial institutions, being, as it were, mere representations of the shadows of Christ's person, office, work, sufferings, and blessings; the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

2 For then * would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers, ^bonce purged, should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body [†]thast thou prepared me:

6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure:

7 Then said I, Lo, I come, ^b(in the volume of the book it is written of me), to do thy will, O God.

8 Above, when he said, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for sin, thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law;

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will we are sanctified, through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering, and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat down on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for, after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the LORD, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now, where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

20 By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us through the vail, that is to say, his flesh:

21 And having an High Priest over the house of God;

22 Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our heart sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

23 Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised);

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:

25 Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is: but exhorting one another; and so most noted sacrifices thereof, offered every year on the great day of general atonement, could never free the worshippers from the guilt of sin, or bring them into a state of friendship, acceptance, and perfect conformity to God.

2. For, if these important ends had been perfectly obtained by those yearly sacrifices of national atonement, they would never have been repeated; as the worshippers concerned in them, being once completely cleansed from their guilt, and accepted of God to eternal life, could never more have had any perplexing or condemning fears on account of sin in their own conscience.

3. But, so far was this from being the case, that, in the very offering of those sacrifices, there was every year, on the day of general expiation, a repeated, solemn, and public, confession of the Israelites' iniquities, even of those which preceded the former annual expiations, as well as of those which were committed after it, in order that they might afflict their souls for them.

4. For indeed such is the infinite disproportion between the demerit of sin, or the satisfaction demanded for it by the law and justice of God, and the worthless sacrifices of bulls and goats, that no rules of wisdom or justice could admit them as sufficient to make a true, proper, and effectual, atonement for sin.

5—9. And it is plain that the insufficiency of legal sacrifices to atone for sin, or render men acceptable to God, is represented in the fortieth Psalm as the occasion of God's preparing a perfect human nature for his own Son to obey and suffer in,—and of Christ's cheerful and solemn engagement to fulfil the law, and satisfy justice, in the room and stead of his people, according to his will and purpose in the covenant of grace;

10. By which will of God, as perfectly fulfilled in Jesus' sinless offering, not of bulls and goats, but of himself, we are really and effectually purged and delivered from the guilt, power, and defilement, of our sins, and are dedicated to the service of God.

11—14. Every Aaronic priest, in token of humble reverence, and of readiness for further service, stands before God, frequently offering the same kind of sacrifices, daily, weekly, monthly, or annually, which can never make atonement for, nor remove the guilt or pollution of, sin:—but so incomparably superior is the dignity of our gospel High Priest in his person and sacrifice, that, after finishing his one atonement for all the sins of his people, he rose from the dead, to immortal honour, and with majesty, glory, and acceptance, entered on a state of the highest dignity, rest, and authority,—thenceforward never repeating his sacrifice, but joyfully expecting the fulfilment of his Father's promise, and exercising all power in heaven and earth, till sin, Satan, the world, and death, be actually, universally, and completely, subdued, trampled on, and triumphed over, by him.—For by that one offering of himself upon the cross, he has obtained a perfect, unchangeable, and eternal, deliverance from guilt, and a fitness for the enjoyment and service of God in the nearest relation and access to him, and in the most perfect state of the church, for all those who are dedicated to God, and purged from their sins, through faith in him.

15—17. And this the Holy Ghost in scripture plainly testifies, in his representation of the new covenant, which Christ hath fulfilled and established, and all the blessings of which he hath completely purchased;—in which, after a gracious promise effectually to inscribe the doctrines of his revelation in his people's hearts and minds, he adds an absolute, infinitely free, and authoritative, promise of such perfect pardon of all their swerings from and transgressions of his law, as that they never more shall be held guilty of or upbraided for them.—

18. Now, where there is such complete and everlasting forgiveness of all transgresses established in the covenant, and attested by the Holy Ghost, it is manifestly impossible that there can be any need of any further atoning sacrifices for sins, or of Christ's repeating the sacrifice of himself.—19. Since, therefore, my dear brethren much the more as ye see the day approaching.

26 For, if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, 27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

28 He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses :

29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace ?

30 For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the LORD. And again, The LORD shall judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions ;

33 Partly whilst ye were made a gazing stock both by reproaches and afflictions ;

our religious meetings, and admonish, excite, and encourage, others to do so, as the time of the utter destruction of Jerusalem, and the dispersion of your nation, and of death and judgment, is drawing nigh ; which will be inexpressibly dreadful to apostates : 26. For, if any of us professed Christians, through unbelief, prejudice, pride, or worldly mindedness, deliberately, resolutely, and wilfully, reject the doctrines and laws of the gospel dispensation, and turn back to Judaism, Heathenism, or profaneness, after we have been enlightened and convinced of the truth and excellency of them, we have perfidiously rejected the last and only sacrifice of Christ for remission of sins,—can have no interest in it, nor any hope of pardon or acceptance with God : 27. But all that remains for us, as our dreadful portion, is a terrible foreboding in our own consciences of the most righteous, but tremendous and everlasting, vengeance of God, to torment and consume us in this world, and especially in that which is to come. 28, 29. And nothing can be more just ; for, if one who presumptuously violated even the ceremonial laws of Moses was appointed to death if the fact could be clearly proved, how much more inexpressibly dreadful and lasting punishment must your reason and conscience allow to be due to, and shall be inflicted upon, such resolute and wilful apostates from Christ and his truth, who, contrary to clear convictions of the truth, light, and grace, of the gospel, have, with the vilest insolence and contempt, trampled upon the person, authority, mediation, oracles, and ordinances, of the eternal Son of God, as if he had been an impostor ; and who, instead of trusting for justification and salvation to his precious blood, by which the condition of the covenant of grace was fulfilled, its blessings purchased, and its promises and the New Testament dispensation ratified ;—and by which he was consecrated to and prepared for his exalted work of mediation ; and themselves apparently justified, sanctified, and set apart to the service of God ; have profanely slighted and injuriously treated it, as if less holy than the blood of bulls and goats, or as if the blood of a malefactor ;—and who have spitefully, maliciously, and contemptuously, opposed, affronted, and vilified, the person, operation, and graces, of the graciously conferred and grace bestowing Spirit of God ! 30. Now we know that the sovereign Lord of heaven and earth, whose equity and truth are incontrollable and power irresistible, hath solemnly claimed it, as his high and distinguishing prerogative, to vindicate his own honour, and to resent the injuries done him, particularly by perfidious revolters from his government. 31. How inexpressibly tremendous then must be the punishment of those wilful apostates, when they fall as victims into the hands of his justice, without any mixture of mercy, to be punished by the immediate and almighty arm of that great and terrible God, whose existence, power, and activity, continue invariably, and for ever, to execute wrath to the uttermost on the despisers of his Son, Spirit, and grace, as well as to complete the happiness of those who persevere in grace. 32. But, to encourage your watchfulness against the very smallest beginnings of apostasy, let me beseech you seriously to reflect upon that solid satisfaction and hope which ye formerly experienced, in the time of your conversion to Christ ; in which, as soon as ye were enlightened in the knowledge of Christ, and the way of salvation through him, assisted of God, ye patiently sustained, with Christian fortitude, a multitude of severe persecutions from your own countrymen ; 33. Partly while ye were maliciously accused, contemptuously disgraced, virulently derided, and cruelly oppressed, for righteousness' sake ; and partly while ye tenderly sympathised and mourned with, courageously owned and assisted, your fellow Christians, and the apostles and servants of Christ, when they were abused and persecuted : 34. For, when I myself was imprisoned for the sake of Christ ye boldly acknowledged and stood by me, kindly sympathized with me, prayed for me, and, to the utmost of your power, supplied my wants ; yea, for the sake of Christ and his cause, ye cheerfully endured the loss of the conveniences and necessities of life, which were violently wrested from you by furious persecutors,—being fully satisfied, from the promise of God and your own happy experience, that there is laid up for you in the new covenant and in heaven, the more substantial, durable, and enriching treasure of everlasting life, purchased for you by Christ, and graciously given to you as your reward in adhering to his cause. 35. Animated, therefore, by a lively faith in the promises of the gospel, and by the remembrance of your holy fortitude in suffering for him hitherto, take heed, lest, through the continuance or increase of your persecutions, and the workings of your own fear and unbelief under tions ; and partly whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience ; that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now the just shall live by faith : but, if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

them, ye should relinquish your holy boldness, freedom, and courage, in professing and following of Christ, and your joyful hopes of eternal life through him, which, for the present, afford you noble support and satisfaction under your trials, and shall quickly issue in your enjoyment of eternal happiness above, which will infinitely more than compensate all the troubles you can endure for the sake of Christ on earth : 36. For, according to the wise and holy appointment of God, the declaration of his word and the disposals of his providence, such is your present state of afflictions and persecutions, that ye absolutely need, and must have, grace to enable you to live in the constant exercise of a calm, quiet, humble, and resigned, submission to the sovereign will of God in them ;—that after cheerfully yielding up yourselves, through the whole course of your lives, to the commanding and disposing will of God in the most difficult instances of it, ye may receive the promised blessing of eternal life at the end of your spiritual race and warfare. 37. For, according to an ancient prediction, applicable to the Messiah in all his remarkable appearances, it is but a very short time, and he will certainly come to destroy your Jewish adversaries, and deliver you from their oppression ;—nay, when he will come to the last judgment, for the utter destruction of all unbelieving and impenitent sinners, and to put you into the full possession of eternal life ; nor will he tarry one moment beyond the time fixed on as best for his work and your advantage in his eternal purpose. 38. And, for your further incitement, remember that, according to a subsequent prediction, whoever are justified through, and purified in heart by, faith, shall, by means of that grace, persevere in a life of fellowship with God, obedience to his law, and patient submission to his providence on earth,—and be admitted to a life of blessedness and glory with Christ for ever :—but, if any man, after making a profession of faith in Christ, through pride and unbelief, apostatize from him, and renounce the profession of his name, God will certainly loathe, abhor, and miserably destroy, him. 39. But we who are sincere in our profession of Christ, and are truly before God what we appear before men, are not of the number of those hypocritical and treacherous professors who revolt from him to their own everlasting destruction ; but of those who, having truly believed with our heart, shall steadfastly persevere in holiness, kept by the power of God, through a faith which receives, and will certainly issue in, the eternal salvation of our soul.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—In their number, their repetitions, and their frequently spreading the ceremonial defilement, was deeply marked the insufficiency of legal sacrifices and washings to remove our sin, or recommend us to the favour of God. But infinitely meritorious and effectual is the sacrifice of Christ ; who, in consequence of God's eternal purposes, covenant engagements, and ancient promises, appeared in our nature, and fulfilled all righteousness in his obedience unto death. The blessed ratification of all his promises ; full forgiveness ; gracious sanctification ; delightful access to God ; yea, eternal redemption ; are hereby secured for his people. Diligently should we then improve these blessings in the most familiar devotion ; in mutual excitement to love and good works ; by constancy in church fellowship and public worship ; and in watchfulness against the first and smallest beginnings, of apostasy, or contempt of him and his grace !—Patiently and in hope should we persevere under our manifold sufferings for his sake, tenderly sympathize with his suffering servants ; and steadfastly cleave to him and live upon him by faith. His comforting promises, refreshing presence, and eternal rewards, will more than balance all our adversities on earth.—But, alas, inexpressible is the guilt and danger of those who wilfully reject or apostatize from him ! O, my soul, exceedingly fear and quake ! Alas ! how far and how long I may proceed in the appearances of religion, and, after all, with Judas, sink into the depths of hell !

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. Now, to give you a summary account of the excellent nature and effects of that faith by which men believe unto salvation,—it gives a sort of present subsistence in the mind to, and a confident expectation of, future blessings ; which, by the infallible promise of God, are as fully ascertained and realized to the believer's comfort as if he actually possessed them. And, merely on the credit of divine revelation, it gives us as clear and convincing a demon-

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

13 These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city.

17 By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son;

18 Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19 Accounting that God was able to raise him up even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.

20 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.

stration of invisible things as if they were ever so plainly exhibited to our natural sight: 2. For, by this realizing and evidencing exercise of faith, our godly ancestors, all along from the time of the first promise till now, obtained an honourable testimony from God, part of which is contained in his word.—

3. Though, from reason and observation, we are obliged to conclude the wonderful fabric of this world to have been the workmanship of God, yet it is by faith in his word, as the evidence of things not seen, that we certainly know that God formed all things by a mere act of his will, and that in such beautiful order, out of the mere chaos, once covered with absolute darkness.

4. By faith in God's first promise of Christ's incarnation and sufferings, and in his appointment of sacrifices to prefigure them, Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he humbly acknowledged his own guilt, and prefigured the death of the Messiah, as the Lamb of God, to make atonement for the sins of his people; and hence, by some visible token from heaven, as well as by inward intimations to his conscience, God testified to him that his person was justified, and his sacrifice accepted, through Christ. And by means of this faith, as his case stands recorded in the book of God, Abel, though dead long ago, still instructs us that the only way of a sinner's justification before God is through faith in the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ: and that the murder of innocents, and especially of faithful saints, shall be terribly punished.

5. By faith, which rendered him accepted in the Beloved, and purified his heart from dead works to perfect holiness, in the most close walking with God, Enoch, the seventh from Adam, was miraculously translated to heaven, soul and body, without undergoing the ordinary change of death: and, even before he was rapt up into heaven, God attested to his conscience, and, perhaps to his neighbours, that his person and works were acceptable in his sight.

6. But, without such realizing and evidencing faith in Christ it is impossible to please God; for he that approaches him in prayer, or any other religious worship, must, upon the ground of revelation, believe that God really exists as the only true God, and that he freely gives himself, and all blessings of grace and glory, as an exceeding great and gracious reward, to those that humbly, earnestly, perseveringly, and with their whole heart, seek his face and favour in Christ, in the means of his own appointment, and in reliance on his covenant promises.

7. By faith, Noah, who was righteous before God, and walked with him, crediting his threatening to destroy the old world, and his promise to reserve him and his family, built an ark, wherein they, and a remnant of animals, were saved from the general deluge: by which faith in the truth, power, justice, and mercy, of God, revealed to him,—and by his building the ark, in obedience to God's command,—and by his repeated preaching of righteousness,—he doctrinally and practically condemned the inhabitants of the old world: and by his faith in the Messiah, who was typified by his ark as the only mean of salvation, he became heir of the world, renewed after the flood, and of the righteousness of Christ received by faith, and of all the blessings, temporal, spiritual, or eternal, purchased by it.

8. It was by faith in the authority of God, and in his promise to give to him and to his seed a land figurative of the heavenly inheritance, that Abraham, the friend of God, and father of the Jews and of all believers, at his call, left his native country of Chaldaea, and set out on a journey to a land which he knew nothing of, no not so much as its name, or the way to it. 9. It was by faith in the promise and protection of God that he, with Isaac and Jacob, his fellow heirs of the promised Canaan, contentedly wandered, as a stranger and pilgrim in that country, among the Heathen inhabitants, dwelling only in moveable tents.

10. For, God having promised to be his exceeding great reward, and his God for ever, and that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed, he by faith looked through the figurative Canaan to the earnestly desired and expected, highly privileged, great, glorious, regular, firmly fixed, and everlasting, blessedness of heaven, of which God himself is the Contriver, Form-er, and even the very Substance.

11. It was also by faith, in the faithfulness and power of God engaged in the promise, that Sarah, the beloved wife of Abraham, after her recovery from her unbelief, was enabled, beyond all expectation, and all ordinary influence of second causes, to conceive and bear a son, after she had continued barren till the ninetieth year of her age.

12. And, in virtue of their faith, a prodigiously numerous offspring descended from them, after both of them had appeared beyond all possibility of having any. 13. And not only did Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, and Jacob, live by faith in God's promises and perfections under their trials on earth, but died also in the full and comfortable persuasion that, however little they had experienced of the fulfilment of the promises on earth, God would completely accomplish them,—in giving themselves an immediate entrance into the blessedness of heaven; and increasing their posterity, and settling them in Canaan, as his peculiar people;—and in bringing the Messiah from their loins to be the common Saviour of men:—and they avowed that they looked on themselves as no more than aliens and strangers in this world, passing through it in their way to the heavenly country.

14. And this avowal, that their hearts and hopes, interest and happiness, were not placed on any earthly concerns, manifested to all around them that they looked and hoped for, desired, and earnestly sought after, the large and delightful abodes of heaven, as their native home, in which they should for ever dwell with God as their Father and Friend.

15. And it is evident that the country which they sought after was not their native home in Chaldaea, where their friends and relations continued; for, if they had been inclined to return there, they had time, liberty, and power enough, to do it with safety.

16. But all their desires and expectations centered on that transcendently more excellent, satisfying, glorious, abiding, incorruptible, and undefiled, heavenly inheritance; wherefore God, in his infinite love, condescended to avow himself to be their God in a peculiar and distinguished manner;—and, answerably to this high relation, has graciously appointed, laid out, framed, and fitted up, the heavenly mansions for their whole persons, soul and body, to dwell with himself.

17—19. It was by faith in the promises of God to him and to his seed, particularly that which concerned the Messiah and his extensive salvation, that Abraham,—when required, for the eminent trial of his faith and obedience, to offer up in a burnt-offering his only son Isaac, whom he had obtained by such a miraculous conception and birth, and in whom the promises were to be fulfilled,—so readily complied, and proceeded in this work till stopped by God himself,—accounting and concluding in his own mind, that, though Isaac should be slain and burnt to ashes, God easily could and would raise him from the dead, in order to fulfil the promises in him and his seed. And indeed, as at first he received him from his own and Sarah's dead bodies, on that occasion he received him back from that death to which he had been, without any hope to the contrary, heartily devoted.

20—22. It was by faith in the promises of God that Isaac, by prophetic influence, assigned to Jacob the principal, 23 By faith ^eMoses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment.

24 By faith ^eMoses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

25 ^bChoosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming the reproach ⁱof Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: ^kfor he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.

28 Through faith ^mhe kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them.

29 By faith ⁿthey passed through the Red sea as by dry land; which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith ^othe walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith ^pthe harlot Rahab perished not with them ||that believed not, when she had received the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I more say? for the

and to Esau the subordinate, blessings for themselves and their seed;—and that Jacob, when very feeble, in like manner foretold the fate of Joseph's two sons, assigning the principal glory to Ephraim the younger; and that Joseph, when dying, assured his brethren that God would certainly preserve them in, and in due time bring them out of, Egypt; and, in testimony of his faith herein, appointed them to carry his bones with them to Canaan, and bury them there. 23. It was by faith in God's promises of their preservation in, and deliverance from, Egypt, that Moses' parents, observing something extraordinary in their child, dared, contrary to the commandment of Pharaoh their king, to conceal him three months after his birth. 24—26. By faith in the same promises of God, made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and in the invisible things of the heavenly state, Moses, when forty years old, and extraordinarily qualified with learning and wisdom, renounced his adoptive relation to Pharaoh, which might have issued in his succession to the crown of Egypt, quitted the court, and associated himself with his Hebrew brethren; choosing rather to undergo the severest oppression, suffering, and trouble, with God's own peculiar people, than to gratify his flesh with the enjoyment of all the uncertain and perishing grandeur, affluence, and sensual pleasures, of a pompous, idolatrous, and luxurious, court,—deliberately reckoning reproach, derision, and persecution, for the sake of Christ, and in communion with him and his people, more valuable and useful, for the honour of God and his own spiritual interests, than all the wealth and honours that the kingdom of Egypt could afford:—for he looked off from those perishing riches on the one hand, and beyond those temporal hardships on the other, to the immortal and inexpressible glories reserved for him in heaven, which he knew would more than recompense all the reproaches, wants, and sufferings, he could undergo for the sake of a good conscience on earth. 27. By faith in the command and promise of God, about forty years after, he returned from Midian; and, fearless of king Pharaoh's threatenings and wrath, demanded his permission for the Hebrews to leave the country; and at last, regardless of his furious pursuit, led them forth to liberty, by faith depending entirely on the invisible God. 28. By faith in the promise of God to deliver his people from Egypt, and in the promised Messiah, typified by that divinely appointed ordinance, he, and the children of Israel directed by him, observed the passover, and sprinkled the blood on ^otheir upper lintels and door posts, that the angel, who that very night destroyed all the first-born of the Egyptians, might not hurt them. 29. And it was chiefly by his faith in the promise and command of God that the Red Sea was divided, and a passage opened for the Israelites from Egypt to the Arabian wilderness,—in which Pharaoh and his army, attempting to follow them, were every one of them drowned. 30. It was by the faith of Joshua, Caleb, and others, in the promise, faithfulness, power, and command, of God, that the walls of Jericho miraculously fell down while the Israelites shouted, after they and the ark of God had compassed the city seven days. 31. It was by faith in the God of Israel, and his grant of the land of Canaan to his favourite Jews, that Rahab a Gentile, who had been an harlot, kindly received the spies whom Joshua sent to view the city,—and so, together with her friends, escaped, when the rest of the inhabitants, who disregarded what they had heard or seen of God's miraculous appearances for Israel, perished in a general slaughter. 32. But why should I multiply further instances of the power and triumphs of faith? both my time, and the intended limits of this epistle, forbid me to give a particular account,—how, by faith in the promise and command of God, Gideon reformed his city, and, with an handful of unarmed men, routed the Midianites;—Barak and Deborah, with ten thousand undisciplined troops, vanquished the formidable army of Jabin king of Canaan;—Jephthae overthrew the Ammonites;—Samson, in his life and at his death, destroyed the Philistines;—David endured manifold trials, conquered giants and nations;—Samuel, by time would fail me to tell of ^qGideon, and of ^rBarak, and of ^sSamson, and of ^tJephthae, of ^uDavid also, and ^vSamuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who through faith ^wsubdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, ^xstopped the mouths of lions,

34 ^yQuenched the violence of fire, ^zescaped the edge of the sword, ^aout of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

35 ^bWomen received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:

36 ^cAnd others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment:

37 ^dThey were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, ^ewere slain with the sword: ^fthey wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented;

38 ^g(Of whom the world was not worthy:) ^hthey wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And these all, ⁱhaving obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise;

40 ^jGod having ^kprovided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.

miracles, delivered and terrified his people; Elijah, Elisha, and other prophets, patiently endured their troubles, boldly declared their messages, and, when necessary, confirmed them by miracles;—33. How, through faith in God's promise and providence, Moses and Joshua subdued the Canaanites, and David the nations around;—and they and others not only kept the commandments of God themselves, but reformed their nation, and governed them with great equity and impartiality,—or by remarkable appearances of providence obtained the actual accomplishment of particular promises made to them;—Daniel stopped the mouths of lions in the den: Samson slew one, David another, and Benaiah a third;—34. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, restrained the force of Nebuchadnezzar's fiery furnace; they and Elijah, Elisha, and others, escaped the murderous plots and attempts of cruel tyrants; others, as Hezekiah, were recovered from desperate distempers;—or, as Gideon and David, from weakness and cowardice, became valiant conquerors. 35—38. By means of faith, the Shunamite and widow of Zarephath beheld their deceased sons restored to life; and many, in the persecutions of Ahab, Jehoram, Ahaz, Manasseh, Jehoiakim, or others, courageously endured the most exquisite sufferings and cruel deaths, in hopes of a resurrection to eternal life, refusing to redeem their lives by the smallest apostasy from the truth,—while Isaac, Elisha, Joseph, Samson, Micaiah, and Jeremiah, or others, underwent the most cruel derision, scourging, or imprisonment:—and Naboth, Zechariah, Uriah, and others, were murdered in different cruel and barbarous forms;—and others, of whose converse, admonitions, and prayers, the wicked inhabitants of the world were not worthy, as David, Elijah, and others, were obliged to flee about as vagabonds, from place to place, and hide themselves in deserts, dens, and caves, of the earth. 39, 40. But, though these ancient saints and servants of God, by means of their faith, have obtained an honourable testimony in the infallible records of God's word, and embraced and relied upon the promise of the Messiah, yet they never lived to see him come in the flesh, fulfil the work of our redemption, and introduce the glories of the gospel state of the church.—God having provided for us, who now believe, these better things, that their ancient state of religious worship and privileges might not be perfected without that exhibition of Christ in the flesh, fulfilment of all righteousness, and exceeding riches of grace, which are manifested in their transcendent light, glory, and efficacy, in the gospel dispensation, which we now enjoy.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—What a noble grace is unfeigned faith dwelling in the heart! and how extensively useful! Through the infallible declarations of God, it realizes invisible and future things, and gives them a kind of subsistence in our soul. By receiving and resting on the person and righteousness of Christ, it renders us and our services accepted with God.—Crediting his warnings, and obeying his directions, it delivers from danger and death!—it weans the heart from this world, and sets it on things above;—it enables us to wait for the accomplishment of promises, however unlikely and long delayed;—it animates to the most trying obedience; qualifies for a joyful and devout entrance into the eternal state; enables to look into futurities, upon God's authority and credit; and to prefer sufferings with his people, and for his sake, and an exact obedience to his law, to every thing earthly; and after exploits unnumbered, it issues in eternal rest and triumph.—Sovereign is God in giving it, or its various degrees, to some, while he withholds it from others;—and in exposing his dearest saints to the most singular trials and heaviest troubles on earth to exercise it. But, if he be for us, who can be against or hurt us?—And it is highly unworthy for us Christian believers, notwithstanding our greatly superior advantages, to be so much inferior to some ancient saints in the vigour and distinctness of our faith.

To encourage the Christian Hebrews to perseverance in faith, and patience under all their trials and afflictions, represents to them (1) That they had not only all these ancient worthies, but Christ himself, as their pattern; 1—3. (2) That all these troubles were kindly appointed by God; and would, through faith and patience, have a happy issue in their sanctification; 4—13. (3) Recommends peace and holiness as necessary means of fellowship with God; and, from the fate of Esau, cautions against profane indulgence of lust or contempt of spiritual things; 14—17. (4) Represents the superior excellency of the New Testament dispensation, as requiring proportionate holiness and reverence of God and Christ; 18—29.

WHEREFORE, seeing we also are compassed about with ^a so great a cloud of witnesses, ^b let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset ^{us}, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Since, from the preceding instances of the excellency and power of faith to support under and triumph over all difficulties and dangers, it appears that we are surrounded on every side with multitudes of glorified believers, who unite in testifying the duty and advantage of an entire reliance upon the infinite wisdom, power, faithfulness, and goodness, of God in the greatest trials; let us, animated by, and in imitation of, their example, and as under their eye, cast off the works of darkness; inordinate care about this present world; and the load of ceremonial observances; and, by the influence of God's grace, disentangle ourselves from the power of indwelling corruption; and of every sin to which, through our natural depraved constitution, and our peculiar circumstances, company, and situation in life, we are most easily disposed;—and especially that great sin of unbelief, which stands in direct opposition to faith, and is the root of all apostasy; and, thus disencumbered from every load of temptation or corruption, let us, with persevering fortitude, quietness, and patient resignation to the holy and sovereign will of God under our manifold sufferings, hold on our way with speed, steadiness, and vigour, till we finish that course of faith, affliction, and unreserved obedience, which is appointed for us by God, and marked out in his word and the examples of his saints, till we arrive at the mark of his high calling, and obtain the crown of life; 2. Always by faith looking off from sin, self, and the allurements and terrors of this world, or whatever else would retard and dishearten us, and looking forward to Jesus Christ,—that we may derive grace and strength from him to enable us to follow his most perfect pattern; who is not only an unparalleled example, but the efficient Cause, Leader, and Captain, of our faith, to begin, encourage, increase, and perfect, it, and crown it with eternal glory;—even as he himself, in the joyful prospect and hopes of the honour to God, salvation to men, and reward of mediatorial glory to himself, which would issue therefrom, calmly submitted to, and with astonishing meekness and patience endured, the agonizing and lingering pains of his crucifixion, and overlooked all the ignominy and reproach of that scandalous form of death, and all the contempt and derision attending it:—for now, in consequence, and as the just reward, of all this, he, in that very nature which suffered, is exalted as a triumphant conqueror over sin, Satan, the world, death, and hell, to a state of the most perfect, glorious, and everlasting, rest, honour, and authority. 3. To prevent dejecting discouragement, impatience, or weariness, under your manifold tribulations, and apprehensions of danger, seriously consider and contemplate the person and office of Jesus Christ in all their circumstances; and particularly in his invincible patience and undisturbed composure of mind, wherewith he for your sakes bore up under, passed through, and triumphed over, all the opprobrious opposition and blasphemous insults which the most malicious and wicked men threw out to his face against his divine person, office, doctrine, and miracles, all the days of his public ministry. 4. And it would be the more sinful, shameful, and dangerous, for you to draw back from your Christian course; for, though ye have already cheerfully suffered the loss of your liberty and property for your adherence to it, God has hitherto restrained the fury of your wicked persecutors, that ye have never been called to suffer unto death in striving to avoid sin. 5. Are ye unmindful of, or dare ye forget, or be unaffected with, the endearing exhortation by which God, as a most tender and compassionate Father, for your direction, caution, and comfort, under tribulation, warns and beseeches you, on the one hand, to beware of overlooking and contemning his kind chastisements of you on account of your sin, and for your spiritual and eternal good, or of behaving in an unaffected, obstinate, and incorrigible manner under them;—and on the other, of impatiently, ignorantly, perversely, and unbelievably, shrinking, and being disheartened, to the neglect of duty, despairing of relief, or refusing to be comforted. 6. For the Lord does not afflict his children in wrath, demanding satisfaction for their sins,—but either, in lesser or greater severity, to manifest his distinguished kindness to them, in imbittering their sins, purging from them, and preparing for heaven. 7. If therefore ye be not only visited with afflic-chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

⁹ Furthermore, we have had fathers of our flesh who ¹ corrected ^{us}, and we gave ^{them} reverence: ^m shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?

¹² Wherefore ^p lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

¹⁴ Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord:

tions, but enabled in faith, patience, and perseverance, to submit to, and courageously bear up under, them, God, as a kind but infinitely wise Father, is certainly correcting you as his dear children, to promote his own glory and your unspeakable advantage.

8. But if, notwithstanding your remaining sinfulness, ye are indulged in uninterrupted ease and prosperity in the world, and thus exempted from the corrective and instructive chastenings wherewith God exercises the very best of his children;—or if ye are not brought to some cordial submission to this wholesome and necessary discipline of his family, God neglects you, as a spurious issue, who are none of his true children, nor heirs of his heavenly inheritance.

9. Moreover, if, in the days of our youth, we all submitted to the chastisements of those natural parents, from whom we derived our frail, corrupt, and mortal, bodies, and who, under God, provided for their subsistence and safety, have we not infinitely stronger reasons to submit to the sovereign authority and disposal of him who is the immediate Creator, Preserver, and Governor, of our immortal souls, and renews them by his regenerating grace;—and meekly, and even thankfully, to accept of his fatherly chastisements for our iniquities, being ashamed of, and turning from, the causes thereof; that so we may live in holy fellowship with, and devotedness to, him here, and in heavenly glory with him hereafter: 10. For truly our natural parents, during the short time of our minority, were apt to correct us in an arbitrary manner, through humour, passion, pride, or weakness, without duly aiming at our good, or at least mistaking the proper season or measure of the rod; and all the benefit we received from it was confined to this life. But God corrects us, in infinite wisdom and compassion, in order that he may effectually promote our spiritual and eternal benefit by subduing and purging away our sin, and rendering us more and more like to himself in knowledge, righteousness, and true holiness.

11. It is true; indeed, that even fatherly chastenings are in themselves irksome and distressing while we are under them; yet, being sanctified by God, and, in consequence thereof, dutifully endured by us, they render us more wise, humble, watchful, prayerful, more circumspect in our walk, more weaned from this world, and more spiritual, holy, and heavenly minded, than before; and work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. 12. Since therefore these are the gracious ends and advantages of God's correcting you with such manifold sore afflictions, beware of giving way to dejection and despondency under them, or of disheartening one another, but encourage yourselves and each other, in the Lord your God, to hold on in his ways with alacrity, vigour, joy, and triumph.

13. And, that your afflictions may be suitably improved, in a close adherence to Christ, and a conversation becoming the gospel, remove all hindrances and stumbling-blocks out of your own and your brethren's way to eternal life, that ye and they may walk uprightly, and run steadily, in the paths of truth and holiness; lest, through temptation, ignorance, or fear of suffering, or the cunning craftiness of Satan and his agents, any weak Christians among you should be turned aside from Christ, and his paths of righteousness and grace: but rather let it be your earnest care that such may be duly informed, directed, encouraged, strengthened, and confirmed, in the profession, faith, hope, and holiness, of the gospel. 14. Study by all means to pursue and maintain peace with all men, Jews or Gentiles, friends or enemies, and to promote universal holiness in heart and life, in conformity to the image and will of God; since, without a conscientious regard to this, no man, be his pretences or profession what they will, can be fit for, or, in the nature of things, or according to the constitution of the gospel, ever be admitted to, immediate fellowship with Christ and God in him. 15. Therefore let each of you carefully inspect your own principles, temper, and conduct, and watch over one another, lest any of you, through sloth, carnality, or unbelief, should live destitute of an interest in the special favour of God, and of a real work of heart-changing grace;—lest any apostate, or any corrupt principle of apostasy in doctrine or practice, offensive to God and ruinous to men, should spring up among you, to the hurt of the infected, and the grief and trouble of others, and thereby many be defiled with erroneous principles, or divisive or profane practices, marring the beauty, purity, peace, and order, of the church ; 16. Lest any of you, who makes a profession of Christ's name, should abandon himself to whoredom or other uncleanness ; or profanely undervalue the special blessings of the new covenant and gospel state of the church ; as Esau, who, for one morsel of meat to gratify his sensual appetite, sold his birthright, and all the peculiar honours and blessings attending it ;—the consequences of which were very tremendous and irretrievable. 17. For ye cannot but have learned from scripture, that, when he earnestly wished to have recovered it, in order to obtain his father's principal blessing, his most importunate and mournful entreaties were, through the direction of God, absolutely rejected by his father Isaac ;—and so will every empty professor of Christianity at the last day hopelessly cry for mercy, and bewail his condition, when God shall make him feel the terrible effects of his irreversible sentence of condemnation. 18. The transcendent excellency of the blessings of the gospel above those of the ceremonial dispensation renders it also the more sinful and dangerous to come short of or slight them ;—for ye are not called to covenant or hold fellowship with God in the manner of your fathers, at the material mountain of Sinai, and when covered with flaming fire, thick clouds of smoke, and storms of thunder ;—which represented that dispensation as carnal and moveable, terrible in its threatenings, dark in its manifestations, and severe in its curses and punishments ; 19. And where the thunders and the voice, by which the ten commandments were published, were so terrible, that your fathers entreated that God would no more speak to them in so immediate and awful a manner, but communicate his mind and will by the ministry of Moses, as a Mediator between him and them. 20. Conscious to themselves that they were utterly incapable of perfect obedience to God's commandments, or of being justified by their imperfect obedience, they could not even bear up under those dreadful appearances of God, which were displayed in the manner of publishing them :—for, as an awful indication of his inaccessibility to sinners, according to the tenor of this law, and of the vengeance to be executed upon the violators of it,—if either man or beast but touched mount Sinai, during that solemnity of the Divine Presence, he or it was to be stoned to death, or pierced through and slain. 21. Nay, so alarmingly dreadful were the tokens of the Divine Majesty, that Moses, notwithstanding his eminent sanctity, his office of Mediator between God and the people, and all the familiar converse which he had with him, was overwhelmed with the utmost terror and consternation.—22. But, as a prelude of, and as a step of advance towards, the inexpressibly delightful happiness of the heavenly and eternal state of the church, ye are brought, under the gospel dispensation, into delightful fellowship with God in his most excellent state of ordinances, in which is the perfection of beauty and joy of the whole earth,—and in which God, who has all life in himself, and bestows all life on others, forms his numerous people, Jews and Gentiles, into a comely and orderly society, endowed with glorious privileges, and governed and protected by himself ;—a society, the original, nature, privileges, and tendency, of which are heavenly,—and in which ye are admitted to a most noble and exalted communion in love and service with astonishing multitudes of holy angels. 23. And into a spiritual and holy fellowship with the delightful assembly of all true believers in earth or heaven, who are born again by the Spirit of God, and adopted into his family, as heirs of himself and joint heirs with Christ, in whom they were chosen before the foundation of the world, who were written in his book of life, and are now engraved on his heart, as their interceding Advocate :—and to God the Judge of all, as your reconciled Father, who has accepted you in his beloved Son, and will quickly vindicate your character and reward your services :—and, though not yet personally admitted to heaven, ye have spiritual communion in faith, love, joy, worship, and obedience, with all the separated spirits of all the saints of former ages ; which, having departed from their bodies, do now live perfectly free from sin, sorrow, temptation, trouble, or danger, and enjoy perfect holiness and happiness in the vision and enjoyment of, and likeness to, God,—being children of the same Father, united to the same Head Christ, as living members of his mystical body, animated by the same Spirit, and entitled to the same everlasting inheritance : 24. And ye are brought not to Moses, a typical mediator, but to Jesus, the only true and effectual Saviour and Mediator between God and men, with whom the covenant of grace was made, by whom its conditions are fulfilled and heaven, and to ^b God the judge of all,

and to the spirits of just men made perfect,

24 And to Jesus ⁱ the mediator of the new * covenant, and to ^k the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

25 ⁱ See that ye refuse not him that speaketh : for, ^m if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven ;

26 Whose voice ⁿ then shook the earth ;
but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.

27 And this word, ^o Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that [†] are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

28 Wherefore we receiving ^{pa} a kingdom which cannot be moved, [‡] let us have grace, ^q whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear :

29 For ^r our God is a consuming fire.

CHAP. XIII.

(1) Exhorts the Hebrews to Christian duties, brotherly love, hospitality, sympathy, marriage chastity, contentment, regard and its blessings administered :—and ye have communion with God and his Son, angels and people, not by bloody sacrifices of beasts, but by faith in the virtue of Jesus' precious blood, which was shed for many, and is divinely applied to your consciences for justification, sanctification, spiritual comfort, and eternal salvation ;—and which speaks better things than Abel's own blood, which cried for just vengeance on Cain his murderer, and still speaks warnings of wrath to all persons of a persecuting spirit ; nay, better things than the blood of Abel's sacrifice, which only availed for his own acceptance ;—whereas this blood of Jesus pleads for pardon and everlasting life to his betrayers and murderers, and to all sorts of sinners who believe in him.—25. Since therefore the gospel state of the church is so incomparably more excellent than the Jewish, as ye regard the glory of God or your own salvation, take heed, lest temptations, worldly-mindedness, unbelief, or excessive attachment to ancient ceremonies, should make you reject, refuse, or turn away from, that blessed Mediator of the new covenant, who, in the most gracious and endearing manner, speaks to you in his preached gospel, and by the miraculous influences of his Spirit which attend it ;—for, if your fathers, who rebelled against Moses, and refused to receive the laws of God at his mouth, did not escape distinguished punishments, how much more impossible is it that any of us should escape, who, through unbelief, reject, despise, and disobey, him who is the Lord from heaven, and who, being ascended to heaven, thence publishes to us the glad tidings of eternal salvation, in all their spirituality, light, and glory, by his word and Spirit. 26. Whose voice of thunder and awful majesty at the giving of the law, made mount Sinai, and the people around it, to quake and tremble :—but now, in order to introduce the full happiness of the gospel dispensation, he has promised to remove and destroy the whole Jewish constitution, civil and ecclesiastic. 27. And his words, yet once more, plainly intimate that the Jewish constitution, in which so many things were made by the hands of men, should be removed, that the glorious and unalterable privileges, worship, and ordinances, of the gospel, which are introduced in their stead, might abide till the end of the world. 28. Since therefore we by faith actually receive the blessed and fixed state of the gospel church, with all its privileges and blessings, under Christ our Royal Prince and Head, let us, according to the nature, provisions, and encouragements, of this kingdom hold fast our profession ; and, in a careful and conscientious use of the ordinances of Christ, receive and improve those free favours which God has bestowed upon us, to excite and enable us to serve, worship, and glorify, him in an acceptable manner through Jesus Christ ; under a deep sense of our meanness and vileness, and of his holiness, power, and majesty : 29. For he, who is our covenant God—by visible dispensations, as we are professed Christians—and by special grace, as we are true believers,—is still infinitely jealous for his own glory with respect to his worship ; and his righteous indignation burns against those who reject him and the blessings of his kingdom, by unbelief and daring contempt.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—There is need of much care and activity in imitating ancient saints, and especially in imitating Jesus our Forerunner, in preserving faith, patience, and holiness. And great is our encouragement in his success, and from his furnishing, directing, and strengthening, us for our work. What kindness and care the Lord shews in afflicting us only for our great honour and benefit ! And yet we rarely either relish or behave aright under afflictions, especially if they are severe. There is need of watchfulness, mutual excitement, and assistance, in our Christian course ; and that the strong should bear with and help the weak.—And delightful is the appearance, and happy the end, when peace and holiness are properly united in our conduct. But alas, fearful and desperate is the issue of unconcern under the means of grace, or of apostasy from gospel truth.—Delightful is the state of the gospel church, of the new covenant, and of heaven ; and how much superior to that under the law and the ceremonies. Firm is its establishment, and sweetly our exalted Redeemer speaks to us therein. With earnest attention and holy awe ought we then to hear his voice, and perform the duties of his worship. No convenient relation or gospel grace can render him less holy, just, jealous, awful, or majestic. And great fear is due unto him in the meeting of his saints.

LET ^abrotherly love continue.
² Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby ^csome have entertained angels unawares.

³ Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them who suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body.

⁶ So that we may boldly say, The LORD is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

⁷ Remember them who ^{*}have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation:

⁹ Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines: for it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace: not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.

¹⁰ We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat who serve the tabernacle.

¹² Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

¹³ Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

¹⁷ Obey them that have [†]the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account; that they may do it with joy, and not with grief; for that is unprofitable for you.

stedfastly fixed in a dependance on, the free favour of God in Christ, revealed in the gospel, for the remission of sin, peace of conscience, and acceptance with God, unto eternal life, and your heart fortified against wavering about the truth and importance of this doctrine, by an experience of its renewing, quickening, and comforting efficacy, than to expect that blessings can be obtained by ceremonial ordinances relative to sacrifices, meats, and drinks, which never, even under the Old Testament, were of any spiritual and saving advantage to those that were most occupied therein. ¹⁰ We members of the New Testament church have an incomparably better altar and sacrifice in our Lord Jesus Christ, which furnishes an incomparable feast of spiritual and eternal blessings to our faith; which they, who still cleave to, and rely on ceremonial observances, have no authority or claim to partake of, any more than the priests had to eat any part of the more noted sin-offerings. ¹¹ For, according to the appointment of God, the bodies of those sacrificed animals, the blood of which was carried by the high priest into the holy of holies on the great day of national atonement, were wholly burnt without the camp. ¹² In evident fulfilment of which type, as well as to prefigure his leaving the Jewish nation to miserable ruin, Jesus Christ, our great High Priest, that he might effectually make atonement for the sins of his spiritual Israel, and consecrate them as a peculiar people to God by the shedding of his blood, suffered his painful and ignominious crucifixion on mount Calvary, without the gates of Jerusalem. ¹³ Let us therefore, who profess his name and look for salvation through him, go forth, by faith and hope, desire and love, to him, leaving the Jewish temple, altars, and all the legal institutions pertaining to them, and all the concerns, allurements, and enjoyments, of this present world behind us, as things which we have no further expectations from, or concern with; and cheerfully and boldly own and confess a crucified Redeemer, notwithstanding all the shame, contempt, and scorn, we may suffer for his sake: ¹⁴ For, as the city of Jerusalem, which succeeded the camp in the wilderness as the seat of ceremonial worship and political ordinances, will quickly be destroyed by the Romans, so we believers have no durable state of happiness or settled residence in this lower world, but, as strangers and pilgrims on earth, we realize by faith, earnestly desire, look and long for, and, by all the ways and means of God's appointment, seek for, a state of everlasting rest and peace, honour, and safety, harmony, and delight, in the future blessedness of heaven. ¹⁵ In consideration therefore of Christ's having redeemed and consecrated us to God by his own blood, let us, at all times, in all circumstances, and for every thing, especially for the blessings of redemption, offer up, through him, as our only High Priest, Sacrificer, Advocate, and Altar, that sanctifies our gifts, the sacrifices of grateful acknowledgments, praises, and thanksgivings. ¹⁶ And, while your hearts and lips are full of gratitude and praise to God through Christ, be careful to cultivate a merciful, kind, and generous, temper, and to abound in all acts of beneficence, towards your fellow creatures, especially the poor; for this, as well as thankful praise, is, through Christ and his only meritorious oblation, very acceptable to God as your reconciled Father. ¹⁷ And, as ever ye would improve the appointed means of evangelically discharging the above-mentioned duties, not only regard the faith and holiness of your deceased pastors, but religiously regard the doctrines and precepts of those who are, or may hereafter be, your spiritual guides: and, as far as the word of God permits, receive and submit to their instructions, exhortations, admonitions, and reproofs; for, if faithful, they, with all diligence, watch over you in the Lord, that they may inspect your principles, tempers, and behaviour, and guard and caution you against all iniquity, error, and spiritual danger, and apply themselves to promote the edification and eternal salvation of your souls, in the affecting views of giving an account to Christ, in the last judgment, of their faithfulness, diligence, and success; which they wish to do with joy that their labours have issued in your eternal welfare: not with grief that they have issued in your aggravated condemnation and ruin. ¹⁸ Sensible of the awfulness and difficulty of our work, and of our insufficiency

CHAP. XIII. Ver 1. And, as ye have begun, let it be your earnest care and endeavour to maintain an abiding and growing exercise of brotherly love, and an affectionate temper and behaviour, in all offices of friendship one towards another, and towards all your fellow Christians, who are members of the same spiritual family, children of the same heavenly Father, partakers of the same grace, and heirs together of the same glory. ² Extend your brotherly compassion also to strangers, especially those who for righteousness' sake are driven from their homes, or go about voluntarily preaching the gospel: receive them into your hearts and houses, and supply them with every thing needful. This conduct will at once honour God, relieve your distressed brethren, and tend to your own satisfaction and advantage; for by this generous temper, Abraham, Lot, and others, had the honour and benefit of entertaining angels instead of strangers. ³ And, as ye have had compassion of me in my bonds, I earnestly recommend to you, to bear on your hearts, sympathize with, pray for, and, as far as in you lies, contribute to the relief and comfort of, those faithful ministers or professors who are imprisoned, or otherwise persecuted, for righteousness' sake, considering yourselves as members of the same mystical body, and still liable to the like afflictions in your present mortal state. ⁴ Marriage, when duly entered into by proper persons, ought to be reckoned an honourable ordinance of God, for producing a lawful offspring, for connecting families, and for the good of society, and as a proper remedy against all uncleanness: but fearful are the punishments which they who indulge themselves in whoredom and adultery, may expect from God in this world, and especially in the last judgment and eternal state. ⁵ And, to promote your exact performance of the duties which I have mentioned, see that none of you indulge immoderate desires or pursuits after the things of this world, either in excessive or unjust eagerness to obtain them, or in grudging proper expences for the reasonable support of yourselves and families, or in unwillingness to communicate to the necessities of others; and study always to be heartily pleased with, and thankful for, the circumstances, however mean and afflicted, into which God, your infinitely wise and gracious Father, puts you; for he himself, who is almighty, all-sufficient, and unchangeable in faithfulness, has, for your encouragement in troubles and temptations, solemnly promised that he will at no time, and on no account, leave you to yourselves or your enemies; but will be with you, to strengthen, help, uphold, guide, and bring, you to glory. ⁶ So that, resting by faith upon this comprehensive promise, as applicable to ourselves, we may and ought, each for himself, with humble confidence, sweet composure, and holy boldness, to avow that, in all our straits, wants, and troubles, the Almighty and all-gracious JEHOVAH is our Support, Succour, and Defence, and on our side, to take our part, revive our soul, and overrule every thing for our good; and therefore we will not be afraid of the very worst that our most powerful, subtle, and inveterate, enemies on earth can do against us. ⁷ And, to promote your performance of such duties and assured faith in such promises, see that ye pay a due regard to them who have been your faithful ministers and spiritual guides, under Christ their great Lord and Master: and, in imitation of their faith and faithfulness, keep in mind, embrace, and adhere to, those doctrines, commands, and promises, which they, according to the word of God, delivered to you, as the only rule of your faith, worship, and obedience; seriously reflecting on the peaceful and joyous manner in which they finished their course of holiness, and obtained an happy dismission from, and victory over, every trouble and danger by death, and on the glorious scope and object of their ministration and walk. ⁸ Even Jesus Christ, our anointed Saviour, who, in his divine person, offices, and saving virtue, is unchangeably the same in all the periods of the church, past, present, and to come. ⁹ Take heed therefore, lest, by departing from this unchangeable Saviour, as preached and exemplified to you by your former pastors, ye should, like ships in a storm or clouds in the air, be carried away with notions about Jewish ceremonies, different from, foreign to, and inconsistent with, the simplicity of the gospel of Christ; for it is incomparably better to have your souls fully persuaded of, and for it, we ministers of the gospel earnestly request your continual importunate prayers for us: that, whatever our success be, we may be found faithful in the day of Christ; for, notwithstanding our sufferings and the suggestions of our enemies, our consciences bear us witness that we uprightly intend the honour of Christ and the good of souls, and are heartily desirous, and determined, through his strengthening us, to live soberly, righteously, and godly, suitably to our Christian and ministerial character, in all our behaviour towards God or man. 19. And I particularly beg your united prayers for my own direction, support, and protection, under my present trials, and for the blessing of God, upon the services in which I am now engaged; and that, if it be for his honour, he may deliver me from my present confinement, and allow me an opportunity of paying you another visit, to our mutual comfort and edification.—20. And for this, and all other useful purposes, may our reconciled God, Father, and Friend, the Author and Giver of all true peace and prosperity, who, by an act of supreme authority, judicially discharged, and raised from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, as a public person, who had represented, and fully satisfied his law and justice for all the elect, and whom, in all his offices, he constituted the great Shepherd of his ransomed people, to gather, guard, lead, feed, and bring, them safe to eternal glory, in virtue of his bloody sufferings and death, whereby he fulfilled the condition, purchased the blessings, and confirmed the promises, of the new and everlasting covenant of grace.—21. Rectify every disorder of your souls, and of your society; that ye may be thoroughly prepared, disposed, and enabled, to perform every good work, relative to himself, yourselves, or others, in a holy, spiritual, and evangelical manner, from principles of faith and love, according to the rule of his word, in obedience to his command, and for his glory; and work in you, to will and to do every thing as in his sight, conformably to his image, agreeably to his holy nature and will, and acceptably to him, as the effects of his own grace through the merits and mediation of Christ.—22. And now through Jesus Christ; ^fto whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—It is very delightful when professed Christians are remarkable for mutual and fervent charity—for kind hospitality—tender sympathy—seasonable liberality—for untainted chastity—for contentedly living on God as their portion—for imitation of deceased ministers—obedience to, and fervent prayer for, living ministers of Christ—and for steadfast adherence to truth, and readiness to suffer for, and serve their dying Redeemer.—What an all-sufficient Saviour is he to, and what marvellous things hath he done for us, to engage us to love, trust in, and cleave to, him!—Awful is the office, work, and account, of gospel ministers, and infinite is the mercy that a reconciled God of Grace, and a risen Saviour and chief Shepherd, have, by the new covenant, provided proper furniture and assistance, as well as rewards, for both ministers and people who uprightly aim at his honour.

JAMES.

James was the son of Alphaeus, the brother of Jude, and a near kinsman of our Lord; Mat. x. 3; 1 Cor. xv. 7; Jude 1. He wrote this Epistle to his Hebrew brethren of the twelve tribes, who were dispersed in the several provinces of the Roman empire; many of whom had been converted to the Christian faith. The scope thereof is to stir them up to manifest their faith by their good works;—to bear their trials with cheerfulness and patience;—maintain honourable thoughts of God; watch over their turbulent passions;—receive the word of God with meekness, and put it into practice; chap. i.: conduct themselves impartially to the rich and kindly to the poor; ii.: to guard against reviling, censorious, and imperious, language; iii.: and a litigious, proud, worldly, and envious, spirit, and overlooking of God's providence; iv.: and against luxury, injustice, and profane swearing;—and to patience, mutual confession of faults, fervent prayer, and a diligent study to promote one another's spiritual welfare; v.

CHAP. I.

After a general salutation, (1) Directs the Hebrews how to make a due improvement of their troubles, how to apply to God under them, and how to behave in prosperous and adverse circumstances; 2—12. (2) Warns them not to impute to God any temptations to sin, but to look on all evil as proceeding from themselves, and all good from God; 13—18. (3) Informs the necessity of watching against a rash and furious temper, and of receiving the word of God with meekness, and living according to it; 19—25. (4) Shews the difference betwixt hypocritical pretences and real religion; 26, 27.

JAMES, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, ^bto the twelve tribes, who are scattered abroad, greeting.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 2. My fellow descendants from Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and fellow believers in Christ, scattered through the Roman empire or other places of the world, never be discouraged by the various afflictions which ye meet with for the trial and excitement of your grace, and the persecutions which ye endure for the sake of Christ and the gospel; but rather esteem it your honour and joy that ye are called and enabled thus to bear a faithful testimony for him, to his glory, and to your own and others' spiritual advantage; 3. rally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

6 But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed.

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the LORD.

8 A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways.

9 Let the brother of low degree rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the LORD hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man say, when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then, when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

want of spiritual wisdom to direct you to judge of, behave under, and rightly improve, them, let such, under a humbling sense of their own weakness, and of the insufficiency of all creatures to conduct them, by earnest prayer, in the name of Christ, apply to the God of all light and grace,—who is so ready to bestow every needful blessing upon men, and who bountifully distributes his favours to all, especially to humble supplicants, without ever upbraiding them with their ignorance, folly, unworthiness, or misimprovement of former favours,—for the directions of his word, providence, and Spirit,—and they shall, without fail, be granted.

6. But, to obtain this gracious answer, you must present your requests with a firm dependence on Christ, and on the wisdom, power, faithfulness, and goodness, of God, in him, for a performance of his promises: without any staggering at them through unbelief: for he that gives way to distrust and sinful jealousies, whether God can or will perform his gracious promises or not, is altogether unsteady and restless in his principles and practice.

7. And it is quite absurd for any one who has such a diffident and fluctuating temper of spirit, which is so dishonourable to the promises and perfections of God, to expect that his unstable and unbelieving prayers shall ever bring him any important favours from God.

8. A man, whose heart is thus divided between hope and despondency, or between God and the world, is always unsettled in religion, continually hesitating, fickle, and perplexed, in all his thoughts, words, and actions; and so can never expect to speed in his prayers. 9—11. But, as all they who are united to Christ, and born of the Spirit, may warrantably plead for and expect every promised blessing, let such as are poor, oppressed, and persecuted, and whose minds are brought down to their lot, rejoice and glory that amidst their poverty they are advanced to the spiritual dignities and privileges of the new covenant, and are honoured to suffer for the sake of Christ and his gospel; and let them, whose circumstances are easy or affluent, rejoice that God has given them low thoughts of themselves, and all their earthly enjoyments, or calls them to part with them:—as the wealthiest, the most grand and honourable, must quickly die away from whatever they have, and are often like flowers or grass in the midst of their carnal projects, prosperity, and honour. 12. But happy are they who are enabled in a Christian manner to bear losses and tribulations here for the sake of Christ;—for, when they have endured them with faith, patience, humble submission, and holy fortitude, they shall be graciously rewarded with that immortal and incorruptible blessedness and glory which the Lord Jesus, and God in him, has freely promised, and will certainly give, at the last day to all those who, from a principle of faith in Christ, supremely esteem and delight in him, and look and long for his glorious appearance to complete their salvation.

13. Let no man under his afflictions, fret and murmur, or pretend that God thereby tempts him to sin; for God is so infinitely holy in his nature and will, purposes, and works, that it is absolutely impossible for him to be influenced to any thing sinful; or to entice, persuade, influence, or necessitate, any to commit the least moral evil. 14, 15. But when men, under afflictions or otherwise, are drawn into acts of sin, it is entirely owing to the violent and beguiling influence of their own inward lusts and corruptions, which drag them off from the ways of truth and holiness, and, by the deceitful appearances of carnal ease, pleasure, or profit, decoy them into sin. And it is only when these inward corrupt inclinations have gained the approbation and free consent of the will that they produce actual sin: and when actual sin is completed, allowed of, persisted in, and indulged, in impenitence and unbelief, it not only renders liable to, but will certainly issue in, everlasting misery, as its proper wages and fruit. 16. Beware therefore, my dear brethren, lest any of you apostatize from the truth of the gospel, or indulge such abominably erroneous, 17 Every good gift, and every perfect gift, is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

18 Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath:

20 For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

22 But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own-selves.

23 For, if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he, being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Pure religion and undefiled, before blasphemous, and injurious, conceptions of God or his ways, as if he could do any thing to promote or encourage sin. 17. On the contrary, every thing that is naturally, morally, or supernaturally, good, every blessing of creation, providence, and grace, and nothing but what is good, proceeds from this infinite, eternal, and unchangeable, Fountain, Author, and Bestower, of all light, knowledge, holiness, and happiness, grace, or glory.

18. And we believers have the most endearing proof of his being the Fountain and Author of every thing holy and useful;—for not on account of, or by, any wisdom, power, or merit, in us, but merely of his own sovereign grace and good will, by means of the gospel, he has implanted vital principles of grace in our hearts, and thus begotten us to a lively hope of an everlasting inheritance, that we might be rendered his most excellent creatures, consecrated to his service, and a pledge and earnest of his converting multitudes to his Son.

19, 20. Wherefore, my Christian brethren, according to your character and obligations, as new creatures, be always attentive to what he declares in his word concerning himself or his ways, and never be rash in your thoughts or speeches concerning God, and his ways of providence or grace; or even in turning preachers, and giving your views of difficult passages of scripture: and never, no not in disputing for gospel truths, indulge a wrathful and passionate treatment of such as differ from you:—for unguarded heat and intemperate passion, proceeding from pride, selfishness, and impatience of contradiction, are so far from serving God's righteous cause, or recommending to others the method of justification through the imputed righteousness of Christ, or the practice of righteousness which God's law requires, that they render men incapable of speaking aright for him, and prejudice the minds of others against what is really true and good.

21. Wherefore, cast away with abhorrence all these corrupt affections and overflowings of malice, which are exceedingly sinful, and render your souls unfruitful in any thing good; and with all humility, modesty, and submission of your understandings, consciences, hearts, and affections, to the authority of God in his word, cordially embrace it with faith and love; that, being, as it were, vitally united with your souls, it may, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, be instrumental in conforming your hearts and lives more and more to its own holy likeness, and in efficaciously nourishing you up in grace, till you arrive at the complete possession of the heavenly blessedness.

22. And, that it may have this happy effect upon you, see that it influence you to practise its excellent and holy principles in your lives; and never delude yourselves, or cheat yourselves out of your eternal happiness, by giving it a bare hearing, assent, or place in your notions.

23, 24. For, let your pretences be what they will, if you merely hear the truths of God, and do not, by faith and love, reduce them to practice in your whole conversation, ye can only have some notions and transient convictions of your guilt, depravity, danger, and need of Christ and his grace, and will quickly lay aside your concern, and go on in your impenitence, unbelief, and wicked practices, as before.

25. But, if you accurately search into the gospel revelation, in which our spiritual deliverance from the broken law and ancient ceremonies is so clearly manifested and perfectly bestowed, and heedfully persevere in the faith and practice of it, living in the exercise of every grace and discharge of every duty answerable to it, ye shall have great happiness at the end of your Christian course.

26. And remember that, if you make ever so much pretence to, shew of, or talk about, religion, yet, if you indulge yourselves in profane and abusive language, or in railing against, reviling, censuring, or slandering, your neighbours, and flatter yourselves as if zeal for God would justify your proud, passionate, bitter, and injurious, words,—your religion is all a mere farce, and will never do you any real service.

MY brethren, have not ^athe faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, ^bthe Lord of glory, with ^crespect of persons.

2 For, if there come into your ^aassembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment;

3 ^aAnd ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here [†]in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 ^aAre ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5 Hearken, ^fmy beloved brethren; ^ghath not God chosen the poor of this world ^hrich in faith, and heirs of [†]the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But ⁱye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?

7 ^kDo not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the ^lroyal law, according to the scripture, ^mThou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 ⁿBut, if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 ^oFor whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one ^ppoint, he is guilty of all.

11 For [†]he that said, Do not commit adultery; said also, Do not kill. Now, if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 ^qSo speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by ^rthe law of liberty.

13 ^sFor he shall have judgment without mercy that hath shewed no mercy; and mercy ^trejoiceth against judgment.

14 What ^udoth it profit, my brethren, ^vthough a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?

15 If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, 16 ^wAnd one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what ^xdoth it profit?

17 ^yEven so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being [†]alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith [‡]without thy works and ^zI will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 ^aThou believest that there is one God; thou dost well: the devils also believe and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, ^bO vain man, that ^cfaith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father ^djustified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 ^eSeest thou ^ehow faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, ^fAbraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called ^gthe friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that ^hby works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also, was not Rahab the harlot ⁱjustified by works, ^kwhen she had ciples, motives, and ends, and which is according to the law and influence of God, and is exercised as in his sight, with a view to his glory, disposes and engages Christians to be tender, kind, and compassionate, to the needy and distressed, in doing all they can for the relief and comfort of poor fatherless children and destitute widows; and to behave in a holy and circumspect manner, free from the pollutions of this evil and ensnaring world, that they may not bring any shame upon their conscience, and disgrace upon their hopes or character, by the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God takes care of his people, be they scattered how or where they will. Their tribulations for his name's sake may be great, but should be joyfully borne, as they shall be overruled for the trial and improvement of their present grace, and for the enhancement of their eternal glory. All the fulness of this world is but a fading portion when compared with the exalted and immortal blessedness of humble Christians. Great is the need of spiritual wisdom to direct our behaviour under our diversified trials; and infinite the mercy that our heavenly Father is so ready to grant it, if asked. But alas! many, by their unbelief and inconstancy, hinder the success of their own prayers. Great is the folly of charging our sins on God, who is infinitely and unchangeably holy. Regenerating grace, and every thing good comes from God's sovereign kindness, and ought to redound to his praise and honour;—but all evil comes from ourselves. What need then have we to mortify our lusts, and to watch against our pride, passion, and hard thoughts of God!—With great humility, reverence, and faith, ought we to hear, receive, and improve, his word. And with deep concern should we guard against deceiving our souls in matters of eternal consequence. We have to do with a God, who requires truth in the inward parts. It is not high pretences, but a renewed heart and holy life, that can evidence us to be real Christians. And an unruly tongue, disregard of the poor, or attachment to carnal persons and things, may prove us graceless, amidst the most splendid glare of a high profession.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—7. Beware of taking up with such an empty profession of the truths, and of faith in Jesus Christ, our infinitely glorious and highly exalted Lord, the Purchaser and Bestower of all glory upon us, as leaves you under the power of a partial, unjust, and carnal, regard to men, not according to their religious characters, or the merits of their cause, but according to their higher or lower circumstances in life.—A preferring of one richly dressed, in your religious meetings or judicial decisions, and pouring contempt upon another who is meanly dressed, can proceed from nothing but a shameful partiality, and a carnal and biassed manner of judgment.—And nothing can be more unreasonable among Christians, who cannot but remark that God has generally chosen mean persons to enrich them with faith, and all the other graces of his Spirit, and to render them heirs of his heavenly kingdom;—while great and rich men are generally contemned by him, and left to their own hearts' lusts, to be persecutors of his people, and blasphemers of his name and religion. 8—11. If, from a principle of faith in, and love to, Jesus Christ, your Lord and King, ye obey his high and supreme law, treating all your neighbours, particularly your fellow Christians, with as much kindness, equity, and mercy, in their various circumstances, as ye wish in like cases to be exercised towards yourselves, ye act a truly honourable and becoming part;—but, if ye regard persons merely or chiefly on account of their different worldly circumstances, ye stand convicted and condemned by that excellent law of God, which requires the most strict regard to equity:—and remember that, though ye should keep all the other commandments, yet, by a single breach in any particular point, ye break the whole law, as ye trample on that divine authority which connects together, and is the foundation of, the whole law, and counteract that love which is the fulfilment of the whole law, particularly of the second table of it. 12, 13. Let your whole conversation towards God and men, in disposition, thought, word, and deed, be such as becomes them who live under the dispensation of the gospel, and who expect to be judged at the last day according to the tenor of it; for they who, contrary to its grace and obligations, neglect to exercise compassion towards their poor brethren, shall have a severe sentence of condemnation and wrath fixed on themselves;—and they who, from true faith and love, exercise kindness toward them, shall have occasion to rejoice in their own deliverance from condemnation and wrath, and even in the hopes of it;—and God's mercy shall, according to the gospel promises, triumph in their salvation. 14—26. And remember that, if you have only a notional and lifeless faith, which does not effectually influence you to grant relief to your poor destitute brethren, and to the universal practice of righteousness and holiness, it is really naught, and no better than the faith of devils before God. For, however insufficient good works be to justify our persons, or entitle us to eternal life before God, as a righteous Judge,—yet they are absolutely necessary to prove our faith unfeigned, and to manifest us justified before the world, and even in our own consciences;—as is manifest from the case, not only of Abraham the father of the faithful, but of Rahab the Canaanitish harlot;—both of whom manifested their true faith and divine justification by their good works, which proceeded therefrom.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Decent respect is due to persons on account of their civil stations. But to prefer the rich, graceless and gay, as such, especially in matters of religion or equity, is highly unchristian: and, striking against the whole authority of the law-giver, and that universal love required in his law, amounts to a breaking of all his commandments, and leaves little hopes of mercy to the guilty in the great day of account. It is chiefly among the poor that true Christians are found; and God's grace enriches and ennobles them.—Why then should we despise them! Rich persons are too generally blasphemers of God's name and religion, persecutors of his saints, and oppressors of their inferiors. Why then should we partially caress them! It is not fine words of pity and compassion, and empty wishes of relief, but needful supplies, according to our ability, that God demands from us to our poor brethren; and in denying these we basely act the part of inhuman hypocrites. The best notions and professions of faith without good works, thereby produced, are but dead, devilish, and abominable, before God. No good works of ours can indeed justify our persons before God; but they are absolutely necessary to manifest our justification before men.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Take heed, my dear Christian brethren, that none of you affect to be teachers of others without proper qualifications for it; or give way, like your Jewish doctors, to a magisterial and censorious temper in matters of religion; for, if ye do, your sin will be very aggravated, and your condemnation at the last day inexpressibly dreadful. 2. For all, even the best of us, are guilty of manifold transgressions of both tables of God's law, offending him and our fellow creatures; which should make us very humble and modest in our thoughts of ourselves, or censures of others:—but, if any one be enabled by grace to restrain his tongue from idle, opprobrious, false, and other sinful, language, it marks him a true believer, and a person of great attainments in knowledge and experience, integrity and holiness, capable of managing himself, and his whole behaviour, to the benefit of the society he is connected with, religious or civil. 3—6. For, as horses are governed by small bits, and large ships by small rudders, so a man's tongue, when properly managed, under the influence of divine grace, is of great use for regulating his whole behaviour; even as, under the influence of a carnal heart, it extravagantly talks away and condemns others;—and I entreat you carefully to observe how often a little injurious language kindles a flame of contention and confusion all around it. And indeed scarcely any thing can be more mischievous or productive of wickedness than an unruly furious tongue. It vents a great deal of sin; is the outlet of the whole source of wickedness which lies in a man's heart, and produces much iniquity among others; by its exorbitant licentiousness, it spreads guilt and defilement through the whole man; and, as a fire kindled and blown up by the diabolical influence of the father of lies and accuser of the brethren, it raises such wrath and anger in our own and other people's passions, as throws the whole course of the moral world into a pernicious ferment, and continues from one period of life, and even one generation, to another. 7, 8. No savage, venomous, or voracious, beast is so hard to be tamed as a lying, reviling, malignant, tongue, actuated by strong, furious, and vile, passions. In the most ungovernable manner it vents the most devilish and destructive pride, malice, envy, reproach, and falsehood. 9—12. employed in praising God the Father of mercies, and of Christ, and of us in him; or in praying to, or commending him; and at another time basely prostituted to pour forth revilings, or even horrid imprecations, against our fellow creatures, for whom we ought to have a reverence, as they were originally created after the image of God, in knowledge, righteousness, and holiness, and are still formed in some likeness to him in the natural faculties of their soul; and many of them, by his grace, renewed after his image in regeneration.—Nothing can be more contrary to our Christian obligations, profession, and character, or even more unnatural and absurd in itself. 13. If any of you therefore would approve yourselves to God, and shew yourselves to the world, as truly wise and prudent, and endowed with a true knowledge of yourselves, of Christ, and of God, his laws and ways, let them earnestly practise all manner of good works in the whole course of their conversation, with a meek and humble spirit. 14. But never be fond or boast of envious, quarrelsome, and contentious, dispositions and designs, which will torment your souls, and sting and wound others, and are directly contrary to the meek and humble spirit of the gospel. Never dare, either in thought, word, or deed, to varnish over such wickedness, or to pretend to sincerity and prudence in indulging it: 15, 16. For, think as you will, this wisdom springs not from, nay, is detested by, God, and arises from an excessively earthly and sensual inclination to worldly enjoyments, and is excited by the devil, bears his image, delights his heart, and promotes his mischievous designs and interests: for whenever an envious, censorious, and litigious, spirit is indulged, and breaks forth in words, it tends to disturb and destroy the peace and happiness of a man's own soul, and of all about him, and leads to every thing wicked. 17. But that heavenly and divine wisdom which God bestows, leads men to a strict regard to purity of doctrine and manners, in heart, speech, and behaviour; it disposes to peacefulness, mildness, and courtousness, in our treatment of others; it renders our mind open to conviction, easily persuaded to that which is good, and attentive so all considerations, forward to condescension and forbearance, and inclined to acts of kindness and compassion to the poor and afflicted; it renders us impartial and generous in judging and condemning of others;—and sincere, free from any allowed dissimulation. 18. And this righteous, holy, and peaceable, temper and conversation, by the grace of God, issues in our own and our neighbours' happiness in this world, and in our everlasting happiness and peace hereafter.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—An assuming, arrogant, and censorious, temper fearfully presages our future condemnation to hell. And the deeper sense we have of our sinfulness and weakness, the less rash shall we be in condemning others.—It is very honourable and advantageous for Christians to have grace to govern their tongue. But how hard to rule it! and yet, if ungoverned, it kindles and spreads infinite and infernal mischiefs all around. Scarcely can any thing be more inconsistent with the character of a Christian, more dishonourable to God, or more ruinous to men, than an unbridled tongue and an envious malicious heart.—But great is the excellency of true and spiritual wisdom, in its origin, nature, properties and fruits.

censuring and reviling of one another, aggravating and needlessly exposing one another's infirmities,—or raising and propagating false reports to each other's prejudice; for, if ye slander, rashly judge, and condemn, your neighbours or fellow Christians, ye practically condemn the wisdom, equity, and holiness, of God's law, which forbids such conduct, and perhaps allows what you condemn; and, if once ye pretend to censure God's law, ye plainly renounce all obedience to it, and exalt yourselves as judges above it. 12. When the almighty God, who has infinite power and authority to reward the obedient and punish the disobedient, is the alone Lawgiver and Lord of men's consciences, who can enact and execute laws as he pleases, how presumptuous is it for you, foolish, weak, fallible, and sinful, creatures, to take upon you to judge and condemn any for that in which they are accountable only to God? 13, 14. And why are any of you so self-sufficient, and insensible of your dependance on him, as to promise yourselves long life or prosperity, and much trade on earth, without regard to him, when you, and all that you have, are in the most precarious and uncertain condition, entirely dependant on his sovereign will and providence, and may suddenly and unawares be cut off. 15—17. Nothing ought therefore to be either projected or pursued by you, but in express submission to the favour, direction, assistance, and blessing, of God; and your sinful and confident boastings, as if your life and transactions were independent of him, is extremely unchristian and shameful: and it is the more aggravated in your case, as the scripture, as well as your own consciences, certainly testify to you, that a humble and submissive manner of forming and declaring your intentions is alone right and good, acceptable to God, and suited to the relations in which he stands to you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—What dreadful work do the lusts of pride, covetousness, and envy, make in the world! They create contention and strife in societies, religious or civil, or even in a man's own mind; excite wicked desires and attempts; lead to the neglect of prayer, or sinful and carnal requests; and produce an adulterous alienation of the heart from God, by an undue attachment to the world. Very hateful are they to God, contrary to the influences of his Spirit, and inconsistent with our dependance on him, either as men or Christians.—Extensive is the work of a Christian. Humbly should he submit to, and hold familiar fellowship with, God; resolutely guard against and resist the temptations of Satan; purify his heart and conversation, by a believing improvement of Jesus' word, Spirit, and blood; humbly bewail and repent of his sinfulness; guard against all reviling or rash censuring of others, from a regard to God's authority; and, in all his ways, acknowledge and resignedly depend on his sovereign will.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Be alarmed, ye rich unbelieving Jews. Dreadful calamities shall quickly overtake you, except ye repent, and bereave you of whatever you have on earth, yea, of life itself, in the general destruction of your nation; which shall also be followed with inexpressibly more dreadful miseries in hell.—2, 3. Your ill-gotten and ill-employed treasures being cursed of God, instead of profiting you in the day of his wrath, shall, by the loss of them, torment your minds;—shall tempt your enemies to ravage your country, pillage your houses, and murder your persons;—and shall occasion your more terrible torments in hell. 4. The Most High, who ruleth over all creatures, has heard the complaints of your poor labourers, whom ye have fraudulently deprived of their wages;

their rise from indulged lusts; and how the indulgence of corrupt affections renders your very prayers altogether unsuccessful, and wicked in their principles, motives, and ends. 4. And remember that whosoever of you, professed Christians, indulge such eager appetite after the pleasures and enjoyments of this world as alienates your hearts from God, are guilty of an adulterous breach of covenant with him, and of admitting his rival into your heart instead of him: for an excessive fondness for the things of this world, and of conformity to worldly men, stands in direct opposition to the holy nature and will of God, and is utterly inconsistent with that supreme love and affection which ye owe to him. 5. Do ye think the scriptures of the Old Testament unworthy of your regard, which so strongly remonstrate against pride, envy, and covetousness, and represent our inward corruptions as so impetuous in their pursuits after earthly things, as to make us envy every one who has more than ourselves?—Or do ye think that the Spirit of God, who dwelleth in all of us who are true believers, would excite such a worldly disposition in us? 6. No, he, and God by him, increases our humility, self-denial, love, and goodness, and thus disengages us from the gratification of corrupt affections; and, therefore, to encourage our hopes and prayers for all needful assistance, he declares in his word that he sets himself to oppose and debase them who are ambitious, haughty, self-conceited, and self-sufficient, placing their whole confidence and happiness in the things of this life, or in their own wisdom, strength, or deserts: but freely bestows more and more grace, comfort and blessings, upon such as have humble thoughts of themselves and of the emptiness of all earthly enjoyments, and place their whole happiness in himself. 7. In humble dependance, therefore, on his free favour and gracious influence, yield up yourselves obedientially and unreservedly to his direction, disposal, authority, and will, manifested in his word and providence; and be content with such things as ye have. And, if Satan, by subtle devices or furious temptations, attempt to dishearten you in, or draw you off from, the ways of duty, give not place to him, but exercise all your graces in opposition to him, and he will flee from you as a conquered enemy. 8. And, if ye would maintain your ground, prevail against, and get rid of, temptations; be much employed in humble and fiducial approaches to God through Christ, in the way of duty, and he will graciously come near to you, directing, relieving, and comforting, you according to his promise. And, whereas, through the influence of Satan and your own hearts, some of you have rendered yourselves notorious sinners before God, see that by faith ye apply the word, blood, and Spirit, of Christ for your purification, and beg of him to reform you from violence, murder, extortion, bribery, and other like wickedness of practice; and to purge your hearts from pride, envy, covetousness, and other indwelling lusts;—and so thoroughly renew you in heart and life, that your cares and services may no longer be divided between him and the world. 9, 10. Instead of that jollity, mirth, and gaiety, with which ye have shamefully gratified your sensual appetites, apply yourselves to deep penitential sorrow and evangelical religious mourning, on account of your provocations, and for fear of God's judgments,—deeply humbling yourselves before him, whom ye have so often and so highly offended,—and who knows, and principally regards, the secret workings of your hearts;—and he, in his own time and way, will revive your drooping souls with a sense of his pardoning, and the influence of his recovering, grace, and will raise you above all your fears and troubles, and exalt you to honour and comfort in this world, and to immortal glory in the next. 11. And always carefully avoid rash

7 ^h*Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive 'the early and latter rain.

8 ^kBe ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

9 ⁱGrudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: ^mbehold, the Judge standeth before the door.

10 Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, ⁿfor an example of suffering affliction and of patience.

11 Behold, ^owe count them happy who endure. ^pYe have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that ^qthe Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

12 ^rBut, above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but

and will render that, which ye have unjustly withheld from them, a plague, and mean of terrible destruction to yourselves. 5, 6. Ye have luxuriously and sensually rioted on the bounties of God's providence, as if every day had been a festival; and, under pretence of law, have condemned and murdered the righteous Lord Jesus, and many of his faithful servants, who never offered you the least violence or injury. But the time is at hand when God shall fully punish these and your other abominations. 7, 8. As God therefore permits and overrules these unrighteous persecutions, for the trial of your faith and patience, do you, my Christian brethren, labour to bear them without murmuring at his holy hand therein; and, with patience, meekness, fortitude, and calm composure of mind, stedfast faith, and resolution to bear testimony for him and his ways, wait till the Lord Jesus, by executing his vengeance on your nation, deliver you from their cruel persecutions; and, by death and the last judgment, usher in your complete and everlasting happiness. 9. And, since he, the great Judge of the world, is so ready to punish your persecutors, let none of you expose yourselves to a share in their condemnation and punishment, by venting any envious, fretful, and revengeful, complaints or wishes against them for the injuries they do you. 10, 11. And, to encourage you to such a becoming conduct, reflect much on the behaviour of the ancient prophets under their sore trials, with what patience and courage they endured the manifold persecutions which they suffered for adherence to the truth. And learn, especially from the singular afflictions of Job, his marvellous patience under them, and the merciful issue thereof in redoubled honours and happiness, what a God of infinite compassion and kindness ye have to uphold you under, carry you through, and give you the blessed fruits of, all your trials and afflictions. 12. As your unbelieving brethren are so dreadfully addicted to that unprofitable, heaven-daring, and soul-ruinous, sin of profane swearing, I beseech you earnestly to guard against every rash, passionate, or unnecessary, oath, whether by God himself, or by his creatures; and let your whole conversation be so evidently honest and upright, that your plain affirmation or denial may gain you sufficient credit. 13. If any of you be in afflicted circumstances, let him exercise himself much in solemn and fervent prayer, for support under, relief from, and a sanctified improvement of, them. And, if any be surrounded with the blessings of providence and grace, let him express his gratitude to the God of his mercies in cheerful thanksgivings and praises. 14, 15. If any of you appear to have any bodily distemper inflicted on him, as the punishment of some remarkable sin, let him desire the rulers of the church, especially such as are vested with miraculous powers, to meet together and pray over him; and let them, in the name and authority of the Lord Jesus, from regard to his appointment, and in dependance on his influence, anoint him with oil, as a mean of his recovery: and, in answer to their prayer of faith, Jesus Christ shall render the means effectual for his relief; and shall, through the man's own exercise of faith in his blood, pardon the sinful cause of the trouble, as to its temporal or eternal punishment. 16—18. Always shew a readiness to acknowledge whatever offences you have given one to another, or even other sins which lie heavy on your consciences; in order that ye may cheerfully forgive, sympathize with, and affectionately and earnestly pray for, each other, as your distresses of body or mind require. And, to encourage your fervent prayer for one another, observe, from the miraculous drought or rain procured by Elijah's prayer, what a wonderful power and success the prayer of true and lively saints hath, when, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, it is excited, conducted, and animated, by a sacred warmth of heart. 19, 20. And, if any of you have succeeded in your endeavours for the recovery of some apostate or backslider from the truth from his erroneous notions or sinful practices, thank God for it, as an high honour, that thereby you are made instrumental in the salvation of an immortal soul from spiritual and eternal destruction, of leading a neighbour into the way of life, pardon, and peace; and of preventing a multitude of sins, which he, and others tempted by his example and influence, would have committed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Worldly riches are an unavoidable snare to a covetous carnal heart. Often are they abused in luxury and oppression, and hasten their owners into eternal perdition. For the cries of the poor and oppressed infallibly draw down the vengeance of Heaven upon their oppressors. There is great need of patience in this world, where wickedness and distress abound. Nor, as repeated instances manifest, can any thing issue more honourably or happily.—It is base and criminal for any, but especially professed Christians, to swear rashly, ignorantly, unrighteously, or in common conversation.—But very honourable is it to accommodate our religion to our lot; to give ourselves to effectual fervent prayer, for ourselves and others; to be always ready humbly to acknowledge our own faults, and carefully to prevent or reclaim our neighbours from sin.—Lord, if this be practical Christianity, how little of it is to be found on earth!

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

Peter had been originally a fisherman in Galilee, but was among the first called by Jesus Christ, to be one of his attendants and missionaries. About A. D. 65 or 66, he wrote this first epistle to the Jewish converts scattered through Lesser Asia or other parts of the Roman empire, and the second about two years after. The scope of the first is (1) To establish them in the faith of Christ, and to comfort them under their severe persecutions; chap. i. ii. 1—8. (2) To direct and animate them to an honourable, conscientious, and edifying, behaviour in a faithful discharge of all the duties of their civil or family relations; chap. ii. 9—25; iii. 1—7; and to the exercise of brotherly love, personal holiness, and a faithful discharge of their respective duties in the church; chap. iii. 8—22. iv. v. The scope of the second is to represent how gospel privileges and revelations ought to be improved in a growth in holiness of heart and life; chap. i.: to warn them against the seduction of false teachers, and all apostasy from the truth; ii.: and to represent the proper preparation for Christ's appearance to destroy the Jewish nation and to judge the world; iii.

ORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1, 2. I Simon Peter, whom Jesus tituted his inspired messenger, especially to my own countrymen ish fellow Christians, dispersed, by Divine Providence, through

And, ye thought to be the more earnest and courageous in this holy imitation and fear of God, since all you believers certainly know that your redemption from the corrupt and defiling manners and customs, handed down to you by your ancestors, was not

CHAP. II.

(1) Directs them, in general, to an holy conversation, as persons regenerated by God, united to and founded on Christ, as highly privileged by him, and as dwelling among neighbours who waited for their halting; 1—12 (2) Directs subjects how to obey magistrates, and servants their masters; 13—18: patiently suffering in well-doing, in imitation of Christ; 19—25.

purchased by the perishing riches of this present world, which can redeem from slavery and bondage among men, but by the infinitely more valuable obedience and sufferings of the pure and unspotted Son of God in our nature, whom he from all eternity, in the covenant of grace, appointed to be our Mediator and Surety; and has, in the end of the Jewish dispensation and last age of the world, manifested in the flesh, and made to obey and suffer in your stead;—who, through him, as your only Mediator, trust and hope in God as your reconciled God and Father; since, in testimony of his being fully satisfied with what his Son did and suffered in your stead, he has raised him from the dead, exalted him to his own right hand, and made him Head over all things to the church, that ye might be encouraged, through him, thus to trust in God, as reconciled in him, for all the blessings of grace and glory. 22. And, since, through a believing acceptance of gospel truth, under the powerful influence of the Holy Ghost, ye have been enabled to mortify and subdue those corruptions which formerly defiled your souls, and to become holy in heart and life, and have been brought to a sincere and hearty affection to your fellow Christians, see that ye daily more and more cultivate this brotherly kindness in all its genuine and substantial effects, with all the intense fervour of a regenerated heart purified by faith; 23. And as persons who are not merely the natural descendants of Abraham, but have new, vital, and incorruptible principles of grace and holiness implanted in you, by means of the incorruptible, quickening, and unchangeable, word of the living, life-giving, and unchangeable, God. 24, 25. For all fleshly descent, with its fairest fruits,—all natural and acquired endowments,—all external privileges, ornaments, and honours,—are very unsubstantial and transient; but Christ the essential Word, and the word of the Lord preached to you in the gospel, and the new creature produced by means of it, remain always the same in their nature and effects.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—No dispersion can separate believers from the love or care of Christ and his faithful ministers. The election of the Father, the redemption of the Son, and the sanctification of the Holy Ghost, delightfully harmonize in producing faith and holy obedience here, in order to complete salvation hereafter. And according to God's unbounded mercy, and by his infinite power alone, we are endowed with new principles of grace, fitted for, and carried through trials unnumbered to, the heavenly inheritance, to his praise and honour. Marvellously he tries, strengthens, and honours, the graces of his people by means of their troubles. And, amidst them all, boldly may they triumph in the assured views and hopes of their bright glories and complete salvation at the final appearing of Jesus Christ. Wonderful and excellent is the gospel, which exhibits and offers us this great salvation; and with earnest care and ravishing delight prophets and angels pry into the mysteries of it. What a solid foundation have we for our faith in him, whom God from eternity appointed our Saviour,—whom the ancient prophets foretold,—and whom the gospel clearly reveals, and makes over to us? In the most astonishing wisdom and grace he gave his life a ransom for us, rose from the dead, and ascended to glory, that we might be emboldened to believe and trust in God as our reconciled Father in him. Affectionately then ought we to love this once suffering, and now exalted, Redeemer, and all his people for his sake;—and delightfully to triumph in his exaltation and grace. Earnestly ought we to obey our heavenly Father, and imitate him in holiness. With holy fear and reverence should we look for his impartial judgment. And with great watchfulness, sobriety and weanedness from worldly things and sinful customs, ought we to travel to our heavenly rest, carefully cherishing the indwelling principle of spiritual life till it be perfected in life eternal.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Since, by the implantation of new principles of grace, ye have been formed for purity and love, see that, with abhorrence, ye put away from you all malicious, spiteful, and revengeful, heart-burnings, designs, and practices against your fellow Christians; all frauds, deceitful flatteries, insincere compliments, or professions of respect towards God or men; all envious grudging and repining at men's prosperity; and all backbitings and defamations, which proceed from a guileful, malicious, or envious, disposition of heart. 2, 3. And, as persons, who have had a real, though small experimental knowledge and savour of the mercy and grace of the Lord Jesus to your own souls, earnestly desire, hunger, and seek after, the pure uncorrupted word of God, as containing proper nourishment for your immortal souls, that ye may grow in grace, comfort, and holiness, and in all spiritual strength and stature, till ye become perfect in Christ. 4. To whom ye must be daily applying by faith for further edification, support, and establishment; as the only foundation of all your faith, security, hope, and happiness; who has life in himself, and quickens, and for ever animates, all that are united to him; and, who, however contemned by Jewish rulers or other unbelievers, was chosen and appointed of God for this end; and, in the sight of God and all who know him, is infinitely excellent in himself, dear and honourable, and completely able to bear the whole weight of his Father's glory, and the salvation of his church. 5. And being quickened by virtue, of your union to, and influences from him, ye are more and more fitted to be a spiritual habitation for God, and made holy priests unto him, gratefully to offer up yourselves, your prayers, praises, alms-deeds, and other good works, to him, as acceptable and accepted only through the propitiatory sacrifice and intercession of Jesus Christ. 6. Accordingly God calls us, with attention and holy admiration, faith and hope love and joy, to contemplate him as the fitted, prepared, and rightly placed, foundation, which unites and supports the whole church, Jews and Gentiles; and on which, the man who rests the whole weight of his eternal salvation, however sinful he may be, shall never meet with any disappointment, confusion, or ruin. 7, 8. To all those therefore, who, through the declarations, and promises of the gospel, receive, and rest on him alone for salvation, he, in his person, offices, relations, and benefits, will be altogether lovely, honourable, and honoured: and, notwithstanding all the rage and contempt of Jewish rulers and other unbelievers, he is, by the appointment of God, made the foundation chief corner stone, strength, and glory, of his spiritual house the gospel church:—in the mean time, according to God's ancient predictions, he becomes to others an occasion of more aggravated guilt and ruin, who through their obstinate unbelief, in fulfilment of the divine purpose, wilfully plunge themselves into deeper damnation. 9. But ye, who by faith are built upon him as your foundation, are a new-born kindred, which God has, by eternal election, effectual calling, and adoption, set apart for himself. Being anointed with his blood and Spirit, like princes, ye have power with him, victory over sin, Satan, and the world, and dominion over your own spirit, and are heirs of the kingdom of heaven.—Like priests, ye are separated from the rest of the world, and consecrated to God to offer up spiritual sacrifices of holy gratitude.—Ye are an holy society, collected and united toge-

- (1) Directs wives and husbands to their respective duties; 1—7.
- (2) Exhorts all Christians to mutual agreement in principle, affection, and kindness, and to forgiving of injuries; 8—13.
- (3) Encourages to patience, and perseverance under persecutions for righteousness' sake, in consideration of Christ's having suffered in their stead, and ascended to glory; 14—18, 22.
- (4) Represents the destruction and damnation of the inhabitants of the old world, as a warning against disobedience to Christ; and the salvation of Noah, as a figure of our redemption, and emblem of our baptism; 19—21.

LIKEWISE, 'ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that, command and honour, ye patiently suffer injurious and abusive treatment, without having given any just provocation by your faults. But there is no honour to Christ, your religion, or yourselves, in your tame submission to the severe punishment of your neglects, infidelity, and misdemeanors. The criminal cause makes your sufferings a reproach to all concerned. But if, while ye are diligent and faithful in the duties of your station, ye patiently bear sufferings, inflicted for your conscientious regard to Christ and his Father, this evidences a truly excellent and holy temper, which God freely gives, and is highly pleased with. 21. For, when ye became Christians, ye were called patiently and publicly to submit to injuries and reproaches, for the sake of Christ and the gospel, because he himself, in his infinite love to us, willingly underwent the severest sufferings and most infamous revilings for us, not only to expiate our sins and purchase our eternal happiness, but also to leave us a most perfect pattern of patience in suffering; that we, in love and duty, might imitate him in this and other parts of his holy and blameless behaviour. 22, 23. Who, notwithstanding all the false and malicious accusations of his enemies, never was found guilty of the smallest fault, or the least insincerity, deceit, or falsehood, in his words or doctrine;—and who, when he was shamefully reproached, as a blasphemer, an impostor, and one possessed by the devil, and most insolently and barbarously abused by his enemies, never returned the smallest reproach, nor threatened to revenge the injuries done him,—but calmly referred the cause between him and his persecutors to his heavenly Father; and even prayed that, instead of avenging, he would graciously forgive their murderous wickedness through his atoning blood; 24. Who, being altogether sinless in himself, cheerfully, as our Surety, submitted to all his sufferings, as the punishment of our sins imputed to him, and to be borne by him in his death; in order that, through the merits and virtue of his sufferings, we might have our sins pardoned and subdued, and all our spiritual maladies healed; and might live in all holy obedience, and bring forth fruits of righteousness to God, through him. 25. For, in our unconverted state, we were inclined to, and actually running astray from God, and from his fold, ordinances, commandments, and ways of peace, into every sinful and dangerous path, leading to eternal destruction: but now, through the enlightening and renewing operations of the Holy Ghost by the gospel, ye are brought back to Christ, as the great Shepherd and kind Overseer of your precious and immortal souls, that he may care for, feed, nourish, guide, govern, heal, and defend you from all evil, and conduct you safe to his eternal glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The pure doctrines of Christ are most nourishing provision to a regenerated soul. But great mortification of lusts, and earnest exercise of faith and love, are necessary in making use of it. And the more knowledge and experience we have of God's transcendent grace, the more ardently shall we desire it. Whatever Christ be to others, he is infinitely precious, honourable, useful, and establishing, to his own people; and sweet is the light, the life, the honour, the confirmation, the holiness, the usefulness, the acceptableness, they derive from him. Astonishing is his love, his condescension, in cheerfully bearing our sins, enduring our punishment, and in recovering us, when lost and strayed, to himself! With sincere regard to his word as our rule—to his example as our pattern—ought we, by an holy, honest, and virtuous, conversation, to recommend his religion in the world, and to refute the reproaches cast upon it by the wicked. With earnestness should we subdue and mortify every sinful lust. And with great cheerfulness ought we to perform every relative duty to magistrates, masters, or others, and to undergo whatever injuries we may be called to suffer for his sake. But had neighbours, rebellious and unruly subjects, and imperious and unfaithful servants, can never be good Christians.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1, 2. And, while Christian subjects and servants are careful to honour their religion by a conscientious performance of the duties of their station, do you Christian wives behave with the most obliging and affectionate ther under Christ your King; sanctified by his Spirit, governed by his laws, and embarked in the same common cause and interest: and ye are his purchased and special property; that, answerably to your dignities, privileges, and obligations, ye might, in your nature and life, by thought, word, and deed, shew forth the infinite wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth, of God, who has by his grace called and brought you from the darkness of ignorance and error, sin and misery, into his most wonderful light of truth and grace, holiness, and comfort; 10. So that ye, as well as the Gentiles among whom ye live, are, after a remarkable disowning of God, brought into the sweet and abiding relation of a people to him; and, after a fearful exclusion from his mercy, have now found mercy with him, to the justification and adoption of your persons, and the renovation of your nature and life, after his image. 11. In consideration of these distinguishing favours which God has bestowed upon you, my dear Christian brethren, I earnestly entreat and exhort you, as persons born from above, strangers in this world, and travellers to the heavenly country, to renounce, avoid, and mortify, all your inward workings of sensual inclinations, inordinate affections and desires, after earthly things, which arise from the corruption of your nature, and exert themselves by your body;—and, being contrary to the liberty, peace and honour, purity and holiness, of your renewed souls, perpetually do their utmost to defile, disturb, ensnare, and destroy them. 12. And, since ye live among profane and idolatrous Heathens, study that all your words and actions may be decent, honourable, and commendable, every way worthy of your holy profession; that, whereas they take all occasions to reproach you, as a refractory, useless, and mischievous, people, they may be effectually confuted by your universally regular, blameless, holy, benevolent, and lovely deportment; and brought to admire God's grace in you, and to imitate your good conversation, when he, by his mercy, shall visit them with the light and power of the gospel, and make it effectual for their salvation. 13, 14. And, though some of your countrymen inveigh against all obedience to Heathen magistrates, see that ye, from a regard to the command, example, and honour, of Christ, conscientiously submit to, cheerfully obey, and readily pay tribute to, the civil rulers, supreme or subordinate, whom God in his providence has, by the agency of men, set over you for the restraint and punishment of the open contemners or injurers of God or men, and for protecting, encouraging, favouring, and rewarding, such as are orderly, sober, honest, and religious; 15, 16. For it is the command and delight of God, and tends to his honour, that, by a holy, regular and commendable, behaviour, ye should refute the unreasonable and wicked calumnies which men of weak and prejudiced minds, strangers to God and to your true character, are apt to raise against you and your religion, as if it made you bad subjects;—always conducting yourselves as persons delivered from the tyranny of sin and Satan, from the ceremonial law, and from the moral law as a broken covenant of works, and from all human impositions on your conscience in matters of religion;—but never abusing this freedom, as an encouragement to or cover of sedition, or any other malignant wickedness, but as an excitement to the most faithful and diligent service of God in holiness and righteousness. 17. Under the influence of a truly religious, filial, and reverential, fear of God, and answerably to the character of true worshippers of him, always study to pay a suitable respect to all men, be of what rank they will: cultivate the most tender and affectionate love, and be ready to perform every kind office, to your fellow believers, Jews or Gentiles; and, as loyal subjects, pay all civil homage and respect to kings and other magistrates, as the deputies and vicegerents of God. 18—20. Such of you as are household servants, whether slaves or hired, always study an humble submission, becoming reverence, and ready and faithful obedience, in all things lawful, to your masters;—not only to such as are generous, kind, meek, and merciful, in their temper and behaviour,—but also to them who are austere and morose, especially if it be only because ye are become Christians:—for this is acceptable to God, and praise-worthy, if, for the sake of your religion, and from a conscientious regard to his

if any obey not the word, ^b they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives ;

2 While they behold ^c your chaste conversation, coupled with fear.

3 ^dWhose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel :

4 But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

5 ^eFor after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands :

6 ^fEven as Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him lord : ^gwhose ^{*}daughters ye are as long as ye do well, ^hand are not afraid with any amazement.

7 ^kLikewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life ; ⁱthat your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, ^m*be ye* all of one mind, having compassion one of another : ⁿlove as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous :

9 ⁿNot rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing ; but, contrariwise, blessing ; knowing that ^oye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For ^phe that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile :

11 Let him ^qeschew evil, and do good ; let him seek peace, and ensue it.

submission to your husbands in all things lawful ; that, if any be ignorant, regardless, or contempters of the word and ordinances, of God, those ordinary means of conversion, they may, by your meek, humble, sweet, and engaging, temper and carriage, and your pure, sober, chaste, modest, and reverential, deportment, influenced by a religious reverence of God, and regard to his authority, be allured and gained over to a good esteem of Christ and his ways : 3, 4. And labour to recommend yourselves and your religion to your husbands, not by the external ornaments of dress, but by knowledge, virtue, truth, grace, and holiness of heart, manifested by good works in your life, which are far more beautiful, excellent, advantageous, and lasting ; particularly by a modest, humble, gentle, calm, tractable, and peaceable, temper of spirit, free from pride and turbulent passion, which, however overlooked by vain minds, is inexpressibly valuable in God's account. 5, 6. For in this endearing and submissive manner the ancient holy women, who trusted in God for his blessings of time and eternity, endeavoured to ingratiate themselves with their husbands ; particularly Sarah, who, in the very name she gave to her husband Abraham, marked her high respect for him,—whose daughters, not only in a natural, but, in a moral and spiritual, sense, ye are while ye behave rightly towards your husbands and others, without being deterred from your religion through fear of their displeasure, and without any unbelieving confusion or doubt relative to God's fulfilment of his promises. 7. And do you husbands, on all occasions, live with your wives in a faithful, friendly, and familiar, manner, treating them with that decency, kindness, and cheerfulness, which prudence and knowledge of the gospel require ;—delighting in their persons, consulting their comfort and happiness, supporting their credit and authority in the family, providing honourably for them, putting due confidence in them, and sympathizing with, and helping them under, their manifold infirmities, that, if Christians, they may be honoured and encouraged, as heirs of eternal happiness, equally with yourselves ; and, if not, may be allured to the Christian religion ; and every proper method taken to promote your joint worshipping of God, by yourselves and with the family, in a manner comfortable to you and acceptable to God. 8, 9. In fine, let all of you, who profess to believe in Christ, labour to cultivate a mutual agreement in the important doctrines of the gospel, and answerable thereto ; and an harmonious temper, feelingly sympathizing with one another in all afflictions.—As children of the same heavenly Father, maintain and exercise an affectionate brotherly love, in thought, word, and deed, towards each other. Manifest the most tender sympathy towards such as are under weakness or afflictions, temporal or spiritual. And let your whole carriage be affable, friendly, and engaging, to every one. Never return injuries or reproaches to such as have injured or reproached you, but earnestly pray for blessings to them, and watch for opportunities to do them real favours,—knowing that ye are called by the authority and example of Christ to this amiable conduct, as a mean of his gracious bestowal of temporal, spiritual, and eternal, blessings upon you, as his children and heirs of his promises. 10, 11. For nothing can be more plain, from the oracles of God, than they who wish for peace, comfort, and prosperity, in this world, ought to guard against all profane, filthy, opprobrious, false, or deceitful, language ; and to abhor, and carefully avoid, every thing sinful in itself and prejudicial to others ; and practise every thing good and beneficial ; labouring, to the utmost of their 12 For the eyes of the LORD are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers : but the face of the LORD is [†]against them that do evil.

13 And who is he that will harm you ; if ye be followers of that which is good ?

14 But, and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye : and ^hbe not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled ;

15 But ⁱsanctify the LORD God in your hearts : and be ready always ^jto give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and ^kfear.

16 ^lHaving a good conscience ; that, whereas they speak evil of you as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 ^mFor it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath ⁿonce suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, ^obeing put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit :

19 By which also he went and ^ppreached unto the spirits in ^qprison ;

20 ^rWhich sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, ^swherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21 The like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) ^tby the resurrection of Jesus Christ ;

power, and as far as they can with a good conscience, to live peaceably with all men, and studying to promote peace among neighbours, friends, or enemies. 12, 13. For the great Lord of all takes special notice of, dearly loves, and kindly watches over and cares for, such as, being clothed with Jesus' imputed righteousness, are upright, holy, and righteous, in their hearts and lives ; and he is graciously attentive to, and ready to answer, all their prayers, which are offered up to him in humility, faith, and fervency ;—but in a terrible manner he manifests his just indignation against such as indulge themselves in wickedness. And, if he be your Friend and Protector, what man or devil can do you any real hurt, while, depending on his grace, and devoted to his service, ye imitate him and his saints in goodness and holiness ? Nay, what man would be so malicious or cruel as to seek the hurt of an inoffensive and beneficent neighbour ? 14-16. But if God should permit any to reproach and persecute you for adherence to Christ and his gospel, his love and favour will render you happy under such treatment : never therefore be terrified, discouraged, or perplexed, as if their threatenings or abuse would issue in your disgrace or ruin ;—but always preserve high thoughts, and a reverential fear, of God in your hearts, and entire trust in his infinite wisdom, power, mercy, and faithfulness, for your security, and for ordering every event to your everlasting honour and joy. And, in a dependance on his direction and assistance, be always ready, by word or deed, in courts of judicature, and every where else, to defend, and account for, the grounds of your hopes of salvation, according to the gospel, for which ye willingly suffer. And let this be done with a meek and modest air, temper, and language, and with a holy reverence of God, and fear of offending him by unfaithfulness ; and even with a cautious fear of offending those to whom ye speak by any thing disrespectful ;—in every thing conscientiously studying, that if your enemies will reproach you as injurious to society or public welfare, your blameless, humble, and benevolent, practice, springing from faith in Christ, may effectually confute them, and force them with shame to retract their slanders. 17. For, if it please God that you should suffer for your adherence to his truths and ways, this is far more honourable, advantageous, and comfortable, than if you were to suffer for your own crimes and follies. 18. For in patiently and boldly suffering for righteousness' sake ye are conformed unto your great Lord and Saviour, who, though infinitely holy and righteous in his divine nature, and perfectly pure in his manhood, did, once for all, offer up himself in his sufferings as an atoning sacrifice, in the room of us unrighteous and ungodly sinners, that he might reconcile us to God, and bring us to spiritual fellowship with him here and immediate enjoyment of him hereafter ;—he having been crucified in his manhood, but quickly after raised again to an immortal life of blessedness and glory by the influence of his divine nature and of his Holy Spirit ; 19, 20. By whom, through the ministry of Noah, in manifold admonitions and strivings, he preached the righteousness of faith, and the necessity of repentance and reformation, to those ungodly sinners who lived on the earth before the flood, but are now shut up in the prison of hell, for the punishment of their obstinate rebellion against God, and contemptuous abuse of his long continued mercies and patience. 21, 22. And, as then Noah and his family were saved out of, and even by means of, water, so baptism, not as a mere washing of our body with water, but as it represents and seals the application of Christ's blood and

CHAP. IV.

(1) Directs to improve Christ's sufferings, and those of Christians, past sinfulness, and an approaching judgment, as excitements to holiness in heart and life; 1—6. (2) To improve the approaching dissolution of the Jewish state, as an excitement to sobriety, watchfulness, prayer, mutual love, hospitality, and a faithful discharge of religious trusts; 7—11. (3) Cautions Christians against exposing themselves to punishments for their own faults; but encourages them to rejoice and glory in reproaches and sufferings for Christ;—and, in the view of the terrible ruin of the Jewish nation, to commit their preservation to God; 12—19.

FORASMUCH then ^aas Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, ^barm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for ^che that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

2 ^dThat he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, ^ebut to the will of God.

3 ^fFor the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 ^gWherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:

5 ^hWho shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

6 ⁱFor this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, ^kthat they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.

Spirit to our conscience, purifying it from dead works, and making us to act answerably to our solemn obligation to be the Lord's (therein contracted, is now a noted representation and mean of our salvation, by the death and resurrection of Christ our only Saviour; who, as a pledge, earnest, evidence, and security, of it, and as our Forerunner, to open our way and prepare mansions for us, is now ascended into heaven, enthroned at the right hand of God, and invested with all power over angels, magistrates, and every other creature.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Modesty, meekness, and humility, from a principle of faith in God, are the most engaging ornaments of women, married or unmarried. And an honourable, humane, and tender, treatment of a wife is the most substantial evidence of an husband's affection. Never ought a family to exist without much daily fervent prayer, both secret and private. And it is an honour to the Christian religion, and a comfort and happiness to professors, when harmony in sentiments, unanimity in affection, readiness to render good for evil, useful converse, a steadfast cleaving to every good principle and practice, and readiness to account or suffer with meekness for their religion, constantly and every where prevail.—To live down calumny by a holy, kind, and circumspect, practice, is the best confutation of it. And the more we live in the fear of God, the less we shall be influenced by the fears or reproaches of men.—Why should we ever repine at suffering for Christ, that God-man, who suffered for us, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God. Deep was his debasement, and high his glory that followed. And rich, full, and extensive, is that salvation from sin and wrath which he purchased and effects. How important an ordinance is baptism! Alas, unhappy is the thought that many rest on it, as if it were a Saviour, while others use it as a mere ceremony or fancied charm!

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1, 2. Now since Jesus Christ has thus patiently and extremely suffered in his manhood for us unjust sinners, to bring us to God, let his noble and endearing example arm you against all impatience and fainting under what ye suffer for his sake;—for if, in the virtue of his death in our stead, we have crucified our inward corruptions, and have cheerfully and patiently endured outward sufferings for his sake, and in conformity to him, we shall be disposed to renounce all our former sinful principles and practices, and, with grief and hatred, to turn from them to God with full purpose of heart,—that we may not spend the remaining part of our time in the exercise of carnal and sinful lusts, after the example of evil men, but in holy dispositions and practices, which God commands and delights in, as tending to his glory: 3—5. For we have already spent too much of our time, like Heathens, in diversified forms of uncleanness, drunkenness, gluttony, and the most shameful and detestable idolatries.—On account of your unexpected withdrawal from which dissolute lewdness, luxury, and intemperance, ye and your religion are vilified by your wicked neighbours, as if it had made you quite unsociable, stiff, precise, and humoursome;—but quickly must they answer for all these reproaches to the Lord Jesus himself, upon whom they ultimately fall, and who is authorised to, and will, ere long, judge all that have ever lived on the earth, to the great joy of his saints and terror of his enemies. 6. For to this end was the gospel preached to those who are now dead in Christ, as well as to them who now live on the earth;—that, through divine influences attending it, their inward corruptions being thoroughly mortified and subdued, and they, being condemned and censured by carnal men, might in their souls, quickened and animated by the Holy Ghost, live after a spiritual and joyful manner, according to the command and pattern of God, and in fellowship with him, and to his glory; and be at last raised to an eternal and full enjoyment of him.

7. But consider, for your encouragement and caution under your present trials, that your Jewish nation must quickly be altogether destroyed, and your death, and even the dissolution of this lower world, take place;—be therefore always wise, sober, and temperate, —constantly watching against temptations and the workings of indwelling corruption, and for opportunities of, and spiritual assistances in, prayer, for whatever blessings, deliverances, graces, or comforts, you need.

8. And, influenced by the transcendent love of God in Christ to you, earnestly cultivate a warm, cordial, and brotherly, affection one towards another in these perilous times; for, as he, in his infinite kindness and mercy, has freely forgiven you all your innumerable transgressions, so your fervent love to one another, for his sake, after his example, and in obedience to his command, will make you readily forgive and conceal the numerous failings of each other.

9. And be always ready with cheerfulness to entertain and lodge religious strangers, especially such as go about preaching the gospel, or are, by persecutors, deprived of their property and driven from their homes. 10, 11. Let all such as have gifts and offices in the church carefully, faithfully, and prudently, employ those graciously bestowed gifts, and execute those offices, for the edification of others,—as stewards accountable to God for their trusts.—If some be called to preach the gospel, let them, in a becoming, serious, solemn, reverential, fervent, faithful, spiritual, and holy, manner, declare the mind of God, and nothing else, according to his word. If others be called to collect, take care of, and distribute, the church's stock, for the relief of the poor, the maintenance of ministers, and defraying the necessary expense of divine ordinances, let them attend to their work with all fidelity, prudence, tenderness, and diligence, as they have ability and opportunity,—that all the spiritual and temporal affairs of the church may be so conducted as to promote the glory, praise, and adoration, of God, through the merit and mediation of Christ, our ever exalted, praised, and adored, Redeemer.

12. My dear brethren, fellow sufferers for Christ's cause, while you reflect on the imperfection of your present state, and the depravity of mankind, which fills them with enmity against every thing good, and on the warnings of our blessed Saviour, ye ought never to be discouraged nor surprised at the severest troubles and persecutions wherewith God exercises you;—not to destroy, but to refine you, try and purify your graces, and purge away your sinful corruptions,—as if they were unexpected, uncommon, and foreign to the methods of his love to his children; 13. But rather think of, and stand prepared to meet, them with holy joy, as therein ye have Christ's sympathy and comforts promised and secured to you, and are, in suffering for him, conformed to him; that, when he appears in all his glory at the last day, ye also may rejoice and triumph in and together with him.

14. If, with patience, courage, and joy, ye endure reproaches and abuse for his and the gospel's sake, this manifests your union to and fellowship with him; and will, through his merit and gracious influence, issue in your unspeakable advantage;—for the glorious Spirit of God, who bestows all grace and glory on men, is with you, to support, deliver, and reward you.—By your persecutors, he and our Redeemer are blasphemously reproached; but by your faith and patience, and courageous confession of the truth, they are honoured and glorified. 15. 16 ^dYet if any man suffer as a Christian; let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.

17 ^eFor the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and, if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?

18 ^eAnd, if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore, let them that ^hsuffer according to the will of God ⁱcommit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

CHAP. V.

(1) Exhorts and encourages church rulers to a cheerful, disinterested, humble, and faithful discharge of their office, in hopes of a gracious reward; 1—4. (2) Directs younger Christians to submit to their elders, and to one another, to yield with humility and patience, to the hand of God, and to cast all their care upon him; 5—7. (3) Exhorts all Christians to be sober, watchful, and steadfast in the faith, against all the temptations of the devil; 8, 9. (4) Records the apostle's prayer for their growth and establishment, and his salutations and benediction; 10—14.

THE ^eelders who are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a ^bwitness of the sufferings of Christ, and also ^ca partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 ^dFeed the Flock of God ^{*}which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind:

duct of your own, as murder, dishonesty, sedition, injuring of neighbours, neglect of your own affairs, or intermeddling with those of other men. 16. But, if any of you be enabled, with faith, patience, and courage, to suffer indignities, reproaches, and cruelties, merely for your profession of Christ and his gospel, look not on it as a disgrace, but as a real honour conferred upon you, on account of which ye ought to praise and glorify God. 17. For the time is at hand, when not only Jerusalem and your Jewish nation shall be fearfully destroyed by the just judgments of God, but even the New Testament church shall be visited with terrible persecutions and troubles. Now, if his severe judgments be first inflicted on his ancient and long peculiar people, and on us real believers, in whom he dwells by his Holy Spirit, what extremity of wrath must fall upon obstinate unbelievers, who disregard and reject his gospel? 18. And, if in the general ruin of our nation or other public calamities, they, who are clothed with the righteousness of Christ, and are renewed and sanctified by his Spirit unto all holy obedience, have but a narrow, though sure, escape, by his providence and grace, what dreadful, unavoidable, insupportable, inexpressible, and everlasting, misery must come upon those impenitent unbelievers who obstinately persist in their sins! 19. Reflecting upon these awful events, which carry so much encouragement to you, and terror to your enemies, do you, in a Christian manner, by the assistance of God's Spirit, endure persecutions and afflictions, as appointed for you by him, believingly commit your lives, your souls, and all your concerns, in time or eternity, to him,—in a course of holy walking with him, and of doing good to all around you, friends or foes;—trusting in him that he, as your almighty Creator and Preserver, will, through Christ, perform his promise, in protecting, supporting, comforting, and delivering, you in the worst of times.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Nothing so effectually mortifies sin as believing views of Christ's sufferings for it. And the will of God, not our vile affections, must be our guide in all our conduct. An affecting remembrance of former sinfulness powerfully dissuades from a return to it. And not men's thoughts, but Christ's judgment, ought to determine our practice. If we live according to God in the spirit, no matter what sufferings from carnal men we undergo for his sake.—Our views of approaching calamities, and especially of the last judgment, should produce in us great sobriety; and watching unto prayer, fervent charity, cheerful hospitality, and a ready and proper use of our gifts. Faithfully should believers, under the impression of it, regard the glory of God; endure with patience, boldness, and joy, in suffering for Christ; and be careful to give their enemies no proper ground of offence, seriously committing themselves to God in well-doing. Abundant is the comfort that all sufferings for Christ shall be richly rewarded in an eternal enjoyment of him; and that his blessed Spirit abides on, and shares with, us in all such afflictions. But if saints thus suffer on earth, how miserable must sinners be in time or eternity! If they who strive to enter in at the strait gate be saved with difficulty, how impossible is it for careless sinners to escape the damnation of hell!

CHAP. V. Ver. 1—4. And, as for you, who are the spiritual rulers and pastors of the Christian church, I,—who am one myself, and who, after being an eye-witness of the sufferings of Christ, have boldly preached them as the ground of men's salvation, at the hazard of my life, in the assured hopes of being, in a little time, a partaker with him in that glory which he purchased thereby, and which he has taken possession of, as my Head, Representative, and Forerunner, and will openly manifest and bestow, beseech you diligently and faithfully to teach and govern those souls which he purchased by his blood, and has committed to your care, personally inspecting their principles, temper, and conduct, and looking after their spiritual concerns with wisdom and meekness, not from external motives of fear, shame, or regard to worldly advantages, as your governing end, but with freedom and delight, purely for the honour of Christ and welfare of souls; and not with ambitious views of honour to yourselves, or in an imperious, haughty, and domineering manner, as if ye had the rule over the faith and consciences of God's peculiar people, but as examples of humility, self-denial, holiness, and righteousness, to them; that, when Jesus, who purchased them by his blood, and saves them by his power and grace, and under whom ye act, and to whom ye are accountable, appears to judge the world at the last day, ye may receive from him a great, but gracious, reward of everlasting glory and honour. 5. And ye who are younger, or in private stations, or at least inferior in some respect, study to be always attentive and submissive to the admonitions, cautions, and reproofs, of your superiors in age, wisdom, experience, or station; particularly your church rulers, treating their persons, characters, and instructions, with due esteem and reverence. And let all of you beware of self-conceit or obstinacy; behaving with due respect one to another, and yielding to each other, as far as your rank and circumstances can possibly permit. And let an unfeigned humility appear in your whole conduct, as its great ornament, and a cover to its defects. 6. And, considering what a great, sovereign, almighty, and just, God ye have to do with, and what terrible judgments he is about to execute, in the course of his providence, on your nation and the Christian church, as an emblem of still greater in the world to come, yield up yourselves to his almighty, sovereign, and holy, will, under all the sufferings and troubles you meet with for your trial; that, when he has gained the wise and gracious ends of his chastenings, he may lift you up above all tribulations, and advance you to all those honours or delights which are for your spiritual or eternal advantage. 7. Yea, whatever be your distressing burdens, anxieties, fears, and cares, with respect to yourselves, families, friends, or the church of Christ, commit them all by faith and prayer to him, relying on his power and goodness for seasonable relief: for he has all your concerns at heart; and will pity, succour, strengthen, and comfort you; and, in his own time and way, give you an happy deliverance from, and issue of, all your troubles, in your everlasting salvation. 8. But, amidst all the difficulties and dangers of your present warfare, labour always to maintain a wakeful, sober, and humble temper of mind, in modest thoughts of yourselves, and in moderating your affection towards earthly enjoyments; and watch unto prayer, and unto the performance of all the duties of your station, and against temptations to sin and apostasy; for your busy and powerful adversary the devil, like a fierce, savage, and hungry, lion, is indefatigably restless in his contrivances and endeavours, by persecutions, frauds, and evil suggestions, to wound, tear, and ruin, immortal souls; 9. Whom ye must courageously resist, steadfastly maintaining the pure doctrines of faith, and your holy profession of the same, in a firm dependance on the power and grace of Christ to vanquish him. And, to prevent your being disheartened in the combat, remember that ye are only meeting with such a conformity to Christ in sufferings as your Christian brethren every where meet with in this evil world. 10. May therefore that God, who is rich in mercy, and who of his own mere favour is the Fountain and giver of all grace, and who, by his word and Spirit, has effectually called us to the promised, prepared, and infallibly secured, inheritance of eternal glory, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, after, and by means of, these your transient afflictions, render you perfect in knowledge and practice; establish you immovably in the faith, hope, profession, and holiness, of the gospel; strengthen you with all might unto all patience, obedience, and suffering; and settle your souls with unshaken peace, safety, and comfort, on that foundation laid in Zion. 12. By Silas, whom I can recommend as a faithful brother, and whom I expect you will find such, I have sent you this short letter, to exhort and encourage you to abide by the testimony which I have herein given you for the confirmation of but free, is the reward that awaits them if they be found faithful. With great humility, submission to one another, self-humiliation under God's mighty hand, and casting our cares upon him, ought every one of us professed Christians to adorn our profession and prepare for the eternal state. And constant should be our sobriety, watchfulness against and vigorous resistance of Satan, and resignation to our share of sufferings for Christ. 'It is a mercy that the saints' sufferings are so short and light, their assistance under them so great, and their reward after them, from the God of all grace, so inestimable and everlasting. Their standing for a little time in the faith and love, profession and practice, of the gospel will quickly issue in their eternal triumphs in his praise.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. 1. Ver. 1, 2. Simon Peter, divinely called to be a ministering servant, and honoured to be an inspired messenger, of Jesus Christ, in founding and forming the gospel church, to those Jews scattered in and about Lesser Asia, who, in the sovereignly gracious dispensations of God, have been made partakers of a saving faith of the same excellent nature and kind, as to its causes, acts, objects, fruits, and benefits, which we apostles and other believers have received; not through any worthiness or ability of our own, but through the merit of that everlasting righteousness which was wrought in by the obedience and sufferings of Jesus Christ our divine Saviour—wishes all the blessings of grace and peace may abound, in their richest variety and fulness, to all and each of you, through your believing, experimental, and increasing, acquaintance with our common Lord and Redeemer, and with God as your reconciled Father in him; 3. According as, in his almighty power and free favour, he has already bestowed upon us all those blessings which are requisite for maintaining and improving our spiritual life, till it be perfected in eternal life; and for every exercise of grace, in acts of piety towards God, till it be completed in glory; through the efficacious knowledge and faithful acknowledgment of him, and of the Father in him, who has by the gospel, and by the glorious operation of his mighty power, effectually called us to an inheritance of eternal glory, and to a courageous profession of our faith and hope of it: 4. By which divine persons, and the glorious operations of their power through the gospel, are sovereignly, freely, and irrevocably, given to us the most inconceivably great, rich, valuable, honourable, and everlasting, promises of the new covenant, fully furnished with all the transcendent blessings of grace and glory, that, by the application and fulfilment of these promises in all their variety, richness, and extent, ye might have fellowship with God, and have implanted in you a new nature, derived from him, conformed to him, and tending to, and delighting in him, ye having, as an introduction to, and as a part and evidence of, it, renounced, and with vigour and abhorrence fled from, the corrupt principles and practices which spread and prevail among irreligious men, through the power of their depraved inclinations and inordinate affections to carnal things. 5—7. In consideration therefore of what ye have already received, ye ought, with the utmost care and diligence, to increase more and more in every grace and duty in their due order; particularly in active faith, Christian courage in your holy profession and practice, spiritual knowledge, wisdom, and prudence; the due regulation and government of your passions and appetites, and wean-edness of heart from the alluring objects of sense; patience under tribulations, in a calm resignation to the will of your heavenly Father; holy reverence of God, and conscientious attention to every ordinance of his worship, from a principle of love to him, in obedience to his command, and for his glory; an affectionate love, tenderness, sympathy, and compassion, with all proper expressions thereof towards your fellow Christians, as brethren in Christ; and an universal benevolence to all mankind, as partakers of the same human nature with yourselves, endeavouring to promote their temporal and spiritual welfare, whether they be friends or enemies: 8. For, if these excellent graces be found in you, and be lively and enlarged in their exercise, they will render you thriving, active, and useful, Christians; vigorous, diligent, and abounding, in every good word and work relating to God, yourselves, and others, answerably to your fiducial knowledge and acknowledgment of Christ as our only Lord and Saviour. 9. Whereas those professors, who are destitute of the fore-mentioned graces, or have no sensible experience of the exercise of them, are, amidst all their pretences to knowledge, in spiritual darkness; their eyes being shut against the light, or having only a glimmering, confused, and short, sight, which cannot penetrate into the beauty and glory of Christ, his truths and ways; and they have practically renounced their baptismal blessings and obligations, and remain unconcerned about the pardon and destruction of their natural corruptions and early wickedness. 10. Since the difference between real and nominal Christians is so great, and since so many take up with a profession, without the experience of true grace, do you, my beloved brethren, exert yourselves to the utmost in the use of all the appointed means of grace, to make sure your effectual calling to Christ, and renovation of your nature, as the infallible proof of your having been chosen in him before the foundation of the world to everlasting life; for, if it be manifested by the habitual exercise of the above-mentioned graces, whatever trials, failings, and infirmities, may attend you, ye shall never finally apostatize from Christ, or fall into everlasting ruin; 11. But, instead thereof, shall have an abundant measure of hope and joy in your way to the full enjoyment of God; and at last have, in death, a triumphant entrance into all the sublime dignity, affluence, and delights, of that eternal kingdom of glory which Christ has purchased and taken possession of for his people, and in which he will for ever dwell with them. 12—15. As these things are of so much importance, and yet so much opposed, I cannot but remind you of them, and urge them upon your consciences, that, as ye have already known and firmly be-

13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in ^athis tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;

14 ^bKnowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.

15 Moreover, ^cI will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

16 ^dFor we have not followed cunningly-devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were ^eeye-witnesses of his majesty.

17 For he received from ^fGod the Father ^ghonour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice, which came from heaven, ^hwe heard when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 ⁱWe have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, ^kas unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that ^lno prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For ^mthe prophecy came not ⁿin old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. II.

(1) Warns against false teachers, who are described by their pernicious principles and influence; 1—3. (2) From the examples of the fallen angels, the old world, Sodom, and Gomorrha, shews the certainty of their punishment; from which the Lord will deliver the godly, as he did Lot out of Sodom; 4—9. (3) Gives an alarming representation of seducers, as extremely and aggravatedly wicked under high pretences to liberty and purity; 10—22.

lieved them, ye may be more and more affected with them and practise them;—nay, while I continue living in this mortal body, and sojourning in this world, I must, in justice to these truths and to your souls, repeatedly remind you of them, and earnestly urge you to practise them, lest, through the treachery of your memories or hearts, ye should forget and neglect them.—And I am the more solicitous to do this now, as I know that I must quickly leave this mortal state, and seal my testimony with my blood and death, as our dear Lord and Saviour long ago intimated to me.—And I am deeply concerned to leave behind me this, as well as my former, epistle, in order to establish you in these truths, and stir you up to the practice of them, after I shall, by death, have departed from this state of sin, sorrow, and mortality, into a perfectly holy and blessed state of everlasting life with Christ. 16. For, in making known to you the divine authority, power, and glory, in which our Lord Jesus will come to judge the world at the last day, we have not craftily framed, nor artfully related to you, sophistical and idle stories, like many of the Jewish rabbins, or like the Heathen romancers,—but that of which we had an emblem and earnest presented to our eyes and ears on the mount of transfiguration, 17, 18. Where we distinctly heard God the Father, who is infinitely glorious in himself, and dwells in the inaccessible light and glory of heavenly mansions, expressly attest our Redeemer as his dearly beloved and eternal Son; in whose person, offices, undertakings, and performances, he was exceedingly delighted; as he also is with all those who are united to him by faith, and clothed with his righteousness. 19. But, beside this emblematical and presumptive proof of Christ's future appearance in divine power and majesty to judge the world, we have many more plain declarations of it in the scripture, to which ye ought carefully to attend, as to a light to guide and direct you amidst the remaining darkness of Judaism, Heathenism, and carnal ignorance of heart,—till at last the glorious appearance of Christ himself dissipate all obscurity or doubt about what was intimated by the vision on the mount, and is thus further confirmed by the predictions of scripture.—20, 21. Meanwhile, ye may confidently depend on the prophetic attestation of Christ's glorious appearance,—being, first of all, fully satisfied that no prophecy of scripture is the product of human invention, the ancient prophets themselves often not thoroughly understanding the meaning of their predictions;—for none of these ancient prophecies were either delivered or written according to the contrivance, will, and pleasure, of the prophets themselves:—but those holy men, whom God set apart and sanctified for his service, spake and wrote only those things which were suggested to them by the Holy Ghost, whose immediate influence excited them to utter the ideas which he had raised in their minds, and to express them in words which exactly conveyed the true sense of them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It is an high honour to be instrumental in the conversion and sanctification of God's elect. What precious faith, and multiplied grace and peace, come to them through Jesus' righteousness and the powerful operations of his Spirit! Effectually he calls his people to a most glorious inheritance in heaven, and to a holy profession and practice in the way to it. Rich is that fulness of salvation which is given to them in the gospel promises: and great the deliverance from sin, and transformation into the likeness of God, thereby effected. Spiritual sloth indulged in is inconsistent with the gospel as the belief of man's merit of eternal happiness. Grace must be added unto grace, and we must grow in each. Nothing less will prove our election, manifest our

BUT ^athere were false prophets also among the people, even as ^bthere shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even ^cdenying the LORD that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 ^dAnd many shall follow their ^epernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

3 And ^fthrough covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: ^gwhose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.

4 For if ^hGod spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And ⁱspared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And, ^jturning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly;

7 And ^kdelivered just Lot, ^lvexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked:

8 (For that righteous man, dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds):

title to heaven, or make us meet for it. So apt are professors to mistake or apes-tate from the truth, that these things cannot be too often considered and inculcated: and the apprehended approaches of death ought to render both ministers and people the more active in their proper work. The truths of the gospel are too important to be dallied with, too certain to be discredited. And the more experience we have had of divine things ourselves, the more are we qualified to teach and recommend them to others. But it is on no human testimony, but on the infallible oracles of God, that our faith must be founded or practice regulated.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. But, as there were false prophets among your Jewish ancestors, who laboured to seduce them from the Lord into idolatry and other wickedness, so there will be, especially among your Jewish nation, false teachers, who, under various pretences, will covertly and craftily introduce the most pernicious errors, tending to the sudden, unexpected, and eternal, destruction of both teachers and receivers, as they will both doctrinally and practically deny the glory, and renounce the wisdom, authority, grace, and holiness, of their Lord and Master, discovered in the gospel revelation of him,—whom they boast of as their ancient deliverer from Egypt, and marvellous preserver for many ages afterward; and who is the acknowledged Saviour and Redeemer of his professed people. 2. And, through the natural depravity and enmity of their hearts against God and his ways, many nominal professors of Christ's name shall be seduced into their licentious and destructive principles and practices; on account of which, the truths of the gospel, and the way of holiness and happiness therein prescribed, will be blasphemously reproached by its enemies: 3. And by flattering speeches shall these seducers, influenced by their covetous inclinations, labour to deceive you, in order to promote their own secular advantages. But, from the examples of others, it is manifest that the terrible judgments of God, long ago determined and threatened, hasten apace towards them, and shall in due season be executed upon them. 4. For, if God did not shew favour to, nor abate the punishment of, those angels, that are of a far higher rank, who, through pride and envy, transgressed that law which he had given them for the rule and trial of their obedience,—but, for their first offence, hurled them down, with righteous indignation, from their holy, happy, and honourable, habitation in heaven, and confined them, in a state and region of horror and despair, till, at the general judgment, they shall receive their public condemnation, and have their full torment begun;—5. And if he had no pity on the inhabitants of the old world, who had despised all his solemn and gracious warnings by Noah, that faithful preacher of righteousness, repentance, and reformation, and of the righteous judgments of God against the impenitent, who, with seven only of his family, was saved, when God, by an universal flood of waters, drowned the rest of the inhabitants of the world for their obstinate wickedness:—6. And if, by fire and brimstone from heaven, he utterly destroyed Sodom, Gomorrha, Admah, and Zeboim, on account of their horrid profligacy and unnatural lewdness, and set them up as a type or pattern of that final conflagration and eternal fire which shall consume all the wicked of the earth,—that obstinate sinners of succeeding ages might see what they had to expect from his hand; 7, 8. While, in distinguished kindness, he plucked his righteous servant Lot as a brand out of the burning,—who had been sorely grieved, fatigued, and oppressed, in his own soul at the sight and report of the vile, dissolute, lascivious, obscene, and unnatural, behaviour of that perverse and wicked people among whom he dwelt:—9. These 11 †Whereas angels, who are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation †against them before the LORD.

12 But these, †as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish †in their own corruption;

13 *And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure †to riot in the day time. Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you;

14 †Having eyes full of || adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Who have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of *Balaam the son of Besor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness;

16 †But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, forbad the madness of the prophet.

17 †These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest, to whom †the mist of darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For, †when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were *clean †escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them †liberty, they themselves are the †servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For †if, after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 †For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, †The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

CHAP. III.

(1) Represents this epistle as sent to remind them of Christ's second coming, foretold by the prophets and apostles, since scoffers would quickly arise to deny and deride it; 1—7. (2) Represents the true reason why this his coming is so deferred; and the certain, sudden, and awful, nature of it; 7—10, 12. (3) Directs how to improve it, and the new state of the world that will attend it, as an effectual motive to holiness, patience, and steadfastness in the faith; 11—18.

THIS †second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your †pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye †may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the LORD and Saviour:

3 †Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts;

at last they shall be shut up in that infernal darkness, misery, and despair, appointed to them for their everlasting portion: 18. For, by their high pretences to holiness and wisdom, they only vent the pride and vanity of their own hearts, and accommodating themselves to the sensual and lascivious inclinations of depraved nature, they ensnare such as had been once brought off from the errors of Judaism or Heathenism, and had for a time shunned the conversation and practices of such as lead wicked lives according to their erroneous principles. 19. And, while they promise their followers full liberty in indulging their vicious inclinations, they themselves are the worst of slaves to their own corrupt lusts, being entirely overcome and conquered by them. 20—22. For if, after they have been externally reformed from the gross and scandalous practices of the men of this world which lieth in wickedness, through the notions which they had received concerning Jesus Christ as a Saviour and Sovereign, they are again ensnared and involved in these abominations, and yield up themselves to the practice of them, their case is more aggravated, guilty, dangerous, and hopeless, than it was before they knew any thing of Christ and the gospel, and especially than it was when they had the first conceptions of these things;—for their sin and punishment would really have been less, had they never heard nor known any thing of him, and his righteousness or law, than when, after acquaintance with his law, they revolt from that pure and holy doctrine which had been preached to them, with a divine authority to bind it upon their consciences.—But, agreeably to a well known proverb, as dogs lick up their own vomit; and swine, after being washed, return to wallow in the mire;—so, their natures never being changed, they, after conviction of, and reformation from, their wicked practices, return to them with as much pleasure and eagerness as ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—We must never expect a perfect church on earth. Deceivers, for the sake of worldly advantages, will always creep into the ministry, and always find followers. And often they fearfully pervert the gospel, and constructively deny that God who has wrought so great providential deliverances for themselves or others. Yea, notwithstanding repeated and tremendous warnings of providence in the destruction of their patterns in guilt, under the most specious pretences of wisdom and piety, they entice, ensnare, defile, enslave, and ruin, unstable professors, and carry on the vilest covetousness, pride, luxury, and unchastity. Dreadfully criminal and dangerous is it to return to that wickedness which the knowledge of divine truth had rendered detestable; and fearful damnation in hell, if not also misery on earth, awaits, and unceasingly hastens forward to, such, while God will certainly, seasonably, and marvellously, deliver his saints from their seduction, example, and punishment.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1, 2. In this as well as my former epistle, I chiefly aim at awakening and warning you, who are still sincere in the faith, to be on your guard against false teachers, and their destructive schemes and attempts to overthrow your faith and hope, holiness and comfort,—and to excite you seriously to remember and reflect on the predictions and doctrines which have been delivered to you by the prophets, and more lately by us apostles, whom Christ, the Saviour and King of his church, appointed for that effect; particularly what relates to his second coming to judgment, that ye may be fortified against the pernicious influence of secret and open seducers; 3, 4. Especially, as ye have been undoubted facts invincibly prove that the almighty and infinitely wise Sovereign of the world perfectly knows at what time, in what manner, and by what means, to extricate his faithful servants and worshippers out of all snares, troubles, and dangers, in the very worst of periods; and how to confine the wicked, though most powerful and crafty, under his supreme dominion, till he bring them forth, as condemned criminals, in the last judgment, to be punished for the iniquity of their hearts and lives.—10. And, according to his infinite wisdom and power, he will peculiarly reserve and punish those impious seducers, who, answerably to their corrupt principles, live according to the carnal dictates and desires of their sensual minds, unrestrainedly gratifying their impure and lascivious inclinations, and insolently pouring contempt upon all regular government and authority over them that could put a check upon their vices. Daring, refractory, and headstrong, they seek only to please themselves; and make their own will their sole law, and fearfully and impudently reproach and rail at the apostles, and other ministers of Christ, and at the civil magistrates, whom God hath set over them, to regulate and controul their exorbitant passions, appetites, and manners; 11. While angels, who are far superior in dignity to these proud boasters, or any earthly magistrates, are so far from contemning or reviling these deputies of God, that they never use any opprobrious bitter language against the devils themselves. 12. But these presumptuous despisers of government, instead of imitating good angels, like furious beasts of prey, reproach, rage, and rail, against persons and things, civil or religious, whose excellence they neither know nor approve; and therefore shall, by means of their own indulged corruption and wickedness, be utterly and eternally destroyed; 13. Yea, shall be fearfully, but justly, punished for their complicated crimes, as persons who glory and delight in the most shameless intemperance and unchastity, and are a reproach to the Christian name, gratifying their luxurious inclinations with their own deceived or deceiving devices, and cheating and imposing upon you, while, under pretences of love and friendship, they partake with you in your ordinary or religious feasts. 14. Their eyes are continually and insatiably employed in wanton adulterous looks, to discover their own lewd inclinations, and to excite the like in others, or to find out proper objects for inflaming and gratifying the vilest affections. They cannot refrain from contriving or committing sin, or endeavouring to draw others into it; and so, by their enticements in word and deed, they ensnare such unguarded persons as are not established in the truth and holiness of the gospel, nor fortified with grace against their guileful arts. As children of wrath, devoted to destruction under the curse of God's righteous law, their hearts are entirely engaged in contriving how to fulfil their covetous desires after the riches and honours of this world. 15, 16. They have renounced the only true way of salvation by Jesus Christ, and of walking before God in faith and holy obedience; and have wandered into the ways of sin and error, which lead to eternal misery, treading in the paths, and copying the example of Balaam, who, amidst all his fair pretences, laboured to curse God's Israel, and directed how to seduce them into uncleanness and idolatry, in order that he might obtain worldly riches and honour; and was by his own ass, when miraculously enabled to speak, sharply reprov'd for his infatuation and wickedness. 17. Amidst great pretences to, and appearances of knowledge, they are really void of true wisdom and grace; and, instead of being truly useful for the refreshment and fructifying of the church or their followers, they are carried about by the violence of their corruptions from one error and sin to another, till

5 For 'this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth *standing out of the water and in the water :

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished :

7 But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that 'one day is with the LORD as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The LORD is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, 'but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

10 But the day of the LORD will come as a thief in the night, in the which "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat ; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burnt up.

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, °what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness,

12 Looking for and †hasting unto fully warned that, in this last age of God's dispensations towards his church, there would arise profane despisers and deriders of the most important points of revelation ;—abandoning themselves to their own carnal devices and corrupt inclinations ;—and pretending, in a taunting manner, that the continuance of the world in the same form as when those ancient predictions were given out, effectually proves that no such thing as a general resurrection or final judgment need be expected : 5—7. For they wilfully shut their eyes against the scripture account of the alterations which the power of God has already made in the creation of this world, in the drowning of the old world, by means of those waters which he had created in connection with the earth : and that the aerial heavens and this earth, as subsisting in their present forms, are, by the same almighty influence of God's will, upheld, and as it were treasured up, to be, at the end of the world, dissolved, not by water, as formerly, but by a dreadful fire, to the torment and terror of all the wicked who have ever lived.

8. To fortify your minds against their cavils, drawn from the apparent delay of Christ's second coming, consider this—that one day and a thousand years are equally before God as any individual point of time ; and that, in his reckoning, the longest space is infinitely less than a single day in ours.

9. Nor is the seeming delay of the promised coming of Christ to judgment any evidence of God's dilatoriness, or that it shall never happen ; but is intended as an exercise of his long-suffering towards us, who are the objects of his special love ; that all of us, in our several generations, may be delivered from eternal destruction, and brought to a true and evangelical repentance of, and turning from, our iniquities.

10. But, how long soever God may delay this great day of the last judgment, in which Christ shall appear in all his glory, it will certainly come, in its appointed season, in a most sudden, unexpected, and to the wicked in a most terribly ruinous, manner. And on it the whole frame of this lower world shall be amazingly altered, and purged from all the effects of sin and the curse ; and the earth, that so much beloved portion of carnal men, shall be utterly burnt to ashes.

11—14. Since then we have sufficient reason to look for this great alteration of nature, and for the formation of new heavens and a new earth, out of the ashes of the former, into which nothing but what is righteous and holy can enter, it becomes us, with the utmost watchfulness, care, and circumspection, to study the most perfect holiness and righteousness in heart and life, expecting, looking, longing, and preparing, for that great event, and labouring that we may then be found united to, and accepted in, his person, washed in his blood, and sanctified and comforted by his Spirit.—15, 16. And, to encourage you to this study of the most perfect holiness, fix it in your minds that the great patience and forbearance of our Lord towards a sinful world is intended to promote your salvation and that of other elect persons ; even as Paul, that divinely inspired apostle, has hinted in his epistle to you ; as he has also, in his other epistles, warning both Jews and Gentiles, of this second coming of Christ and its momentous consequences, and that believers should patiently wait for it :—among which things there are some doctrines so sublime and spiritual in their nature, that weak and prejudiced persons cannot easily apprehend or receive them ; and which, through their ignorance, pride, and other inward corruptions, they who are never taught of God, or are sceptical and unsettled in their principles, rack and torture to a wrong meaning, perverting the sense and use of them, as they do many other passages of the Old and New Testament, to their own everlasting and aggravated destruction.

17. Since then thou, my dear Christian brethren, are forewarned of these things, and assuredly know and believe that Christ will certainly come to judgment, and take vengeance upon all the ungodly, take the most earnest heed, lest any of you should, along with other apostates, be drawn aside from him, and his ways of truth and holiness, by the false notions, deceitful insinuations, and vile practices, of impious, immoral, lawless, men ; and fall from that stability in the doctrines, purity, and profession of the gospel, in which ye have hitherto persisted.

18. But, to prevent all declensions and revolts, let it be your earnest prayer and endeavour, in the use of all proper means, to obtain a growing persuasion and sense of God's free favour, to wax stronger and stronger in the habits of grace, and more and more to abound in the exercise thereof ; and in a clear, fiducial, practical, and experimental, acquaintance with the person, offices, relations, doctrines, promises, and commandments, of our divine Lord and all-sufficient Saviour Jesus Christ, and with your own personal interest in him.

19. Ye, therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness.

20. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our LORD and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—The very best of Christian professors have need to be repeatedly stirred up to their duties, to be reminded of all the doctrines and commandments of Jesus Christ, and cautioned against the errors and evil practices of wicked and designing men. And the purer men's minds are, it is the more wicked to corrupt them.—How precisely the scripture foretells the conduct of its adversaries, our own Deists not excepted, and thereby renders their wicked opposition a proof of its own divine inspiration ! But, notwithstanding all the scoffs of his adversaries, with amazing patience does God delay the seasons of his wrath, particularly the last judgment, that sinners may have full space to repent and embrace his salvation. And delay of years is quite insignificant, when compared with his absolute eternity.—In the most tremendous manner Jesus will come at last.—The heavens shall perish before him ; the elements melt away ; and the earth, with all that is therein, be burnt up ! How terrible for carnal men to have that world, which they had chosen for their portion, universally kindled into flames, to give them a final adieu, and fearful introduction into hell ! But blessed is the change which shall then be made in the purification of our lower world, and in forming out of its ashes new heavens and a new earth, for the everlasting happiness of ransomed men. In the faith and contemplation of these great events, how circumspect, holy, and religious, ought we to be. Fully should we be weaned from the world ; be steadfast in our profession and practice ; fervent in prayer for necessary supplies ; and earnest to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ our Lord.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN

Was probably written about twenty years after the destruction of Jerusalem, and chiefly to the Jewish Christians. The scope of it is to establish their faith in Christ, as the eternal Son of God and promised Messiah ; to lead them into affecting views of his and his Father's love in the work of our redemption, and thereby engage their love to God and to one another, and sweetly constrain them to depart from all iniquity, and yield a cheerful obedience to all his commandments, answerably to their high privileges, hopes, and obligations ;—and, in fine, to exhibit a system of infallible marks for trying the reality of our grace.

CHAP. I.

(1) Bears undoubted testimony to Jesus Christ as the sufficient ground of a believer's comfort; 1—4. (2) Represents the necessity of holiness, in order to comfortable fellowship with God; 5—7. (3) Represents the relief which saints have against that sinfulness which they see and feel in themselves, from the forgiving mercy of God and the blood of Christ; 7—10.

THAT^a which was from the beginning, ^bwhich we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of ^cthe word of life;

2 (For ^dthe life was ^emanifested, and we have seen ^fit, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was ^gwith the Father, and was manifested unto us);

3 That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have ^hfellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you ⁱthat your joy may be full.

5 ^jThis then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that ^kGod is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 ^lIf we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

7 But, if we ^mwalk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and ⁿthe blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

10 ^rIf we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

(1) Directs believers to the intercession and atonement of Christ for relief and help against sinful infirmities; 1, 2. (2) Testifies that all saving knowledge of Christ, and union to him, produce holy obedience to his law and love to his people; 3—11. (3) After addressing Christians in their different characters, as little children, young men, and fathers, warns them all against an inordinate love to the world, and against Antichristian errors; 12—23. (4) Encourages them to stand fast in the faith and holiness of the gospel, according to the light and influence of the Holy Ghost which they had received; 20, 24—29.

MY ^alittle children, these things write I unto you, ^bthat ye sin not. And, if any ^cman sin, ^dwe have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

2 And ^ehe is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our's only, but also for ^fthe sins of the whole world.

3 And ^ghereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

4 ^hHe that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 ⁱBut whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 ^jHe that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, ^ka new commandment I write unto you, which thing is ^ltrue in fitted for communion with him in this world and in that which is to come. 10. If we pretend that we have not transgressed the law of God so as to need pardon by the blood, and sanctification by the Spirit, of Christ, we deny the truth of what he has testified concerning every man in his word; and thereby shew that the truth of the gospel, which supposes us sinners, and leads us to Christ for salvation from sin, has no place in us.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It is delightful when ministers preach Christ from experimental knowledge of him. But incontestible is the evidence we have of the gospel revelation concerning him and his benefits: and glorious is the fellowship which believers are thereby led into with him and his Father.—There is an absolute necessity of justification through his blood, and of holiness in heart and life, in order to have delightful fellowship with an infinitely high and holy JEHOVAH. And absurd is it to pretend that we either are, or have been, without sin in this world, or that we have fellowship with God, while we indulge ourselves in any sin. It is a great comfort, under all our felt and detested pollutions, that Jesus' blood is sufficient to cleanse us; and God, as faithful to his promise and just to his Son, must pardon and sanctify us. What an encouragement is this to gospel repentance, cordial confession, and earnest reformation!

CHAP. II. VER. I. My inexpressibly dear fellow Christians, I have written this to you to prevent your giving way to any known iniquity, or being surprised into it by temptation, or living in the practice of it; and that when, through infirmity and temptation, any of you fall into sin, ye may not despair of mercy or relief, but by faith rely on the glorious and prevalent intercession of Jesus Christ, in which he pleads our cause with his Father, the Judge of all, against all the charges of law and justice, and all the accusations of Satan, that our iniquities may neither be punished on, nor suffered to prevail and reign in, us;—even upon the ground of his own finished and infinitely perfect righteousness, performed in our room and stead, by which he made a full and complete atonement for all the sins of them that do, or shall hereafter, believe, not only Jews, but Gentiles, scattered every where in the world. 3. And let us rest assured that, if we have any saving knowledge of Christ, or faith in, or love to, him, it will powerfully influence us to a sincere, cheerful, and unreserved, obedience to all his laws and gospel institutions. 4. To pretend to know, love, or believe on, him, or to have had communion with him, without making conscience of keeping his holy commandments, gives the lie to our profession, and to the word of God; and manifests that neither the gospel nor the true grace of God has any place in our hearts. 5. But, if we duly regard, hold fast, and carefully observe, the doctrines, ordinances, and duties, contained in his word, we are undoubtedly under the eminently governing influence of a supreme love to God, and have sufficient evidence that we are vitally united to Christ, and interested in all his benefits. 6. Every one, therefore, who professes to be united to and interested in Christ, or to hold fellowship with him, is indispensably obliged to live a holy and righteous life, in imitation of his.—7, 8. And in my earnestly pressing you to imitation of Christ, particularly in love to God and to one another, I impose no new commandment, but only remind you of a divine precept, which, as to the substance of it, was delivered as early as any Old Testament revelation; and was enforced by our dear Saviour in the beginning of his EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. VER. 1—3. It is not upon slender and doubtful grounds, but on the most full assurance from hearing, seeing, and handling him, both before his death and after his resurrection, and upon the most remarkable spiritual experience of his power, glory, and grace; as well as by the infallible inspiration of the Holy Ghost; that we have preached unto you Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, who has all life originally in himself, and has, when manifested in our nature, purchased life for us, and for ever bestows it upon us;—in order that ye might have partnership and communion with us, as one spiritual and holy body, in all the gracious promises, ordinances, influences, blessings, and privileges, which belong to the gospel state:—in which we have communion with the Father in all the blessings of his love, communicated to us through and with Christ, his eternal and dear Son, in all his righteousness and all the blessings of his purchase, and so also with the Holy Ghost in all his graces and comforts, as the earnest of our eternal and immediate fellowship with God in heaven.

4. And these great things I write unto you, that ye may have a fulness of solid satisfaction and joy in this delightful and holy fellowship with God.

5. Now, as the knowledge of what God is, and who shall inherit this grand promise of eternal life, is necessary to your having comfortable fellowship with him, know that Jesus Christ and his Holy Spirit have taught us, that we might publish it unto you, that God is an absolutely perfect Spirit, infinite in wisdom, purity, blessedness, and glory, without the least mixture of any thing defective or sinful.

6. It is therefore plain that all pretences to hold comfortable fellowship with him, or hopes of the eternal enjoyment of him, while we indulge ourselves in ignorance, error, or any sinful practices, are but an evidence of our hypocrisy, give the lie to our Christian profession, and are a practical contradiction to the nature and will of God, and to the whole tenor and design of the gospel, and even to the very nature and truth of things.

7. But if, as children of the light, we, according to our profession, habitually, delightfully, and progressively, think, speak, and act, under the direction and influence of his Spirit, in the ways of truth and holiness, according to the rule of gospel revelation, and after the pattern of God himself, in knowledge, wisdom, holiness, and comfort, then we, as well as our fellow Christians, share in a joint interest, communication, intimacy, and intercourse, with him: and the foundation of this fellowship is, that the infinitely precious atoning blood of Jesus Christ, our appointed Saviour, his eternally and eminently beloved Son, is continually efficacious for cleansing us from the guilt, condemnation, and power, of all our sins, and at last from all the inbeing and effects of it.

8. If any of us, who pretend to be cleansed by the blood of Christ, are so ignorant, proud, and vain, as to imagine that, in this present state of weakness and mortality, we are perfectly purified from all the inclinations and workings of sin, we certainly deceive our own souls; and neither the truth of God's word, which declares the contrary, nor any true light of knowledge, grace, or holiness, is found in us.

9. But if, under an humbling sense of our sinful imperfections and works, we sincerely confess them to the Lord, with faith in Christ's propitiatory sacrifice, for the forgiveness of them, and with penitential shame, contrition, and abhorrence of them, and full purpose of heart by his grace to forsake them, he, in the faithful accomplishment of his promises, and in justice to the merit of his Son, will, for his sake, freely and fully forgive us all our sins, original and actual, and cleanse us from all the reigning power and defilement thereof, that we may be him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth. 9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. 10 He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. 11 But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes. 12 I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you, for his name's sake. 13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father. 14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one. 15 Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. 17 And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doth the will of God abideth for ever. 18 Little children, it is the last time:

ministry, and preached to you at your first belief and profession of the gospel. Nevertheless, I further explain and inculcate this duty of brotherly love under new obligations, motives, encouragements, and assistances, as enjoined by Christ, in a more spiritual, extensive, and cordial, view, and as exemplified by him in an unparalleled manner; because the darkness of the Jewish dispensation, and of your former state of ignorance, error, and sin, is in a great measure past; and the clear light of the gospel, or of Christ in it, is now displayed in its full glory, and shines into your hearts. 9—11. Let men make what professions they will of Christian knowledge, faith, holiness, or comfort, their habitual indulgence of an uncharitable, malicious, and revengeful, temper of spirit towards their neighbours, and especially fellow Christians, infallibly marks them in a state of sin and error, destitute of all evangelical light and grace, quite ignorant of the way that leads to eternal life, and going on in errors and evil practices, without discerning or considering the fearful tendency thereof. But they, who affectionately love their brethren for Christ's sake, manifest themselves savingly enlightened, and renewed by the grace of the gospel, and neither do they lay stumbling-blocks in the way of others, to hinder them from their duty; nor shall any difficulties hinder them from their own. 12—14. These admonitions, cautions, and encouragements, I write to you all, particularly to you, my dear weak believers; because that your faith, being true, however weak, ye have received the full and irrevocable forgiveness of all your sins through Jesus' blood, to the glory of his grace; and ye have been brought to a fiducial and affectionate knowledge of God, as your heavenly Father in him:—and to you who have had a long standing in Christianity, and have attained a large stock of knowledge and experience; because, taking pleasure to meditate on the deep things of God, ye have, with great judgment, faith, and love, understood much of him, and of his eternal purposes and contrivances for your salvation:—and to you, who, by zeal, activity, and spiritual attainments, are remarkably fitted for the Christian race and spiritual warfare; because ye have encountered, wrestled against, and obtained glorious victories over, Satan and your lusts, and have the word of God deeply rooted in you, enabling you to perform the most difficult duties;—beseeching all of you to act answerably to your privileges and characters, in obedience to the whole divine law, particularly in loving God and one another. 15. And, in order hereunto never let your affections be engaged to this present evil world as your portion or rest; nor entangled with, engrossed by, or inordinately carried out after, any of its allurements: for, if your hearts be supremely set upon worldly enjoyments, of whatever kind, ye can have no true love to God, the Father of Christ and of all true believers in him. 16. For, however enticing the things of this world are to the irregular desires of men's hearts, whether consisting in pleasures, suited to gratify lewd, intemperate, and luxurious, inclinations; or in riches, estates, and possessions, suited to the covetous eye, which cannot be satisfied with them; or in honours, dignities, and preferments, grand houses, or furniture, calculated to feed pride and ambition;—their perverting and ensnaring influence is not from God the Father of mercies, nor according to his design in giving them, nor effected by his love to, or his grace in, his people;—but it proceeds from the malignant influence of the things of this world upon men's carnal hearts, and their own corrupt inclinations to them. 17. And, to arm you against all temptations, and take off all your inordinate affections from and, as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us; for, if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth; but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? he is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but] he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.

24 Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but, as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him.

earthly things, think how uncertain, unsatisfying, fleeting, fading, and perishing, they are, and how quickly they, and all our inclinations towards or gratification by them, will come to an end; whereas they, who, from a principle of faith, persist in a steadfast course of obedience to God's will, are possessed of substantial, satisfying, and abiding, realities, and stand fixed in the everlasting favour of God, and in a state of grace, and shall for ever live in the full possession of all durable and heavenly happiness. 18. My dearly beloved fellow Christians, the many deceivers that have arisen in the world, in opposition to the person, doctrines, and laws, of our Lord Jesus Christ, as forerunners of the Romish Antichrist, plainly manifest that we are already entered on the perilous times of God's last dispensation of mercy to men. 19. Their utter revolt from the faith and fellowship of the gospel, after they had made plausible appearances of being sincere converts; and separating themselves from our church communion, that they might broach and spread their errors or infamous practices; fully manifest that they were never true believers, renewed by grace as we are, but mere hypocrites and false-hearted professors. 20. But ye who are true believers have, through the intercession and influence of our infinitely holy and sanctifying Saviour, been richly endowed with the Holy Ghost in his gifts and graces; by means of which ye are led into an experimental and practical knowledge of every thing necessary for your preservation from seduction, or your eternal salvation. 21. I therefore write to you, not as to persons ignorant of the fundamental truths of the gospel concerning Christ, but as to those who already know, believe, and esteem, them, and are well assured that no fraud, deceit, or error, such as these seducers promote, can proceed from the gospel, or be consistent with it, in order that I may further confirm and establish you in it. 22, 23. And none more certainly manifest themselves impostors and false teachers, than they who, contrary to all the evidence given by the prophets and apostles, and by his Father's and his own declarations, miracles, and conduct, deny Jesus of Nazareth to be the eternal Son of God and promised Messiah come in the flesh; and, in so doing, deny the Father as connected with him in his divine character and mediatorial office:—whereas they who cordially own, believe, and confess, him to be the Father's coequal and coeternal Son, and the only Saviour of lost sinners sent by him, duly honour both Father and Son, and have a right knowledge of the Father, and a special interest in his favour through his Son. 24. Let therefore the true doctrine concerning Christ and his Father, in which ye were instructed from the very beginning of your Christian profession, be still embraced, held fast, and fixed in you, as an abiding principle; thus shall ye manifest yourselves saints indeed, and shall have abiding union and fellowship with Christ, and his Father through him, to your complete salvation; 25. And shall inherit that whole extent of eternal life, in grace here and glory hereafter, which is purchased by Christ, promised in the new covenant, and offered in the gospel. 26. These hints I have given you, to establish, comfort, and fortify, you against those adversaries of Christ who, by subtle and ensnaring artifices, labour to corrupt your principles and practices, and draw you away from the simplicity of the gospel. 27. But I need not insist upon them, because the Holy Ghost, who is incapable of, and infinitely hates, all deceit and falsehood, in his person, gifts, and graces, does and shall perpetually dwell in you, to enlighten, guide, govern, and lead, you into the knowledge of all things

CHAP. III.

The apostle here (1) Admires the love of God in making believers his children; 1, 2. (2) Shews that all saving hope of eternal glory, and all communion with Christ and regeneration by his Spirit, infallibly promote holiness, and hatred of sin; 3—10. (3) Represents love to fellow Christians as a distinguishing mark of saintship; 11—15. (4) Describes that love by such actings as evidence it sincere: 16—21. (5) Represents the great advantage of faith, love, and obedience; 22—24.

BEHOLD^a, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, ^bthat we should be called [the sons of God: therefore 'the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, ^dnow are we the sons of God, 'and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but ^fwe know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we ^gshall see him as he is.

3 And ^hevery man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: 'for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that ^khe was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.

necessary to salvation, and render you perseveringly stedfast in Christ and his truth. 28. I beseech you therefore, my dear little children, carefully to adhere to Christ and the pure doctrines of the gospel, and your holy profession thereof, that, at his glorious appearance to judge the world, our expectations of you may not be disappointed, but we may have the satisfaction to see you appear with him in glory, as persons truly converted to him, and built up in him, by our ministrations.

29. And, since we trust ye have right thoughts of Christ, our righteous Mediator, who also bestows righteousness upon his people, ye cannot but know that every one, who, from a principle of faith and love to him, habitually practises what is right, and lives in imitation of and obedience to him, is, by his regenerating Spirit, endued with abiding principles of saving grace, and is, by adoption, made a child of God and heir of eternal glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—The gospel at once delightfully dissuades from sin, and provides relief under the oppressive sense of it. And happy is it that Jesus' ever prevalent intercession for his people is founded on his infinitely valuable and all efficacious atonement. But it is absurd to pretend knowledge of Christ, or union of fellowship with him, without conscientiously keeping his commandments and following his holy example.—Though now under the gospel the law of brotherly love has new manifestations and enforcements, it was always the same in substance. And it is impossible for men either to be or live like Christians without practising it. In Christ's family on earth, what different degrees are there of grace and experience! But the weakest saints have their sins fully forgiven them, and love their heavenly Father. And the more they grow in grace, the more established are they in the faith, and capable of resisting and conquering the devil and his instruments, while the ripest for glory have the deepest acquaintance with God and his counsels.—But, alas, the prevailing love of this world is a fatal enemy to all true practical religion. Its precarious, empty, and perishing, pleasures, riches, and honours, often carry off men's hearts from every thing eternal and divine.—Crafty seducers and ruinous errors greatly plague the church in every age. And how many, by their apostasy from the practice and profession of the gospel, manifest that they were never truly chosen by God nor believed on his Son! Infinite then is the mercy that the Holy Ghost by his enlightening and attractive influences, so brings and binds all the elect to Christ, that not one of them can ever fully or finally apostatize from his truths or ways; and that his infallible promise of eternal life secures their growth in holiness, and honourable appearance before his tribunal.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Behold, with attention, admiration, gratitude, joy, and praise, what free and transcendent love and mercy the great JEHOVAH hath bestowed on us, in making us—who are, in ourselves, altogether worthless, mean, vile, and contemptible sinners—his regenerated and adopted sons, heirs of himself and all the blessings of his new covenant! No wonder the carnal and wicked men of this world do not esteem, love, or own, but hate, us who bear his image, since they are ignorant of his nature, and will, and do not esteem, approve, nor acknowledge, either Father or Son. 2. My dear fellow Christians, notwithstanding our many natural and sinful infirmities, and our apparently despicable meanness, we are already the sons and heirs of God by regeneration, adoption, and marriage union to his Son; and therefore, though neither worldly men around us, nor even ourselves, can as yet conceive the excellency of our station, or the full glory and happiness that are annexed to it;—yet by faith, and by the witness of his Spirit, we certainly know that, when Jesus Christ shall appear in his glory to judge the world, we, by the views and influences of his divine and mediatorial glory, then fully revealed, shall be made, and appear, like him in light and love, holiness, happiness, and glory. 3. And, wherever the true and well grounded hope of this is, it powerfully influences to aim at, and endeavour through grace to attain, all possible purity in heart and life, in imitation of 6 'Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whomsoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, 'let no man deceive you: he that doth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 'He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. 'For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is born of God 'doth not commit sin; for his 'seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 'In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: Whosoever doth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For 'this is the *message that ye heard from the beginning, 'that we should love one another.

12 Not as 'Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, 'if the world hate you.

14 'We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

and conformity to him in his superlative purity and holiness. 4. But whoever wilfully lives in any known sin, not only rebels against the light, grace, and obligations, of the gospel, but manifestly violates the moral law, which is holy, just, and good; for the strict and proper notion of sin is a deviation from, or contrariety in disposition, thought, word, or deed, to, the law of God, that unchangeable rule of righteousness, which is a transcript of his holy nature and will.

5. And nothing can be more evident than that the allowed practice of any sin is inconsistent with a good hope of being glorified together with Christ at his second coming, since the whole gospel shews that the end of his first appearance in the flesh was, that, by his sacrifice of himself, he might deliver us from the guilt, power, pollution, and inbeing, of our sins; and his perfect holiness caused all expiation for himself to be needless, and renders it impossible for him to have fellowship with wilful sinners. 6. Such therefore as abide in him by vital union and gracious fellowship, cannot sin deliberately, habitually, presumptuously, and wilfully. And, if any professor sin in this manner, he has never had any spiritual knowledge of or faith in Christ, nor any experimental and saving fellowship with him.

7. Let therefore no false teacher impose upon you, my dear children. Fix it in your minds, as a certain and important truth, that it is only they, who, from principles of faith and love, conscientiously and habitually work righteousness in all their dealings with God or men, that are sustained, as inherently and actively righteous before God, in conformity to Jesus, who loved, and constantly fulfilled, all righteousness.

8. Whoever deliberately, habitually, presumptuously, and wilfully works iniquity, under the influence of his inward corruptions, is a child and obedient subject of the devil, who, from the very beginning of time, has constantly persisted in sinning himself, and in tempting his fellow angels and mankind to sin, to their everlasting ruin. Now this is so contrary to every thing said, done, or countenanced, by Christ, that he, the eternal Son of God, came into this world, as sent by his Father, that, by his doctrine, obedience, and sufferings, he might counteract the devil, and deliver men from that sin and misery which he had introduced.

9. Whosoever therefore is, by the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, made partaker of a divine nature, is no longer a wilful and habitual worker of iniquity, like the devil and his children; for that divine principle of grace, which was infused into him in his regeneration, has an abiding root and residence in him to rule and govern him, that he can no more love and live in sin, or sin with deliberation and full consent of his will, as he was wont to do, or continue impenitent in the sins into which he has been surprised by temptation; because, being a child of God, and born of the Spirit, he has received an indwelling habit or principle of grace, that wills and works in direct opposition to all sin.

10. By these habitual inclinations and exercises, either in opposition to or in favour of sin, are the children of God and those of the devil plainly distinguished, and openly discovered and known to be such: for, let men's pretences be what they will, if they do not love, and habitually live in, the practice of religion and morality, and have not a sincere and cordial affection for their Christian brethren, it is impossible they can be the regenerated or adopted children of God.

11. For both our Lord himself, and his apostles and servants, have all along urged that, if we profess to be his followers, we should dearly love one another, and labour to promote one another's real advantage; 12. Not imitating Cain, that first born of our fallen parents, and notorious child of the devil, who, under the malignant influence of that infernal father, cruelly murdered his brother Abel, for no other reason, but because his works were better in themselves, and more respected by God, than his own abominable actions.

13. Never therefore marvel at it as a new and strange thing, if wicked men, those children of the devil, should hate you, as Cain did Abel; there being an established enmity between the seed of the woman and of the old serpent. 14, 15. And never let us be uneasy under the hatred of the world, since God loveth us; and since our sincere and cordial love to all that bear his image is a manifest proof that we are translated from a state of condemnation to a state of justification and adoption to eternal life, and are quickened, from a death in sin, to a life of righteousness and holiness:—whereas they who do not love the saints, as beloved by and belonging to Christ, and bearing his image, are still in a state of condemnation and spiritual death. Nay, he that, instead of cultivating this Christian temper towards his brother, indulges wrath, malice, envy, and revenge, is, in God's reckoning, a murderer; and such a one the word of God represents as having no principle of spiritual life abiding in him, or any title to or meetness for eternal life.—16. Since the eternal Son of God freely and cheerfully gave himself an offering and sacrifice to God, to make atonement for our sins and purchase our eternal salvation, we have a marvellous evidence of the truth and greatness of his love towards us; with which we ought to be so deeply affected and influenced as to stand ready to expose our very lives for encouraging the faith and hope of his ransomed people, and for the preservation of such as are eminently serviceable in the church. 17. But if, instead of copying Christ's example, we can see our Christian brethren in necessitous circumstances, yet harden our hearts against them, and decline relieving them when God has put it in our power, how can we pretend to have the faith of God's love to us, or any interest in, or real love to, God abiding in us. 18. Let us not, my brethren, content ourselves with even the strongest expressions of compassion and kindness to our fellow Christians and neighbours, but let us demonstrate our love in proper acts of beneficence and service, and in offices of substantial friendship, according to our professions; 19. And, by the prevalence of this excellent temper and conduct, we have sure evidence that God has regenerated us by his word of truth, and brought us to understand, believe, and live under the government of, the true principles of the gospel, as sincere Christians; and shall be emboldened to appeal to him for our integrity, whatever censures the world may pass upon us; which will comfortably free us from the stinging reproaches of a self-condemning conscience. 20. For, if our conscience, which is the deputy and candle of the Lord, witness against, accuse, and condemn, us of allowed hypocrisy, in our professions of love or of adherence to the truths of the gospel, what an awful sentence may we expect from God, who is infinitely more great and just, and better acquainted with our whole conduct! 21. But, if our conscience, upon due deliberation, under the enlightening and witnessing of the Holy Ghost, according to the truth of the gospel, acquit us from all charges of reigning or allowed guile, we may, in proportion to our consciousness of this, have humble boldness in our claim of God as our God and Father, in our professions of love to him and his people, and in appeals to him concerning our integrity; and a holy freedom, courage, and liberty of soul in our fiducial pleadings with him. 22. And our unfeigned respect to all his commandments, and endeavours always to do what is acceptable in his sight, by Jesus Christ, are an evidence that we have such interest in his favour as that we shall receive, in due time, whatever blessings we sincerely and humbly pray for according to his will, with faith in Christ, and for right ends.—23. And this is the great commandment of God, which is fundamental to, and comprehensive of, all the rest, that we should heartily receive and rest upon Christ alone for salvation, as he is offered unto us in the gospel; and, influenced by this faith, should love all his people, as his members, in obedience to his commandments. 24. All they therefore who conscientiously keep his commandments from a principle of faith working by love, manifest that they live in a state of vital union to, and gracious fellowship with, Christ and his Father, and have these divine persons dwelling in them by faith; and we, who stand in this near and happy relation to Christ and his Father, are assured that he lives with abiding influence in us, by the light, energy, and witness, of his Holy Spirit, which he has freely given us, to produce, excite, and assist in the exercise of, faith, love, and every other grace, in our souls.

15 ^aWhosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him. 16 ^aHereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and ^bwe ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. 17 But ^cwhoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? 18 My little children, ^dLet us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth. 19 ^eAnd hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. 20 ^fFor, if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. 21 Beloved, ^gif our heart condemn us not, ^hthen have we confidence toward God. 22 ⁱAnd whatsoever we ask we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. 23 And ^jthis is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, ^kand love one another, as he gave us commandment. 24 And ^lhe that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him and he in him. ^mAnd hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAP. IV. (1) Cautions against giving heed to every one that pretends to the Holy Spirit; and shews how to distinguish the true from the false claimants of him; 1—6. (2) Delightfully enforces brotherly love as the proper characteristic of a sincere Christian, especially from the love of God and Christ toward us; 7—16. (3) Describes our love to God in its cause, nature, and effects; 17—21.

BELOVED, ^abelieve not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. 2 ^bHereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: 3 ^cAnd every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world. 4 ^dYe are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because ^egreater is he that is in you than ^fhe that is in the world. 5 ^gThey are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them. 6 ^hWe are of God: ⁱhe that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. ^kHereby know we the Spirit of truth and the spirit of error. 7 ^lBeloved, let us love one another:

sinful men his children by regeneration and adoption. And, notwithstanding their mean or contemptible appearance on earth, great shall be their glory and happiness in the last judgment and the eternal state. Evangelical hopes of everlasting happiness powerfully influence to the study of holiness in heart and life: and an inward principle of grace, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, effectually determines to hate and oppose every thing sinful; as a rebellion against God, a counteracting of Christ's mediation, and an imitation of and obedience to Satan.—Faith as working by love, and love as influencing to an obedience to all God's commandments, are the principal characteristics of a Christian. And it is not high professions, but true and practical love to our fellow Christians, and a conscientious regard to all the laws of God, that will evidence us true believers, children of God, and temples of Christ, his Father, and Spirit. But nothing can more effectually prove us the devil's children and servants than neglect of, or murderous hatred against, our fellow Christians or neighbours.—There is need then of a thorough self-examination on these points. And if we cannot abide the trial of our own consciences, how shall we abide the judgment of an heart-searching God!

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. Take heed, my dear fellow Christians, to whom God has given his Spirit, that ye do not hearken to, nor be seduced by, every pretender to that Spirit, or by every doctrine which such a one may broach under colour of extraordinary light and immediate revelation; but, before you espouse these high pretenders, carefully examine, by the oracles of God what manner of spirit they have, what doctrine they preach, what lives they lead, and what aims they follow; and there is great need of your being very cautious on this head, as, according to our Saviour's predictions, multitudes of impostors are now gone abroad, and making a great noise in the world. 2, 3. Now, that ye may certainly distinguish the spirits, know that every one who, under profession of preaching by the light and inspiration of the Spirit, cordially believes, freely owns, and boldly professes his faith in, Christ as the eternal Son of God, who hath assumed our nature and fulfilled all righteousness in our stead, and, for our eternal salvation, appears to be truly inspired and authorized by God. But whoever denies that Christ is the true God, or promised Messiah, or denies his true manhood, or satisfaction therein for our sins, is not enlightened, nor authorized, nor born, of God;—but is actuated by that spirit of opposition to Christ and his truths which has already begun to appear in the world. 4. Ye, my dear children, are born of God, and have been taught by his Spirit to avoid, withstand, and overcome, these impostors, and their errors and wicked practices, by the steadfastness of your faith, profession, and obedience;—God, who dwells in you by his Spirit, being infinitely superior in wisdom and power to that Antichristian spirit which is gone forth into the world, and to Satan himself, under whom it acts and works, in the children of disobedience. 5. The views, interests, and doctrines, of these impostors relate to the riches, honours, and pleasures, of this present evil world; and therefore they propagate such notions of secular dominion and grandeur as are agreeable to carnal men; and hence their hearers, who place their happiness in worldly things, hearken to them, and greedily suck in their corrupt doctrines, as most suitable to their own inclinations. 6. But we, who preach an incarnate and crucified Saviour as the only way to everlasting happiness, are enlightened, approved, sent, and owned by, as well as born of, God. Whoever therefore truly knows any thing of God, according to the discoveries which he has made of himself in Christ by the gospel, diligently attends to, and heartily receives, the divine truths, which we preach by the direction of his Spirit. But they, who have not been enlightened and renewed by God, pay no regard to our spiritual doctrine concerning Christ as the only true Messiah, nor to us who preach it. By this we easily and clearly discern whether men preach under the direction of God's Spirit of truth, or under the influence of the erroneous spirit of the devil.—7, 8. for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 ° He that loveth not knoweth not God; ° for God is love.

9 ° In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him.

10 ° Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, ° if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 ° No man hath seen God at any time. ° If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.

13 ° Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 ° And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 ° Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, ° God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 ° And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. ° God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 ° Herein is ° our love made perfect, ° that we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because ° as he is, so are we in this world.

18 ° There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear express, and shew forth, the most sincere and brotherly affection one to another; for such love is begotten, commanded, and approved, by God, and it manifests him that lives in the exercise of it to be a child of God, regenerated by his Spirit, and possessed of an experimental, appropriating, and transforming knowledge of the perfections and will of God:—and on the other hand, he, that is a stranger to the exercise of love to the saints or his neighbours, appears ignorant of the nature and will of God; for God is in his very nature an infinity of grace, mercy, and love; and, in his thoughts, purposes, and dispensations, has manifested himself an infinitely glorious and engaging pattern of kindness and good-will. 9, 10. And this his love has been peculiarly manifested towards us in his freely sending his only-begotten and infinitely well-beloved Son to assume our nature; and, by obeying and dying in our stead, to atone for our sins, who are mean worms, enemies, and ungodly wretches,—that thereby he might purchase eternal salvation and happiness for us, and effectually bestow it upon us. 11. Now, if God loved us at so high and astonishing a rate, we, whom he has thus loved and redeemed by the precious blood of his Son, most certainly ought, under the influence of this love, and in imitation of it, to maintain the most ardent affection towards our Christian brethren for his sake, and in obedience to his will. 12. But since our love to God himself cannot be drawn out by any bodily sight of him, let us shew it by our regard to the saints, those visible representations of him: for, if we love one another as bearing his image, it manifests that we love him, and that he dwells in us by his Spirit to produce this love; and thereby his love to us is eminently and most effectually manifested, and ours to him is brought to its true form, and eminently exercised and proved to be sincere: 13. Yea, by this we have a comfortable evidence of our dwelling, by faith, and love, in union and communion with God through Christ, and of his dwelling in our souls by gracious manifestations and influences; because he has freely afforded us rich communications of his Spirit, to beget and animate this faith and love, and to cast a light upon his own work, in us. 14. And we apostles, who were eye-witnesses of Christ's manhood, preaching, miracles, sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension to glory, do, upon infallible evidence, attest that the eternal Father sent his only-begotten Son to take upon him our nature, and by this his course of obedience and sufferings to be the Redeemer of both Jews and Gentiles, who do or shall believe on him throughout the whole world. 15. Whoever therefore in these perilous times, from a principle of faith and love, boldly confess Jesus Christ to be the only-begotten Son of God, and only Saviour of lost sinners, thereby manifest that God dwells in them by his Spirit, who has led them to these just sentiments of Christ, and that they dwell in God by faith and love through the great Mediator.—16. And we, who have the experience of this, are fully persuaded on the ground of gospel revelation, and the concurring witness of the Spirit with our spirits, that the most peculiar, transcendent, and distinguishing, love is in the heart of God towards us, and is manifested in his sending his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, that we might live through him, and thus enjoy God, as altogether love, mercy, and grace, to us, without any mixture of fury or wrath against us. And, if we live under the power of an hearty and ardent love to him, and to his children for his sake, he and we have the most delightful reciprocal union and communion:—17. Yea, this manifestation of the sincerity and strength of our love encourages us to hope that we shall appear, with humble confidence, before him as true believers in the awful day of judgment; because, as he is all love to us, so we even in this tempting and ensnaring world, have our hearts filled with a supreme love to him, and with a sincere and ardent love to his children for his sake. 18. This love is indeed ever attended with a holy, filial, reverence of him, and cauhath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 ° We love him, because he first loved us.

20 ° If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

21 And ° this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAP. V.

(1) Represents love to the saints, as flowing from the new birth, which produces such a love to God as makes obedience to all his commandments pleasant, and such a faith in Christ as overcomes the world; 1—5. (2) Represents the doctrine of Christ's incarnation and Messiahship as fully attested by three witnesses in heaven, and as many on earth; 6—9. (3) Exhibits the happiness of believers, in having eternal life in Christ, and their prayers of faith heard for his sake; 10—17. (4) Directs them to improve their distinguished birth, knowledge, and happiness, in carefully guarding against all idolatry; 18—21.

WHOSOEVER ° believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God: and ° every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 ° By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

3 ° For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and ° his commandments are not grievous.

4 For ° whatsoever is born of God ° overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 ° Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

tious fear of offending him; yet, as we thereby know that we are passed from death to life, there is no distrustful, despairing, or terrifying, fear of him in it, as if he were our enemy. And the more strong and fervent our love is, under an assuring sense of his love to us, the more effectually it banishes all diffident, slavish, and tormenting, fear of him. 19. For our love to him is kindled by, and is the fruit and effect of, his free love to us, which was from eternity in his gracious purposes, and was manifested in time by gracious declarations and works, antecedent to, and the immediate cause of, all our love to him; 20. And this our superlative love to him is necessarily connected with a sincere love to all his children. To pretend to love God, and yet indulge an uncharitable, irreconcilable, and malicious, temper towards our fellow Christians, is to give the lie to our profession, and to all the declarations of scripture, concerning true love to him; for, if we bear not a love to our brethren in the faith and fellowship of the gospel, whom we have seen with our bodily eyes, and in whom we discern visible traces of the image of God, how can we ever love God himself, who, being invisible, can make no impression of himself upon our bodily senses, to affect our heart, or move and engage our affection.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—When in every age there are so many crafty seducers, there is always great need to try preachers and doctrines by the unerring standard of God's word. And it is a mercy that, when worldly-minded men so eagerly follow worldly-minded impostors, God so marks his faithful ministers with truth, holiness, and success in winning souls, that every unbiassed observer may discern the difference.—Astonishing is God's love to us in first so caring for us, as to give his only begotten Son to be our atoning sacrifice and our effectual Saviour and portion; and in giving his Spirit to dwell in us for the effectual application of all his purchased blessings. What can engage our hearts to a grateful love to God, a candid and open confession of his truths, and a sincere and affectionate love to his people, if this do not! The consciousness of God's loving us, and our loving him, by his grace, affords us great comfort and boldness in all our dealings with him.—But never let me reckon myself a Christian if I do not love all men, especially the saints, as far as they bear Christ's image.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. Fix it in your minds as the most important truth, that whoever cordially believes that Jesus Christ is the promised Messiah, and depends on him, as the anointed Prophet, Priest, and King, of his church, for all salvation, is regenerated by the Spirit of God; and such, as from this principle of faith have a supreme love to God, esteem of, desire after, and delight in, him, cannot but bear a good will to, and delight in, every Christian brother, as beloved of God, and spiritually begotten after his image. 2. And then we love the children of God aright, on account of their relation and likeness to him, when our love proceeds from such a prevailing love to himself as inclines and engages us to endeavour after all holy obedience to his commandments. Yea, such an impartial respect and delightful obedience to all God's commandments, without counting any of them a heavy burden, is alone the distinguishing mark of an unfeigned and governing love to him. 4. For whosoever is truly regenerated by the Spirit of God, he himself, and all that new nature which is produced in him by faith in Christ, and by virtue derived from him, will so withstand, overcome and triumph over, the terrors and allurements of the men and things of this world, as not to be disheartened by one, or drawn aside from his duty by the other; 5. But it is only by believing on Christ, as the true Messiah and only begotten Son of God and depending on him, by a lively and effectual faith, for justification, sanctification, and com-

6 ^hThis is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth; ^pthe spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

9 ^qIf we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God ^rhath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God ^shath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

salvation, that any man, Jew or Gentile, can be so weaned from, and mortified to, the things of this world. 6. Now the character of this Saviour of the world was well attested at his baptism, and in his bloody death, and, after his resurrection, by the powerful influences of the Holy Ghost, in applying his salvation to multitudes, and in the miraculous gifts bestowed, and cures effected, for the confirmation of the gospel. 7. For there are three divine persons, the habitation of whose glory is in heaven, who thence bore, and still bear, testimony to the incarnate Saviour as the true Messiah;—the Father, by repeated declarations from heaven, and by raising him from the dead;—the Son, by repeated avowals of his divine and mediatorial character, and by authoritative instructions and unnumbered miracles wrought in his own name;—and the Holy Ghost, in visibly descending on him at his baptism, and by coming forth from him, after his ascension, to spread his name, kingdom, and glory, in the world.—And these three, though personally distinct, in a manner which infinitely transcends our most enlarged conceptions, are not only equal in power and glory, but essentially one thing, being, and substance; one God, in distinction from, and opposition to, the many pretended deities of the Heathens and others. 8. Meanwhile, on earth, the miraculous gifts and saving graces of the Holy Spirit,—the spotless purity of Christ's human nature, his holy doctrine and ordinance of Christian baptism,—his blood or righteousness, represented in his supper, and applied to the consciences of believers,—harmoniously attest him as the divine, complete, and only, Saviour of sinners. 9. If then we readily depend, in the most important matters of life, upon the testimony of two or three credible men, how much more may we depend on the testimony of these three Divine Persons and things, that Christ is God's only begotten and eternal Son, and the only true Messiah. 10. Whosoever, therefore, upon this divine evidence, cordially believes and trusts in this incarnate Son of God as his only and all-sufficient Saviour, has not only received into his heart the witness of God, but has in his soul an experimental and satisfying testimony of the suitableness, worth, and excellency, of Christ; and of his ability, willingness, and authority, to deliver him from all sin and misery, and bring him to all spiritual and eternal happiness: but whosoever rejects the testimony which God has given concerning his Son in the gospel, as altogether sufficient, and given to him in particular, for salvation, flatly contradicts and gives the lie to the most high, holy, and faithful, God. 11. Now this is the sum of the testimony which God bears concerning his Son—that, in infinite love, he has made a full and free offer of grace and glory to us sinners of mankind in the everlasting gospel; and, according to his own eternal counsel and mere good pleasure, has graciously and irrevocably conferred upon us who believe in him a full right and title to, meetness for, and beginnings, earnest, and foretastes, of eternal life; as all purchased by, lodged in, communicated by, and to be enjoyed in a state of union and communion with, Christ. 13. These divine testimonies concerning Christ I have set in so clear and strong a light before you, who, under a sense of your helpless, guilty, and ruined, state, have heartily received and rested on him as your only Saviour, that, by the word of God, and witness of his Spirit with your spirit, ye may have a comfortable assurance that ye have not only the earnest and anticipating possession of eternal life, but have the whole of it in Christ your Head; and that ye may be excited and encouraged more and more stedfastly to believe in, and depend for your whole salvation upon, the merits and mediation of the only begotten Son of God.—14, 15. And we, who truly believe in him, are not only assured that God will bring us safe to everlasting happiness, but that he will graciously grant us what

14 And this is the confidence that we have ^{}in him; that, ^{}if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

15 ^bAnd, if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 ^cIf any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, ^dhe shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death; ^eI do not say that he shall pray for it.

17 ^fAll unrighteousness is sin: and ^gthere is a sin not unto death.

18 ^hWe know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God ⁱkeepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 ^kAnd ^kwe know that we are of God, and ^lthe whole world lieth in ^mwickedness.

20 And ⁿwe know that the Son of God is come, ^oand hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true: ^pand we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. ^qThis is the true God, and eternal life.

ever blessings we ask by faith in Christ's name, according to the declarations of his will given us in his word. 16. Now, if God so readily hear the prayers that are offered to him with faith in the name of Christ, we ought to pray for forgiveness of sins of every kind to our Christian brethren and fellows of mankind, in hopes of obtaining it; except only the sin against the Holy Ghost, which God has fixed as unpardonable, and infallibly connected with eternal damnation. 17, 18. Every disposition, thought, word, or deed, contrary to that equity prescribed by God's law, is sinful; but every sin is not that unpardonable transgression. Nay, whosoever is really regenerated by the Spirit of God, on account of the Spirit's continued indwelling and influence in his soul, and the immortal nature of that grace implanted in him, and through his own watchfulness against, and hearty detestation of sin, has an effectual security against being ever seduced into that unpardonable sin. 19. Now we certainly know that we have, by regeneration, been made partakers of a divine nature, as a powerful and abiding principle of holiness, and that all the rest of the world, who have never experienced this new birth, continue voluntarily under the power of sin and Satan. 20. And, from all the undoubted proofs before insisted on, we certainly know that Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, hath assumed our human nature, and come into our world to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself; and that he hath not only given us an external revelation in his word, but a saving knowledge of him as the Way, the Truth, and the Life, by an internal operation of his Spirit. Yea, we are vitally united to him, who is the true and faithful Witness as Mediator, and as the Son of God is the only living and true God, together with the Father and Spirit, and who, having all life in himself, is the Purchaser and Giver of spiritual and eternal life to us. 21. Let me therefore beseech you, who have such relation to, and fellowship with the true God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to abstain from every appearance of fellowship with Pagans in their idolatrous worship, or from giving any thing too high a place in your hearts.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—There can be no real Christianity without being begotten and born of God by his implantation of a supernatural and vital principle of grace in our heart. But no inward principle of grace can be manifested without actings of faith on Christ, of love to God and his people, and of weanedness of heart from the pleasures, riches, and honours, of this world. But the more fully and firmly we, through the gospel, believe on Christ, as our divinely sent and well qualified and furnished Saviour, the more complete will be our weanedness from, and victory over, the world.—What infallible testimonies concerning Christ are revealed unto us, to encourage and found our faith in him! Nothing then can be more highly reasonable than to rest in him, assured of our eternal life in and through him as the free gift of God. And it is highly criminal and ruinous to our own souls, by discrediting his gospel declarations and promises, to give the lie to JEHOVAH's solemn attestations. It is a sure ground of hope in our pleading for every necessary blessing, that Christ has purchased and intercedes for it, and God has promised, for his sake, to bestow it. But dreadful, as well as unpardonable, is the crime of desperate and wilful rejection of Christ and the gospel; and great need have Christians to guard against every approach to it, and to make sure their regeneration by God's Spirit, as an effectual preservative against it. Thrice happy are they who conscientiously improve their assured knowledge, faith, and hope, in carefully keeping their heart and life for God alone, in opposition to every idolatrous rival.

THE ^aelder unto the ^belect lady, and her children, whom ^cI love in the truth: and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

2^d For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3^e Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, ^fin truth and love.

4^g I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, ^hnot as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. Ver. 1—3. Dear lady, whom God has from eternity chosen to everlasting life, and, by the powerful influence of his grace, rendered a choice and lively Christian, and whom I, and all other sincere believers of the gospel, and faithful adherents to its truths, affectionately love and esteem, not on account of your high birth or your abundant wealth, but for your experience of conformity and regard to, those truths; I, who am an aged ruler of the Christian church, wish to you and yours the most abundant enjoyment of all those new covenant blessings which proceed from the redeeming mercy and grace of God our Father, through Jesus Christ our dear and now exalted Saviour; and that you all may be thereby animated to walk in truth and in universal love, according to the tenor of that glorious gospel with which he has favoured you. 4. It was with inexpressible pleasure that I found, when with you, some, though not all, of your children, effectually converted to Christ by the power of his gospel truths, and firmly adhering to them, and earnestly practising them, in a course of progressive holiness, thereby manifesting the truth and liveliness of their inward grace, according to the commandment which we have received from God the Father. 5, 6. Let me therefore beseech you, my dear and honoured lady, that, according to the law of God, long ago delivered under the Old Testament, and more lately inculcated on us, with additional motives and obligations, by our dear Redeemer in the days of his flesh, you and your children would earnestly persevere in the most affectionate love to, sympathy with, and care for, all that bear his image, and that you would manifest your love to him in a constant, laborious, and progressive, study of holiness, in all manner of conversation, according to his commandments, which have been so plainly and faithfully delivered unto you. 7, 8. I the rather beg your earnest attention to these things, which you were taught when first you embraced the gospel, as many preachers have now gone abroad into the world, who, pretending a mission from Christ, an uncommon zeal for his truths, and love to the souls of men, do, in direct opposition to his declarations, interests, and honour, maintain that he did not assume, nor obey, nor suffer in, a true human nature, but merely an appearance of it;—let me therefore beseech you, and other Christian friends to whom this letter may come, to be on your strictest watch, and to guard against the seductions of such, that ye may not fall short of the gracious reward of your acceptance, profession, and practising, of the gospel, and your sufferings for it, which you expect; and that we ministers may not lose the comfort which we hoped to have in your distinguished eternal salvation, as the seals of our ministry: 9. For, as he who believes with his heart the doctrines of the gospel concerning Christ's person, offices, and work, and steadily adheres to them in his profession and practice, hath a spiritual knowledge of, interest in, and fellowship with, Christ and his Father,—so he who does not believe, teach, and practise, them, but labours to seduce his hearers into the contrary errors, has no saving knowledge of, interest in, or fellowship with, either. 10, 11. If therefore any preacher appears among you who does not declare and inculcate these very doctrines concerning Jesus Christ, and the redemption of sinners through his blood, according to the riches of God's grace, which we delivered unto you, see that ye give him not the smallest encouragement, by entertaining him in your houses, or wishing him any success in his ministrations;—for whoever wishes him success, or familiarly converses with him, is accounted by God as a criminal encourager and assistant of him in spreading his errors, to the dishonour of Christ and the eternal ruin of men.

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great pleasure for ministers and Christians to observe persons of quality, and their children, heartily embracing the uncorrupted doctrines of the gospel, and walking answerably unto them; and to see the grace of God spreading through a whole family. And exalted blessings from Jesus Christ and his Father, are secured to such by their fellow Christians' prayers. True religion does not abate civil respect, but gives a spiritual turn to the most dutiful and affectionate salutations. True faith in Christ always manifests itself in a cordial love to God and his people, and in a conscientious obedience to his law; and those only have the benefit of a special relation to Christ and his Father, who continue steadfast in the faith of the gospel, and persevere in all holy obedience. It is very dreadful, after a long profession of gospel truth, and much apparent experience of God's grace, to be at last disappointed of that ample satisfaction which we expected in that course. But inexpressible is their guilt who attempt to subvert any of the leading truths of the gospel. And highly sinful and dangerous is it to have fellowship with them, or to give them the smallest countenance in their conduct. Let protestants, let Britons, think and tremble.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. Ver. 1, 2. My dear Gaius, whom God has loved with an everlasting love, and drawn with his loving kindness, and whom I sincerely and heartily love as a true Christian, who faithfully adheres to the truths of the gospel in his profession and practice.—I, who am now a very aged ruler of the Christian church, earnestly wish all manner of temporal prosperity and bodily health, as I have reason to believe that your soul prospers in an increase of spiritual knowledge, familiar fellowship with Christ, and delightful conforthat thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as ^ethy soul prospereth.

You act like a true believer and a faithful follower of Jesus Christ in your candid and disinterested benevolence to poor saints, particularly to such as are driven from their homes for their adherence to him, or go about preaching his gospel;—some of whom, being greatly affected with your distinguished kindness, made mention of it in our public worshipping assemblies.—And you cannot employ your substance better than in further assistance of such in carrying on their work, as an imitation of your kind and merciful God, and a token of your gratitude to him, for calling you, by his grace, to his kingdom and glory.—For, to the honour of Christ and his gospel, and to manifest their entire disinterestedness in their labours to win souls, these ministers have freely preached the gospel to the Gentiles, refusing to accept of a necessary subsistence from their new converts; we ought therefore cheerfully to entertain them in our houses, and, according to our ability, supply them with necessities; that we may thus assist them in the propagation of the glorious gospel, to the honour of Christ and the salvation of multitudes. 9, 10. I indeed wrote to your church to provide for such preachers; but Diotrephes, that proud ambitious man, who attempts to lord it over his hearers and fellow ministers, refused my letter a public reading, or hindered the people's compliance with its contents: but, if the Lord will, I intend to visit you, expose his wicked conduct and censure him for it; for he not only throws out a multitude of false and ill-natured reflections on me and other faithful ministers of Christ, and refuses to shew any kindness to persecuted and travelling preachers, but does all he can to hinder such as have inclination or ability to supply them;—and even pretends to excommunicate from the church, and deliver up to Satan, these afflicted brethren, if not also such as entertain them. 11. Dear friend, never make him, nor any other, your pattern in any thing sinful; but, in imitation of Jesus Christ and his Father, exercise yourself in brotherly kindness, and in every other branch of holy conversation. For it is only those who do so that are the children of God and heirs of his kingdom. But they, who indulge themselves in pride, hatred of brethren, or the like, have no spiritual knowledge of, nor fellowship with, him.—12. Demetrius is a most excellent person, whom I, and all that regard either truth or the gospel, do and must speak well of. Let him, under Christ, be a pattern which you study to imitate.

REFLECTIONS. Bodily health is an invaluable mercy when it enables us to improve our spiritual gifts and graces for the extensive benefit of mankind. And delightful is it when Christians remarkably increase and flourish in grace and good works; and when their faith and love to Christ, and his ministers and people, are such as cannot be kept secret.—Alas, what a plague to the church are proud, insolent, domineering, imposers of their tenets, and malicious revilers of Christ's truths and faithful ministers, who will neither do good themselves, nor suffer others that would! Richly they deserve to be detested by every Christian, and exposed and censured by every church.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. Ver. 1. Judas, not Iscariot, but the brother of James the less, and kinsman of Jesus Christ according to the flesh, sent forth by his immediate commission to preach the gospel to those Jewish Christians who, in the judgment of charity, appear to have been set apart by God the Father, as his chosen in his eternal purpose of love, and in consequence thereof preserved in Christ from dying in their sins, and effectually called to partake of all the blessings of the gospel in time and eternity. 2. Wishes the most tender compassion and favour of a gracious God, and peace with him and with one another, and the best prosperity of every kind, and all the excellent fruits and rich manifestations of his special and distinguishing love in their utmost fulness. 3. My dear Christian brethren, when I, with much thought and care, applied myself to write somewhat to you concerning that spiritual and eternal salvation which answers the circumstances of every sinful man, and is offered in the gospel to all that hear it; and which all believers, Jews and Gentiles, share of:—directed by the inspiring Spirit of God, I found it peculiarly necessary with the utmost earnestness to stir you up to the most fervent zeal, active diligence, and careful concern, to maintain, defend, and practise, the pure and uncorrupted doctrines of the gospel, concerning the person, offices, righteousness, grace, and government, of the Lord Christ, which have been by him, through his holy apostles, delivered to all his followers, who are holy in heart and life, as a trust and treasure to be by them faithfully kept and fully and purely transmitted to posterity. 4. For, according to the ancient purposes and predictions of God, there have clandestinely, by craft and flattery, crept in among you impious and heretical men, who, under pretence of embracing the Christian religion, represent the doctrines of God's grace as an encouragement to wanton and lascivious practices; and who, by their doctrine and conduct, plainly undermine the whole authority of God's law, and reject the gospel doctrine concerning the divine person and offices of Christ, as the Prophet, Priest, and King, of his church, and his gracious salvation of men from their sins to holiness and happiness. 5—7. To deter you from the smallest regard to, or compliance with, these seducers, seriously remember how your Hebrew ancestors, after God had miraculously delivered them from their Egyptian bondage, were almost every one of them cut off by terrible judgments in the wilderness for their disobedience and unbelief;—and how the highly dignified angels, who revolted from God by sin, were cast down into hell, and are, by the curse of his law, and their own wickedness and misery, reserved, like condemned and chained prisoners, till the last judgment; when their torments shall be completed, and they, with all apostates and impenitent unbelievers, shall depart into the most tremendous everlasting punishment!—

7 ^oEven as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after ^ostrange flesh, ^oare set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

8 ^oLikewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet ^oMichael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the ^obody of Moses, ^odurst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.

10 ^oBut these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, ^oin those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Wo unto them! for they have gone ^oin the way of Cain, and ^oran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in ^othe gainsaying of Core.

12 ^oThese are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: ^oclouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;

13 ^oRaging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars; ^oto whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And ^oEnoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, ^oBe-

hold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints,

15 ^oTo execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them ^oof all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their ^ohard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 ^oThese are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; ^oand their mouth speaketh great swelling words, ^ohaving men's persons in admiration because of advantage.

17 But, beloved, ^oremember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 ^oHow that they told you ^othere should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 ^oThese be they who separate themselves, ^osensual, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, ^obuilding up yourselves on your most holy faith, ^opraying in the Holy Ghost, 21 ^oKeep yourselves in the love of God, ^olooking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 ^oAnd of some have compassion, making a difference:

And in what a fearful manner God, by fire and brimstone from heaven, destroyed the Sodomites and their neighbours of Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, for their unnatural lust, men with men; and set them and their country as an emblem of that everlasting destruction which is prepared for wicked angels and men. 8. In like manner these profligate seducers delude themselves and others with their foolish and impure imaginations, indulge their fleshly lusts, and even pollute their bodies, by unchaste dreams and lewd practices: and condemn, revile, and rail against, all government and governors in church or state, so far as they tend to restrain their exorbitant vices. 9, 10. Yea, though Michael, that eminent chief of the holy angels, when disputing with the devil about the burial or concealment of the body of Moses from the Israelites, who would have readily worshipped it, did not venture to return the reviling and opprobrious language of that foul spirit, but solemnly left him to the righteous judgment of God, for his attempting to draw his people into the most flagrant sin against his divine majesty, crown and dignity;—these daring pretenders fear not to vilify the most excellent things, civil or sacred, of the proper use, design, and benefit, of which they are totally ignorant;—and even in such things as by the light of nature they cannot but know to be unlawful, they act as if they had no principle of reason to direct and govern them, and in a perverse, sensual, and brutal, manner debase themselves beneath human nature. 11. The most dreadful curses must therefore suddenly overtake them;—for, like Cain, they envy, hate, and are disposed to murder, such as deserve their highest respect;—like Balaam, for the sake of worldly honour or wealth, they are ready to act the most treacherous, hypocritical, malicious, and destructive part against the people of God;—or, like Korah and his companions, they set up themselves in the most daring manner against the governors whom God has appointed in church or state, and shall, in a most awful form, be at last swallowed up into everlasting flames. 12. They are a scandal, reproach, and an infectious defilement, to your feasts, civil and sacred, while, fearless of guilt or punishment, they labour only to gratify their luxurious appetites;—and, while they put on false appearances, as if they would be most refreshing, useful, and comforting, to mankind, they are quite destitute of any real goodness; unstable as clouds, they are driven about by their own lusts and passions from one error and vice to another, and become more and more dead in sins, and hopeless of recovery. 13. In the most turbulent, pernicious, and noisy, manner they, to their own shame, throw out their furious reproaches and malicious slanders against the doctrines, ministers, and followers, of Christ,—and their corrupt principles and vicious inclinations. Under all their pretences to be noted lights for the direction of others, themselves are utterly ignorant of real religion, and wander from the truth and holiness of the gospel, and run about spreading their wicked principles, temper, and courses, till at last they shall be plunged in the eternal horrors of that misery, despair, and damnation, which God has prepared for them as their just punishment. 14, 15. It was partly with respect to such persons that the famous Enoch foretold Christ's glorious coming, attended by his saints and angels, to the last judgment,—publicly to convince, expose, and condemn to eternal punishment, all ungodly persons, for their premeditated, malicious, and wicked, deeds, and for their virulent speeches which they have thrown out against his person, gospel, and cause, and upon his members and faithful servants for his sake: 16. Which conduct exactly tallies with that of the seducers I am now warning you against,—for these secretly murmur against God and his providence, against magistrates and ministers, against Christ and his followers and ways, and are continually finding fault and openly quarrelling with all his doctrines and dispensations, being quite dissatisfied with their own state and condition in the world,—and with restless minds are pursuing their own vicious inclinations to unlawful pleasures; and, at the same time, talking in lofty and unintelligible strains, and with high pretences to knowledge and religion,—speaking the most excessively vain and concealed things of themselves, and extravagantly flattering, caressing, and extolling, such as are of their own party, however vile, especially if they be rich, or ready to grant them some worldly advantage, to gratify their covetous or luxurious temper. 17, 18. Now, my dearly beloved brethren in the Lord, beware of being stumbled at the rise of such seducers, or their scornful derisions of every thing sacred, or their abandoned practices, since our Saviour and his apostles have given you such plain and express warnings of them. 19. For these are the very persons of whom you have been warned,—men that make factions and divisions in the church, alienating themselves from the true apostles, servants, disciples, and doctrines, of Christ, and forming separate parties of their own sentiment, as if they were more holy than others;—whereas they are entirely governed by their animal appetites, lusts, and passions, and are entirely destitute of the enlightening, purifying, and sanctifying, gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. 20. But, guarding against being misled by men of such corrupt principles and practices, persevere with integrity and faithfulness in your holy profession, and, by all proper and appointed means, endeavour to promote your own and your fellow Christians' spiritual establishment and advances in grace, holiness, and comfort, upon that foundation of faith which is laid in the doctrines of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone; and upon that principle of faith in you which purifies the heart, works by love, overcomes the world, and derives all grace out of Christ's fulness, to enable you to grow up to all perfection in him, who is the head;—and continue habitually instant in prayer, under the direction and influence of the Holy Spirit to help your infirmities. 21. And thus constantly endeavour to approve yourselves to God as those that sincerely and fervently love him and delight to keep his commandments;—and, in order hereunto, study to maintain a sweet and experimental sense of his special love to yourselves—looking, hoping, and longing, in a prepared state and frame, for the final manifestations, fruits, and effects, of the grace and mercy of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in that merciful sentence he shall then pass upon you, unto your complete deliverance from all sin and sorrow, and admission to all the blessings of eternal life. 22, 23. And, in order to your own and others' edification in faith and holiness, great care and prudence must be used in dealing with such as have been seduced into any sin or error. Such as have been shaken and drawn aside through inadvertence, ignorance, and weakness, must be treated with great tenderness, meekness, condescension, endearing kindness, and compassionate concern, to recover and establish them.—Others, that have gone further lengths, and appear obstinate and hardened, must be more sharply dealt with; and their sin and danger must be set before them in the most alarming manner from the word of God, and needful censures be inflicted upon them;—in all which, the utmost care must be taken to have no fellowship with them in their polluting courses. 24, 25. Now to the Lord Jesus Christ, whose character I have represented as peculiarly suited to your encouragement and relief under your present troubles,—and who has almighty power originally in himself as God, and all official authority and qualifications as Mediator, and, having graciously undertaken it, is as willing as able to preserve you from apostasy, and from irrecoverably stumbling into error or wickedness, and, after your state of warfare is accomplished, to present you to himself and his Father perfectly holy and unblemished, and completely accepted in his immediate presence, and glorified together with him in joy unspeakable, and amidst the triumphant and ecstatic joys of all the established angels and ransomed saints,—even to this God our Saviour, who, together with the Father and Spirit, is infinitely, originally, essentially, and communicatively, the only wise God,—be ascribed all the glory of his divine nature and attributes as God, and of all his love, grace, designs,

REFLECTIONS UPON JUDE. It is an expressible honour to be a faithful servant of Christ; to be divinely chosen, united to, and preserved in, Christ: and unbounded grace, mercy, and peace, await such in time and eternity. With diligent care ought ministers to instruct their hearers concerning the salvation of their souls, indefinitely offered in the gospel, and bestowed on all that believe; and to stir them up to an earnest concern, steadfast adherence, and fervent zeal, for the truths of the gospel.—Impostors abound in every age, and dare to plead God's word and grace in favour of their vilest abominations. Yet, when warned by the fate of ancient Hebrews, fallen angels, filthy Sodomites, murderous Cain, viour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

hypocritical Balaam, and presumptuous Korah, what can such apostates, expect less than the eternal damnation of hell! But no warnings, no good examples, avail with men hardened in desperate wickedness;—they will still rush forward, in their impure, lustful, rebellious, insolent, reproachful, brutish, proud, fearless discontented, course; dishonouring God and seeking to please men, while they are plaguing his church. Great need then have Christians to regard the inspired warnings given against such, and to endeavour to make daily progress in knowledge, faith, fervent prayer, and holy love to Christ and his people, and in expectation of an eternal gracious reward. And with tender care, and holy, but prudent, zeal, ought they to reclaim such as have been ensnared. Infinite is the mercy that in this ensnaring world all the saints are in the hand, and under the care, of Jesus Christ as their keeper, and that all their preservation and happiness certainly redounds to his glory.

REVELATION OF JOHN THE DIVINE.

This book contains the visions which the apostle John received in the desert isle of Patmos, to which the Emperor Domitian had banished him about A. D. 96. (1) After a preface and introductory vision of Christ, it contains seven doctrinal epistles to the seven churches of Proconsular Asia, which also contain warnings and directions to the church in every age; chap. i—iii. (2) After an introductory vision of an enthroned God and Redeemer, it represents the fate of the church, and of the world as connected with it, from the ascension of Christ till the end of time, under the emblems of seven seals of a book opened, the seventh of which introduces seven trumpets, and the seventh of which trumpets introduces seven vials for the destruction of Antichrist,—after which the glorious thousand years, the last judgment, and eternal state, take place; chap. iv—xxii. The series of the predictions is carried on in chap. vi. viii. ix. xi. xx.: and the other chapters are explanatory digressions. The first six seals represent the state of the church and Roman empire from A. D. 33 to 323. The first six trumpets represent their fate from A. D. 338 to 1866, or 2016. The seventh trumpet extends from thence to the end of the world; in the beginning of which period the seven vials will be poured upon Antichrist.

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John:

2 Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

3 Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.

4 JOHN to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him who is, and who was, and who is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first-begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood.

6 And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

8 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the LORD, who is, and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was in the Spirit on the LORD's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1. Christ, as mediator, received this revelation from God; and he, by the ministry of angels, made it known to John. 4. Him who was, and is, and is to come, denotes the Father in his absolute eternity and unchangeableness. And, when Christ is considered as God, much the same character is given to him, ver. 8, 11, 17. chap. xxii. 13, and xxi. 6.—The seven spirits denote the Holy Ghost in the diversity and perfect variety of his gifts, graces, and operations. 5 Christ, by his personal constitution, conduct, declarations, death and ordinances, solemnly and infallibly bears faithful testimony of his Father's mind and will, and that he himself is the son of God and promised Messiah. He first rose from the dead to immortal life, and rose by his own power, as the head of his elect body, and as the cause, pattern, pledge, and first fruits, of their resurrection;—and, as a reward of his atoning death, he is exalted to his Father's right hand, with all fulness of authority and dominion, and to be head of all principalities and powers on earth as well as in heaven, for the preservation, conversion, and government, of his people, and for the restraining and subduing all his and their enemies. 6. Saints are kings, who, under Christ, have power to prevail with God in prayer, are heirs of the kingdom of glory, are enabled to govern their own spirits, and to overcome sin, Satan, and the world; and are priests sanctified to God's service, who have near access to him, and offer up themselves and their good works as spiritual sacrifices of gratitude acceptable to him by Jesus Christ. 9. I am your brother in the faith and in the family of God,—a fellow sufferer for the sake of Christ, his gospel, and cause, and fellow heir of his kingdom of grace and glory: and through his gracious assistance am patiently enduring my sufferings, and quietly waiting for my glorious crown. 10. On the first day of the week, which is divinely appointed to commemorate the resurrection of our Lord Jesus, I was in 14 His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And, when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and was dead: and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.

CHAP. II.

Contains epistles indited by Christ and written by John, to the pastors of the Asian churches, that they might transmit them to their people,—commending, reproving, warning, and encouraging them as their present state required; and hinting what mercies or a spiritual frame, employed in religious meditations and exercises, and the spirit of prophecy came upon me.

12—16. The seven golden candlesticks, represent the Christian churches, particularly those of proconsular Asia, in that light of doctrine, holiness, and comfort, which they receive from Christ, and hold forth to others. The Son of man walking in the midst of them is Jesus the true Messiah, taking pleasure to observe, preserve, govern, and furnish them with every thing needful; His garment down to the foot represents his mediatorial office, and his righteousness as our surety which covers him and all his people: His white hairs denote his divine Majesty and glory, and that he is from everlasting, and perfectly holy. His eyes like a flame of fire denotes his penetrating wisdom and knowledge, and his influence to discover the secrets of all hearts, and to purify and refine, or terribly consume, them, as he pleases: His feet like burning brass, represent the strength, steadiness, purity, and beauty, of all his personal conduct or providential dispensations, to the joy of his saints and terror of his enemies: His voice as the sound of many waters denotes his word and providence, powerful to convert and comfort his people, but dreadful, astonishing, and destructive to the wicked. The stars in his right hand denote gospel ministers, who, by their example and instruction, communicate light to the world, as framed, furnished, supported, directed, and governed, by him: The sharp two edged sword which goeth out of his mouth represents the justice of his government; and his word, law, and gospel, rendered efficacious for cutting sinners to the heart, cutting off corruptions from believers, and for cutting down his implacable enemies: His countenance like the shining sun denotes the manifestations of his infinitely pure and glorious person, character, fulness, and work, for the enlightening, reviving, comforting, and fructifying, of his church in heaven and earth. 18. His having the keys of hell and death denote his power to raise the dead, and to render men happy or miserable in the other world as he pleases.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Whatever revelation Christ makes from his Father is infinitely worthy of our most serious and humble study and religious regard. And however dark some circumstances of it may appear, an humble inquiry into it will profit our souls; and all of it shall be accomplished in due season. Rich are the blessings of grace which proceed from Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to all the churches and saints; and glorious and honoured are they who by Jesus' love are washed from the guilt, dominion, and filth, of their sins in his blood, and make kings and priests to him and his Father. But terrible is the condition, and dreadful the sentence and fate of Jesus' enemies, his people's persecutors, and of all earthly-minded men, when he appears in his majesty and glory to the last judgment! With great terror they shall then behold him; and with anguish bewail their neglect of, and rebellion against, him. In this world ministers and saints must expect to be fellow sharers in trouble and persecution for their adherence to Christ; but spiritual fellowship with him, particularly on the Lord's day, can sufficiently sweeten them, however bitter. If he, the living Redeemer, the author and finisher of all the dispensations of providence and judgments they might expect, according to their future conduct,— particularly to the church at Ephesus; 1—7: at Smyrna; 8—11; at Pergamos; 12—17: and at Thyatira; 18—29.

UNTO the angel of the church of Ephesus write; These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil; and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not; and hast found them liars:

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive:

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them who say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

grace, manifest himself as an almighty and all-seeing Lord, walking in his churches to take care of the faithful,—as enlightening and assisting ministers, and as fighting against his and his people's enemies,—as the risen Saviour, and living and exalted Ruler of the unseen world, it may sufficiently encourage and enable us to bear all with calm submission and sweet composure.

CHAP. II. In these seven epistles observe (1) Christ always describes himself in the introduction by a character suited to the case of that particular church to which the letter is directed, whether for encouragement or terror. (2) He directs them all to the Angel or Messenger of the church, that is the pastors, represented as one, because of the unity and sameness of their office and work; and yet sometimes as more than one, ver. 10, 25—because they are his mouth to their people. (3) The churches of Ephesus, Pergamos, Thyatira, and Sardis, are commended for some things, and reprov'd for others; the churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia only commended, and the churches of Laodicea only reprov'd. (4) Each of the epistles is concluded with a delightful promise of eternal glory and happiness to victorious believers;—A solemn call to every reader or hearer seriously to attend to and apply the epistles to his own conscience. Ver. 2. I am acquainted with, and approve, your manifold works of righteousness, and the pains you have taken to maintain and propagate my pure gospel and the interests of my kingdom, and with your holy prudent zeal that sin and error, and scandalous and erroneous persons, may be kept or put out of your church fellowship; with the strict trial you have made of the principles and manners of such as pretend an apostolic commission from me; 3. And that you have, with holy fortitude, constancy, and patient resignation to the will of God, borne up against all the opposition of false teachers, and under manifold persecutions for my sake;—and, from a principle of love to me and my cause, have, without fainting or discouragement, under your trials, persisted in diligently applying yourselves to promote my glory in the world. 4. Nevertheless, I must sharply reprove you, that of late your affection to me, my people and cause, has become less fervent than when you were first converted to the faith. 5. Think, therefore, seriously and impartially, on your shameful declensions and revolts from your former love and zeal, and how much of the purity, pleasure, and life, of religion you have lost by them: and with grief and hatred of them return to your wonted lively exercises of faith, love, and obedience; otherwise I will quickly take away all your gospel privileges, and dissolve your church, that you shall no longer enjoy or hold forth the light of gospel truth, holiness, and comfort. 6. The Nicolaitans, under a pretence of Christian freedom, encouraged men to idolatry, uncleanness, or such like wickedness. 7. To every one, who, united to my person, and depending on my grace, perseveres in mortifying his own corruptions, and resisting the temptations of Satan and the world, will I freely grant all the benefits of my purchase, in the sublime, substantial, and never-failing, honours and delights of the heavenly state; in which God himself dwells, and is immediately enjoyed in the most glorious manner. 9. They were poor in outward circumstances, and in spirit, but rich in faith, and heirs of God's kingdom

10 *Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days; be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

11 ^y He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt ^z of the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos write; These things saith he who hath ^a the sharp sword with two edges;

13 ^b I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is: and ^c thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, ^d even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where ^e Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold ^f the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold ^g the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.

16 ^h Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and ⁱ will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 ^k He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of ^l the hidden manna, and will give him ^m a white stone, and in the stone ⁿ a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

18 ^o And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; These things saith ^p the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;

19 ^q I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; ^r and the last to be more than the first.

20 ^s Notwithstanding, I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space ^t to repent of her fornication, and she repented not.

22 ^u Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And ^v I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that ^w I am he who searcheth the reins and hearts: ^x and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known ^a the depths of Satan, as they speak; I will put upon you none other burden.

25 ^b But that which ye have already hold fast till I come.

26 ^c And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, ^d to him will I give power over the nations:

27 And he shall rule them with a rod of iron: as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father.

28 And I will give him ^e the morning star.

29 ^f He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

Contains three other epistles with warnings, threatenings, exhortations, encouragements, and promises, suitable to the state of the church at Sardis; 1—6: at Philadelphia; 7—13: and at Laodicea; 14—22.

AND ^a unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he that ^b hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars: ^c I know thy works, that thou hast ^d a name that thou livest, and art dead.

good. Graciously he dwells among them, supports, furnishes and directs, their ministers; begins and perfects all that concerns them in time or eternity; and lives for them as their risen and exalted Redeemer. With tender compassion he reminds them of their declensions and irregularities, and calls them to repentance and reformation. And his promises are very encouraging to his ministers and people, who faithfully wrestle against every known sin in themselves or others. Spiritual and heavenly are the delights he now bestows upon them; sure is their security from eternal damnation; and infinite is the glory, acceptance, pleasure, fame, illustrious excellency, and power over every opposer, to which he will at last exalt them.—But awful are his threatenings, and tremendous his judgments, upon impostors, hypocritical professors, and obstinate sinners! No boast of deep or devilish understanding, no power in deceiving his people or in persecuting his servants, shall be able to screen them from his righteous and destructive judgments. Let then every soul hear and fear, and do no more so wickedly.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1.—Though men think and speak of you as true and lively saints, I know that many of you are mere hypocrites, still dead in trespasses and sins; and others of you are grown very dead, dull, and lifeless, in the frame of your hearts, and the manner of performing religious duties, especially in secret. 2. Guard against such an insensible temper; and, depending on me, who have all the influences of the Holy Ghost to bestow, make use of all means of grace for adding strength and vigour to the small remains of those good things which are among you, and which are on the very point of expiring; for, by my perfect knowledge of your hearts and ways, I find your performances cannot be accepted by God. 3. As ever you would make a right judgment of your state, seriously reflect on my doctrines and laws; and whether you at first received them into your heart in faith and love, or only with some flight of affection. And, so far as you received them aright, hold them fast, and carefully act up to them; and if you received them only in a notional and hypocritical manner, bewail your ruinous mistake, and never rest satisfied till God rectify it by his almighty influence.

of grace and glory. 10. Ten days of tribulation may either denote ten years or many days, Gen. xxix. 7, 41; 1 Sam. xviii. Job xix. 3; Eccl. vii. 19; or a few days, Gen. xxiv. 55; Lev. xxvi. 26; Amos v. 3; and vi. 9. 11. The second death is eternal destruction in hell. 16. Unless you quickly repent of your conduct, I will, by fearful judgments, cut off these bold offenders. 17. I will make those who believe and overcome partakers of all the reviving blessings of spiritual and eternal life, which are safely treasured up in Christ, and unknown to carnal men, and give them the most delightful sense of their full justification and adoption. 22, 23. I will inflict dreadful calamities upon your corrupt seducers, and those seduced by them, so as to alarm all the churches around, and to make them know that no pretences to knowledge or piety can hide any wicked principles or evil practices from me. 24, 25. Such of you as have never approved, but faithfully opposed, those diabolical delusions and mysteries of iniquity, which these seducers propagate with the deepest intrigue and subtilty, and boast of, as the product of profound knowledge and wisdom, I only require to persevere in your opposition, and to hold fast the doctrines and precepts which ye have received in my word,—in the continued exercise of faith, love, and holy obedience. 26—28. Such as stand their ground against temptations, and persevere in faith and holiness till the end, I will make to share in my conquests and glorious dominion over the world, and my victory over mine enemies, and will give them all that light and grace, those comforts, enjoyments, and glories, that are to be found in myself as their everlasting portion.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—No churches on earth are without their defilements and weaknesses; few without some glaring iniquities, or even without some wicked seducers. And it is a mercy that Jesus Christ, for their benefit, communicates to both pastors and people his reproofs, warnings, directions, and encouragements. His characters, as well as his oracles, exactly answer their case. And he has a critical and divine acquaintance with them and all their concerns. He takes the first and kindest notice of their graces, services, and sufferings for his sake, and how they oppose what is evil, and perform what is watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white; for they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write; These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth and no man shutteth, and shutteth and no man openeth:

8 I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan; who say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write; These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the beginning of the creation of God;

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.

16 So then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked;

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold, tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed; and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

ences; for, if you continue unconcerned, my destructive judgments shall suddenly and unexpectedly break forth upon you. 4, 5. There are, indeed, a few eminent Christians among you who have kept themselves clear of errors and immoralities, and have maintained their integrity, sound in the faith, and lively in their practice. They, being accepted in my righteousness, and sanctified by my Spirit, shall live eternally with me, in the most delightful, holy and honourable fellowship; and they, and all others who overcome sin and Satan, shall, in the most public and honourable manner, be acknowledged by me as my peculiar favourites, before God, angels, and men. 7. Christ is holy in his natures, offices, and works, and the author of all the holiness in his people. He is invariably true in himself, is infallibly true in his declarations, threatenings, and promises, and is the truth and substance of the ancient types and predictions; and he has the government of the church and world upon his shoulders; and the full and uncontrollable power of life and death, hell and Heaven, in his hand. 8. I have given you free access to my gospel, and opened your hearts to receive it; nor can either devils or men defeat my favour. And, though not eminent in light, grace, and holiness, ye are truly sincere in them, and have faithfully maintained my doctrines, laws, and institutions. 9. I will make even those Jewish seducers and their followers, who are devoted to the service and worship of Satan, humbly to confess their errors to you, and receive your instructions or censures, and acknowledge my peculiar favours to you. 10. Since, in obedience to my commands and after my example, you have patiently endured persecution for your adherence to my gospel truths, which, in the exercise of my patience, are continued in the world, particularly to such of them as were peculiarly opposed, I will infallibly preserve you from apostasy in the still more trying days of trouble and affliction, which will come for the trial of all professed Christians throughout the whole Roman empire. 11. But, as I will come quickly to deliver you and the rest of my people from all their enemies, see that ye, in dependence on my promised grace, hold fast, with the utmost care and constancy, zeal and holy resolution, the doctrine which ye have received; the work of grace wrought in you, or done by you; and your bold profession of my name; that none, through subtlety or violence, may ever pervert you, and rob you of the honours and eternal glories promised to the faithful, or even outshine you in any thing truly excellent. 12. Those who by faith overcome temptations and inward corruptions, shall be immovably fixed in the state of heavenly glory in the presence of God, and consecrated to his service; and shall be openly acknowledged and manifested as children and heirs of God, rightful citizens of the heavenly state, and as united to, justified in, and adopted by, me as their Head and Saviour. 14. Christ is truth itself, and infallibly true in his testimony concerning persons or things;—and, as the Origin, Author, Prince, and Ruler, of all creatures in Heaven and earth, he is able to perform whatever he promises or threatens. 15, 16. If, to my great dissatisfaction, you continue thus formally professing my name and truth, and disgracing it by your careless indifference, and want of hearty affection to and zeal for it, I will, with abhorrence, dissolve your church, and destroy you. 17, 18. Because, ye vainly imagine and boast that ye are rich in spiritual gifts and graces, and in every thing pertaining to life and godliness, and have no proper sense of your destitute, miserable, dangerous, ignorant, unrighteous and unholy, state and condition, I earnestly and compassionately beseech you, freely, but deliberately, to receive me and my fulness of grace and glory, as your enriching portion and treasure; my imputed righteousness and imparted holiness to cover and adorn you, and my Spirit and word to enlighten and render you wise unto salvation. 19, 20. As, in the most tender affection, I warn, reprove, and correct, all my favourites when they do amiss, see that you speedily improve my present rebukes, in an earnest and thorough repentance of your conduct, and a turning from it.—Behold, in amazing patience, condescension, and kindness, by the declarations and calls of my word, the strivings of my Spirit, and the engaging or awakening dispensations of my providence, I stand knocking at the door of your hearts; whoever by faith receives me, his soul shall be filled with my Spirit and grace, and he shall live, and hereafter enjoy the most delightful fellowship with, and communications from, me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Very different are the conditions of churches and Christians on earth. But, alas, most of them are generally corrupt. While a few are sincere, faithful, and thriving, many have a form of godliness without the power of it,—and many are altogether lukewarm, self-conceited, and insensible of their manifold spiritual maladies. But there is no case on earth to which Christ's character and word are not suitable. He takes notice of the faithfulness, the labours, the little strength, of such as are lively and upright. Kindly he affords them opportunities for the spread of the gospel, and of familiar fellowship with himself. Graciously he reduces their enemies to their honour, and preserves them in times of trial. And great are the heavenly glories, and priestly honours, and high the seats on his throne which at the last judgment, or in the eternal state, he bestows upon them. But detestable to him are hypocritical, lukewarm, and self-conceited, professors. Yea, they are in danger of the most indignant rejection, and most sudden and unexpected destruction. How transcendent is his mercy, so kindly, so earnestly, to call such to serious consideration and gospel repentance, and to offer them freely himself and his righteousness, his word, his Spirit and grace, and the most full, familiar, and eternal fellowship with himself and his Father. And wonderful is his forbearance, that he should so long continue knocking at the door of their heart by gospel calls, strivings of his Spirit, and dispensations of his providence.—My soul, while thou hast an ear, hear what the Spirit saith to the churches, and apply all faithfully to thyself.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices; and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, who was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory, and honour, and thanks, to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

10 The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying, 11 Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

CHAP. V.

Represents the purposes of God relative to his gospel church, as a book of seven volumes, wrapt up one within another, and each sealed; which, to John's grief, no creature could open; 1—4. (2) To his comfort, Christ takes it from his Father's hand to open it; 5—7. (3) Hereupon ministers, saints, and angels, ascribe high praises to him and his Father in their respective songs; 8—14.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne, and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came, and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And, when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints.

9 And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, and thou hast made us unto God a kingdom, priests, and we shall reign with him a thousand years and ever.

into heaven is opened, by Jesus' blood, for every one washed in it. Happy are they who, directed and drawn by the Holy Ghost, now enter by faith as a pledge and earnest of their personal admission hereafter! With what awful majesty and grandeur, new covenant faithfulness and grace towards his people, and just terribleness to his enemies, nay, with all-adorable perfections, does God manifest himself on his imperial throne! Yea, high are the honours to which his servants and people are exalted in connection with him; and profound their holy reverence, and cordial their adoration of him. Faithful ministers ought to be filled with spiritual knowledge; and should be prudent, vigilant, courageous, laborious, compassionate, and active, in the discharge of their office, and in the exercise of their gifts and graces, under the direction and assistance of the Holy Ghost. With diligent care should they lead the religion and worship of the churches, and unweariedly ascribe to God alone all the glories of Godhead, and of the works of creation, providence, and redemption.

CHAP. V. Ver. 5. Sprung from the tribe of Judah, Jesus Christ is like a lion for strength, courage, and eminence, to maintain and defend his own property and tear asunder his enemies; and he is the root of David, as in his divine nature, office, and character, he is the foundation and source of all the happiness and glory of his kingdom, typified by that of David. 6. His being represented as a slain lamb denotes him as an atoning priest, the sacrifice for the sins of his people, and the food of their souls. His seven horns represent his full authority and almighty power, as a King, to execute God's will, protecting and supporting his church, and pushing down her enemies. His seven eyes denote his infinite wisdom and knowledge, and his unmeasurable fulness of the Holy Ghost in all his gifts and graces, and his disposing of them to men, as the Prophet of his church. 8. Their harps denote the melody of their hearts and the charming notes of their praise. Their golden vials, cups, or censers, full of odours, are their prayers, proceeding from sanctified hearts, and acceptable to God through Christ's merits and intercession.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. God's being like the whitish transparent jasper denotes his infinite holiness and glory; the marvellously-mingled display of his perfections in his works of providence and grace; and his gracious regard to his people. His likeness to the bloody-coloured sardine denotes his justice and fiery indignation against his enemies. The greenish rainbow round about the throne represents the covenant of grace as ever in God's eye, and the perpetual rule of all that he does in the government of the world or the church. 4. The twenty four crowned elders represent the saints of the Old and New Testament enjoying fixed and familiar fellowship with God, by virtue of the covenant of grace; and they are called twenty-four, in allusion to the courses of the Hebrew priests; or the twelve patriarchs of the Jewish church, and twelve apostolic founders of the Christian. 5. The seven lamps of fire before the throne represent the Holy Ghost in the variety and perfection of his gifts and graces, which he distributes for enlightening, purifying, and warming, the souls of his ministers and people. 6. The clear sea of glass before the throne is Jesus' blood, in which all the redeemed worshippers must be washed from their iniquities. 6—8. The four living creatures, full of eyes before, behind, and within, denote gospel ministers, sent to preach the gospel to all the ends of the earth, remarkable for spiritual knowledge, prudence, and exact observation and attention to receive direction and influences from God, and to watch over and feed their people, and to look well into, and keep, their own hearts. Their having six wings each denotes their readiness, alacrity, and diligence, in their work. Their being likened to lions, oxen, men, eagles, denotes their undaunted boldness and courage; patience and fitness for labour; wisdom, prudence, and compassion; deep penetration into the mysteries of God; sublime sentiments and devotion; together with their eminent zeal, activity, and vigour, in the service of God. 10. The elders falling down and casting their crowns before the throne, denote their deep humility, holy reverence, and profound adoration: and their professing themselves unworthy of any honour in God's presence, and that all their honour proceeds from him.

slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down, and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

CHAP. VI.

Under the emblem of six seals opened, one after another, represents the state of the Christian church and Roman empire from A.D. 33 to 323. The first seal being opened, discovers the great success of the gospel and some Roman victories; 1, 2. The second, terrible persecutions and bloody wars; 3, 4. The third, scarcity of pure gospel ordinances and dreadful famines; 5, 6. The fourth, terrible persecutions and apostasy of Christians, and pestilences in the Roman empire; 7, 8. The fifth, the glorified martyrs crying for vengeance on their persecuting murderers, but required patiently to wait till an awfully murderous persecution by Dioclesian and his colleagues should be finished; 9—11. The sixth, the dreadful subversion of the heathen empire of Rome, and abolition of the heathen superstition and idolatry by Constantine; 12—17.

AND I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see.

2 And I saw, and, behold, a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And, when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—The events of providence, and the manifestations of God's favour, have and will take place in their orderly course. And it is a privilege and pleasure to have a proper acquaintance with the purposes of God here, to support us under our trials, till our happiness be perfected in eternal salvation. Very incapable are created beings to penetrate into them, and it is highly daring to pretend or attempt it. But comfortable is it to reflect that our promised Messiah has interposed between his Father and his church, and has applied himself to manifest and fulfil them. Transcendently wonderful and glorious is his person and character: at once infinitely majestic, awful, and mighty; and yet endearingly meek, and marked with an atoning death for our sins! Extensive are his power and authority, his wisdom and knowledge; and unbounded his fulness of the Holy Ghost, and his power of sending him to men. And ministers, saints, and even angels, delightfully triumph in, and praise him for, his work of redemption equally as his Father. God forbid that my soul should be silent, when so many are engaged in his praise.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. These opened seals represent the fate of the Roman empire, but chiefly of the Christian church; and, as they relate to events rather than periods, we must not imagine that what was signified by one was altogether finished, when that which was signified by the next following began. While the white horse and his rider, ver. 2, may have some respect to the Roman victories gained by Vespasian, about A.D. 70, and Trajan, A.D. 110, under the providential direction of Christ, they chiefly represent Christ, as, by the gospel, and the influences of the Holy Ghost attending it, conquering the nations to the obedience of faith, A.D. 33—66, and afterwards.—The red horse and his sword-bearing rider, ver. 4, represent the persecutions of the Christian church by the emperors Nero, Domitian, Trajan, and Adrian, between A.D. 66, and 138:

5 And, when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and, lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And, when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and, behold, a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And, when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held.

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind.

14 And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together: and every mountain and island were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

18 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

19 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

20 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

21 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

22 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

23 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

24 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

25 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

26 And the great city, which was built up, and strong, and high, fell, and was broken down, and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

and the terrible bloodshed in the Roman empire in the Jewish and Parthian and other wars. The black horse and his rider with a pair of balances, 5, 6, may represent the church as corrupted with manifold errors, through which, and the more apparently legal persecutions of Aurelius about A.D. 160, and Severus about 202, was occasioned no small scarcity of pure gospel ordinances; to punish which the Lord plagued the Roman empire with terrible famines during the reigns of the two Antonines and Severus, about A.D. 140, 162, 200.—The pale horse with death and hell for his riders, represent the church as awfully corrupted with error and apostasy, and her members dreadfully murdered in the persecutions by Maximin, 235, Valerian, 257, Aurelian, 272, and especially by Decius, 250, and the just punishment thereof on the Roman empire in the terrible tyranny of their emperors between 235 and 284, and their frequent murdering one of another;—the desolating ravages of the Allemans, Goths, Quadians, Parthians, and others,—and a terrible pestilence of fifteen years' continuance, which almost half desolated the whole Roman empire, about 252. And so accustomed were dogs, and other ravenous animals, to live on the unburied carcases, that they sometimes fell upon and destroyed the living. The fifth seal, 9—11, represents the souls of such as had been slain for their adherence to Christ's cause in the preceding persecutions, as enjoying rest and happiness through and with him in heaven; and as crying for vengeance on the Heathen persecuting empire, but required to wait till their fellow Christians should be also murdered in the terrible Dioclesian persecution, A.D. 302—312. The sixth seal, 12—17, represents the dreadful consternation, confusion, and fearful ruin of the heathen emperors and their armies, and of the idolatrous priests with their idolatries and superstitions, when Constantine the Great successfully warred against them, converted a Christian himself, abolished heathenism, and established the Christian religion in its stead. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Orderly arranged are all the events of Providence: and gospel ministers ought carefully to observe them, and call their hearers to do the same. Glorious are the spread and conquests of the gospel when Christ rides forth on it with his gracious influence. Great are the trials of faith and patience, even unto death, which his people are sometimes called to suffer for their faithful attachment to his truths and interests. But it is enough if he support and encourage them under their troubles, and at last, through his righteousness, render them partakers of the purity, peace, and honour, of the heavenly state.—While his church languishes in her spiritual, or even external, condition, persecuted, and bereaved of pure gospel ordinances, and of eminent ministers and Christians; by terrible wars, famines, pestilences, and a miserable dissolution of their long established civil constitutions, he punishes her persecutors. No place, no difference of rank, can screen from his just vengeance.—How dreadful then must be the last judgment, and the damnation of hell!

CHAP. VII. Ver. I. The holding in of the winds for a time denotes the restraint of the Arian, Macedonian, Pelagian, Eutychian, and other errors, which afterwards plagued the church; and the restraint of the fearful judgments that troubled and ruined the Roman empire, which took place under the trumpets; till many souls were gathered to Jesus, and established in the faith by the Holy Ghost, during the last fifteen years of Constantine's reign, A. D. 323—337. 2, 3. Christ is the sealed Angel, who seals his people. He has divine power and authority from his Father over angels and every other creature: he has all fullness of the spirit dwelling in him: He knows who are his, and can distinguish, preserve, and appropriate, them to himself as his peculiar people, and enable them boldly to profess his truths. 5—8. These sealed ones are represented as Hebrew tribes, because typified by the ancient Israelites, and begotten to God by the doctrine of the twelve apostles. 9—17. These verses represent the joy,

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God,

12 Saying, Amen: blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these who are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they who came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb, who is in the midst of the throne, shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters:
and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAP. VIII.

(1) The Seventh seal being opened, after a short silence seven angels prepare to give solemn alarms of approaching judgments,—answerable to Christ's intercession, and the prayers of his people; 1—6. (2) Four of the trumpets being sounded, are each followed with terrible judgments, till the Roman empire is quite destroyed, and the church fearfully defaced; 7—12. See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xv. (3) An angel denounces still greater miseries to come upon the earth, under the three following trumpets; 13.

AND, when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels who stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came, and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers

purity, safety, and happiness, of the souls of those that had suffered under the Heathen persecutions in the heavenly state, while no more than a short calm, succeeded by fearful storms of trouble, should take place on earth; and the joy, purity, safety, and happiness, of the successors of such as had been persecuted by Heathens and Papists during the thousand years reign of the saints; and, in fine, the complete joy, purity, safety, and happiness, of all the redeemed, after the last judgment, through all eternity.—As ch. xx. xxi. xxii. [See Introduction, chap. v.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—With tender care Jesus grants his people seasonable respite from trouble, lest they should utterly faint. For their sakes he often averts his judgments from the nations, in which they are permitted to live in peace and safety. And marvellously, even in the worst of times, he converts and preserves multitudes to own, honour, worship, and obey, him. The expected glories of heaven ought powerfully to animate the saints to faithfulness in his cause. There all their labours and sufferings shall be abundantly compensated; there shall they be perfectly free from sin and from misery; a fulness of happiness and joy, pure and glorious appearances, and immediate fellowship with Christ and his Father, shall cause them to triumph in his praise.—But, not to their care or free will, but to God alone be the glory! Their whole salvation is owing to Jehovah's grace, and to Jesus' merits: Even their best works are not acceptable to God, but through the blood of his Son.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. I. The half-hour's silence in heaven may either denote the awful expectation of what was to follow, or the short calm during the last fifteen years of Constantine's reign, A. D. 323—337. 2, 6. The sounding of the trumpets supposes a church to hear the alarm, and denotes threatening appearances of fearful calamities. 3, 4. Christ's being here represented as standing of all saints upon the golden altar, which was before the throne.

4^h And the smoke of the incense, which camewith the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels who had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and the third part of trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea: and the third part of the sea became blood:

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp; and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters:

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars: so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Wo, wo, wo, to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

at the golden altar, and offering up the prayers of his saints, imports, that it is only through his merits and intercession that the prayers of saints are heard, for their own protection, or the punishment of their implacable enemies. 5. His casting a censer full of burning coals from off the brazen altar upon the earth denotes his furious infliction of fearful, but just, judgments on the Roman empire, which had so corrupted the Christian faith, worship, and manners; and the terrible tempest which followed denotes the fearful and alarming calamities which his wrath produced. 7—12. The hail and fire mingled with the blood, cast upon the earth under the first trumpet, may denote the schism of the Donatists, and especially the prevalence of the Arian heresy, with the dreadful contentions, bloody persecutions, and destruction of souls, thereby produced in the church; the bloody wars between Constantine's sons and the different usurpers; and the barbarous ravages of the Goths and others in the empire, A.D. 338—379. The burning mountain cast into the sea, under the second trumpet, may denote the terrible contentions about precedence in the church, and the bloody persecutions raised by bishops against one another, which banished lively religion from among all ranks in the church; and the terrible ravages of the empire in France and Spain by the Goths and Vandals; the repeated ravages of Italy by the Goths, under Rhadagaisus and Alaric, and the burning of Rome by the latter, A.D. 380—412. The flaming star called wormwood, falling on, and poisoning the rivers and fountains, may denote the Nestorian and Eutychian errors, but especially the Pelagian heresy, corrupting the doctrines of Christ to the spiritual and eternal ruin of multitudes in the church; the ravages of the Huns under Attila, and the ravages of Italy by the Vandals, under Genseric in 455, and of the Goths, Heruli, and others, under Odoacer, who, about 476, twice took and plundered Rome, deposed Augustulus the last emperor, and established a kingdom of his own, A.D. 413—492. The darkening of the sun, moon, and stars, under the fourth trumpet, denotes the introduction of superstition, along with Pelagian and Semi-pelagian errors, till the scripture was quite obscured, and ordinances and ministers quite corrupted, in the church; and the terrible wars between Justinian the Greek emperor, and the Goths, and the fearful pestilences and famines that attended them, which issued in depriving Rome of all its remains of ancient power and authority, and rendering it subject to the exarchate of Ravenna, A.D. 493—568.

(1) Under the fifth trumpet, the Antichristian or Popish system arrives at its complete form and power in the western church, while Mahomet and his Saracens, or Ishmaelites, form and establish Mahometanism in the East, to the terrible destruction of the souls and bodies of men; 1—11. (2) Under the sixth trumpet, the Turks, after a long restraint near the river Euphrates, by Christ's permission, for about 490 years, terribly ravage the countries, and murder the wicked, nominal, but still impenitent, Christians, Papists and others; 12—21. Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xvii.

AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit, and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men who have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—The peaceful periods of the church on earth are ordinarily but very short. But infinite is the mercy that Jesus perpetually stands before his Father's throne, making intercession for his people, and offering up their prayers with acceptance, on the ground of his own finished and meritorious righteousness; and that, though the most fearful judgments be inflicted on nations and churches for the contempt of him, they are all regulated according to his and his people's requests. He loudly warns men before he severely strikes them. But, if once his wrath begin to burn, dreadful are his judgments, on both churches and states. And terrible, but still limited, storms and floods of his just vengeance come one after another. Never dare, my soul, to condemn or refuse him; never dare to live carnally and earthly; never dare to provoke him to jealousy. Am I stronger than he?

CHAP. IX. Ver 1. The falling star, to whom was given the key of the bottomless pit, may denote Boniface III. of Rome, who, by flattering Phocas, an almost infernal emperor, about A.D. 606, obtained an imperial edict, by which he was declared universal bishop of the church:—and Mahomet, who, about the same time, pretended a journey to heaven, to fetch thence his delusions;—both of whom were divinely empowered to plague mankind, and had the assistance of hell to promote their schemes. 2. The darkening smoke rising from hell imports the terrible ignorance, superstition, error, and wickedness, which then reigned among Christians, and made them an easy prey to the Popish and Mahometan delusions, which more and more darkened men's understandings, hid the light of God's truth from them, and destroyed every thing dear and valuable. 3—11. The locusts denote the Popish clergy, regular and secular, under Satan and the Pope as their head; tormenting men by their introduction of error, idolatry, superstition, and horrid profaneness; and, by their tyrannical oppressions of men's consciences, exaction of their wealth, excommunications, interdicts, persecutions, massacres, fearfully enslaving magistrates, murdering men's souls and bodies, and making even natural life a burden to them, during the time fixed by God, perhaps five twelfths of the New Testament period;—and denote the Saracen armies, who, chiefly mounted on horses and commanded by murderous generals, did, with great pride and fury, for about 150 years, and chiefly during the five summer months, spread ravage, desolation, and bloodshed, through 11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

20 And the rest of the men, which were not killed by these plagues, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood; which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk.

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

Represents a solemn preparation for the sounding of the seventh trumpet. (1) Jesus, as ever mindful of his covenant, and Governor of the world, presents a little open book of divine purposes; and, on his uttering his voice, seven thunders roar; but John is forbidden to write what they uttered; 1—4. (2) Jesus solemnly swears that the mysterious dispensations of providence, in time, should end with the seventh trumpet; 5—7. (3) John is commanded to take and digest in his mind the contents of the open much of Asia, the north of Africa, and south of Europe; there establishing their delusion and empire. [See INTRODUCTION, chap. iv. sect. xvi.] 13—19. The four angels bound by the Euphrates denote, not the Saracens, in whose history, after their former period of 150 years, reaching to A. D. 760, nothing answers to this vision, but the Turks, who, after pouring themselves into Persia, and places about the Euphrates, for 300 years, did, A. D. 1040—1080, form themselves into the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, all adjacent to that river. By their own mutual contentions, and by the war which the Popish Europeans carried on with them, for the recovery of Canaan, and by the invasion of the Jenghizian Tartars, they were indeed about 200 years divinely restrained from ravaging the countries of the corrupt Christians; but these restraints being removed, the Ottoman Turks, about A. D. 1281 or 1302, began their ravages and conquests on the Christians, and carried them on till A. D. 1672 or 1698, and with great fury and bloodshed established an extensive empire in Asia, Africa, and Europe; and their Mahometan delusion along with it. See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xvii. 20, 21. But the professed Christians, whether Papists, Greeks, or others, who survived these fearful ravages and murders of the Ottoman Turks, were not in the least reformed by these calamities from their idolatries, murders, frauds, and dreadful apostasy or uncleanness. [Introd. chap. iv. sect. xix.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—If the solemn warnings of Jesus and his faithful ministers be condemned, tremendous executions of his wrath may be expected. He can let loose the most numerous and well furnished armies of devils and of men, crafty and furious, to deform his church, or desolate her countries of hypocritical professors. And, according to his sovereign will and powerful intercession, he restrains, or lets them loose, when and where he pleases. How active, sagacious, and insinuating are the instruments of his wrath, and yet, how furious and destructive! But it is the comfort of the saints, that Jesus can, and will preserve them as his sealed ones, in the worst of times, as far as is for his glory, and their real benefit. And alas; how stupid and hardened their hearts, who, under the most terrible judgments of God, refuse to repent and reform, but grow worse and worse, till they be utterly destroyed by the vials of his wrath!

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire:

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and, when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And, when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel, whom I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth, lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel, who standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. Christ's being clothed with a cloud may denote his hidden glory, awful majesty, and the darkness of his providential dispensations. The rainbow on his head denotes his being ever mindful of his covenant of grace, and prizing it as his glorious crown. 2. The little book open signifies the revealed purposes of God concerning what was still to take place, especially under the seventh trumpet: His right foot on the sea and left foot on the earth represents Christ as sovereign Lord of the whole world, and that he would extend his kingdom of grace to Asia, Africa, Europe, and America, and the isles of the sea far and near. 3. His terrible voice denotes the majestic, awful, and silencing, nature of his word and providence. The voice of the seven thunders that followed seem to have uttered somewhat concerning the seven vials of his wrath upon the Antichristians,—which John is required to keep in his own mind, but not to write, as he was afterwards to have that matter more clearly represented to him. 9, 10. John's eating this open book denotes his considering, understanding, and being suitably affected with, its contents. It was sweet in his mouth, but bitter in his belly, (i. e.) He took pleasure in discerning the mind of God, his tender care of his church, and the final issue of her troubles; but it pained him to think what fearful distress and persecution she had to suffer in this world before her remarkable or final deliverance.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is the comfort of believers that, however dark and terrible the dispensations of Providence may be, Jesus is the great manager of them, and hath therein a constant and exact regard to his new covenant. He hath all power in heaven and on earth, and will, in his own time, render all the nations of the world his spiritual kingdom. When he appears in glorious majesty it is for the relief of his people, and destruction of their enemies; and the mysteries of providence, and predictions of scripture, shall soon be fulfilled to his glory, and their joy and triumph; yea, his kingdom on earth and in heaven shall be quickly established on the ruin of all opposition.—God's favourites must be content with what he pleases to reveal to them, and must affectionately meditate on it, and publish it as regularly called. Nevertheless, it cannot but be distressful to faithful ministers or Christians, to think of terrible persecutions coming on the church or ruinous destruction upon nations.

2 But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not: for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And, if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and, if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And, when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; other; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them who saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell; and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

15 And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty elders, who sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces and worshipped God, 17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, who art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldest destroy them who destroy the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

CHAP. XII.

And the two following, contain a new representation of the preservation of the Christian church, and of the rage and ruin of her enemies. Here (1) The gospel church is represented as a mother safely delivered, driven into the wilderness by the devil and his Heathen, or also Popish, assistants; 1—6. (2) Satan and his assistants are defeated by Jesus Christ, to the joy of the saints; but attended with danger to the inhabitants of the earth; 7—12. (3) Satan continues to persecute the church, and, by heresies, con-thrown into terrible convulsions and ruin, many Papists miserably destroyed, and others alarmed, and by the gospel converted to Christ, more marvellously than at the reformation. 15—19. All the nations of the world shall be generally converted to the Christian faith and made members of the gospel church; and great shall be her light, glory, and liberty, and abundant the access into her; but fearful and destructive the judgments which shall overtake her enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—In the very worst of times God will preserve for himself a church, answerable to the promises, and in some measure conformed to the rules, of his word. And, in separating the precious from the vile, he makes no account of mere nominal and carnal professors, but leaves them to the power of Antichristian or other deceivers. In evil times Christ's faithful ministers are often extremely few, but still sufficient to bear witness to his truths; and, however afflicted and mournful their outward condition may be, and however grieved their hearts, God will honour them to be instrumental in conveying his light and influence to his church, and will resent the injuries done them, and conform his Providence, in a great measure, to their warnings and prayers. Pretended Christians, oppressive idolaters, unclean monsters, and unreasonable and malicious murderers, tormented by their holy doctrines, exemplary lives, and fearful admonitions, may long oppress, and at last silence and slay them; but their extremity of trouble shall usher in their glorious deliverance. The triumphing of their wicked enemies shall be short, and divine vengeance, redoubled, shall overtake them in an hour that they think not. For, let enemies rage as they will, Jesus will at last vindicate his righteous cause and his suffering servants, and will bountifully reward them with the smiles of his providence and grace, reign before them gloriously, and cause them for ever to triumph in his praise. But by what fearful shakings of nations he ushers in the noted reformation of his church! Happy are they who, when his judgments are abroad in the earth, share his converting spirit, submit to his salvation and government, seek righteousness, and glorify his name!

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. The measuring of the temple, altar, and worshippers, with a reed, denotes that every thing in the gospel church ought to be precisely conformed to God's word, without any mixture of human inventions; and that preservation and reformation from Popery must be by a careful search, experience, and observance, of God's word. 2. The giving of the outer court to the Gentiles denotes that formal professors would be left to fall under the power of the idolatrous and wicked Papists.—The forty-two months, or one thousand two hundred and sixty days, time, times, and half a time, ver. 3, chap. xii. 6—14, and xiii. 5, denote the 1260 years continuance of the Antichristian power, i. e. from A. D. 606, when the Pope of Rome was by Phocas the emperor constituted the universal bishop of the Christian church, to A. D. 1866:—or from 756, when the Pope became a temporal prince, to 2016. 3. Christ's two witnesses denote the small but sufficient, succession of faithful ministers, who, from age to age, amidst grief and persecution, bear witness against the abominations of Popery. 4. They, like olive trees before God, are remarkably furnished with gifts and graces; and, being protected and delighted in by him, do minister as in his presence, and depending on his grace. 5, 6. God shall fearfully resent the injuries done them, fulfil the threatenings they denounce in his name, and grant their requests. 7—10. Whatever murder of Christ's witnesses may have been effected during the whole reign of Antichrist, or whatever particular persecutions of about three years and an half continuance have taken place, I suppose, the general slaughter here intended is yet future; in which I fear the Papists, who are like Sodomites in uncleanness, and Egyptians in cruel oppression of God's people, will, partly by drawing men off from the doctrines of the gospel, and partly by murderous wars and persecutions, leave scarcely any shadow of proper opposition to their abominations in Europe, or the countries thereto belonging. 11—13. But scarcely shall the Antichristians, to their great joy, have apparently effected the ruin of Christ's witnesses when God, by his word and Spirit, shall strangely revive, animate, and encourage, them, and, under his special protection, exalt them to eminent dignity, power, and prosperity;—while, about the very time of the sounding of the seventh trumpet, the Popish state shall be

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. The gospel church has Christ, and his righteousness for her robe; and is irradiated with the light of truth, comfort, and holiness. She is elevated above the obscure light of Mosaic rites and ceremonies, and treads with holy indifference upon the enjoyments of this world; and all her light of knowledge and grace is communicated by means of, and according to, the doctrine of the twelve apostles. 2. Her travailing in birth denotes her strong groanings, eager desires, wrestling prayers, and indefatigable labours, under sharp persecutions, to bring forth converts, in whom Christ, in his doctrine and image, may be formed. 3. 4. The red dragon is the devil, acting in and by the power of the persecuting Heathen empire of Rome, which, after seven forms of government, was split into ten kingdoms; or by the Popish power, as extended over these ten kingdoms; by which multitudes of ministers were either murdered or seduced from the faith. 5. Her man-child may have some respect to Constantine, whom Providence marvellously advanced to the imperial throne, A. D. 312, and directed to abolish Heathenism; but chiefly denotes a succession of faithful believers, who, notwithstanding all the malicious designs and attempts of the devil and his instruments, are brought forth, and wonderfully protected and honoured by God. 6. 14. The Wilderness into which the church fled is that corrupt or concealed state in which true and practical religion, and truly faithful professors, continued all along from Constantine's time to the Reformation; or from the rise of Antichrist, about A. D. 606. 7. 8. The defeat and ejection of the dragon and his angels may denote the abolition of Heathen idolatry, and ruin of the Heathen's persecuting power by Constantine; if not also the abolition of Popery by many Protestant powers, at the Reformation. 12. 13. 15. The dragon's rage at, and persecution of, the woman, and casting a flood out of his mouth to destroy her, may denote the devil's exerting himself to the utmost to destroy the church by the Arian, Pelagian, and other heresies, the Donatist schism, and the persecutions which attended them; by the Julian persecution, and the ravages of the Goths, Vandals, and others, in the Christian countries; or, also, by the decrees, persecutions, wars, massacres, and missionaries, of the Papists, after the Reformation, for the destruction of the Protestant cause. 16. Corrupt Ecclesiastics in their councils, and otherwise, defended 12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman who brought forth the man-child.

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness into her place; where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, who keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

CHAP. XIII.

(1) To figure out the Papal or Antichristian power in its succession to the power and mischievousness of the persecuting Heathen empire of Rome, it is compared to a seven headed and ten-horned leopard, casting forth blasphemies, and tearing the saints; 1—10. (2) To figure out their pretences to conformity with Christ in holiness, humility, and usefulness, it is likened, in its spiritual and temporal, or regular and secular, clerical, jurisdiction, to a two-horned, but wonder-working and persecuting, lamb; 11—18. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xix.]

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads, as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

the truths of the gospel against the Arian, Pelagian, Eutychian, and other heresies; the Goths, Vandals, and other ravaging tribes diverted the Arian persecutors, and at last became professed Christians themselves; and, at the Reformation, many secular princes, and others, who had no real religion, took part with the reformers, and protected them from the Papal fury.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Glorious is the gospel church when she appears lifted above worldly principles and customs, when she shines in Jesus' imputed righteousness and implanted grace, and is adorned with the pure doctrines of the gospel. By earnest desires, prayers, and labours, she then brings forth children to God through Christ. With great craft, fury, and diligence, Satan and his instruments exert themselves, to corrupt or destroy the church, and hinder the conversion of sinners, or to persecute and murder them whenever they appear serious. And, if their plots be defeated, they become the more furious and active. But, let them plot, fight, and rage, as they will, Christ will restrain, and at last conquer, them; and, notwithstanding the most fearful and lasting afflictions, will protect and preserve his faithful servants and people; and, in his time, render them victorious and triumphant. By faith in his atoning blood, as the only ground of their justification, and by faithfully contending, even unto death, for his injured truths, they shall overcome at last.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. This beast rising out of the sea denotes its origin to be from hell, and from the tumultuous state of the nations, once subject to the Roman power. Its having seven heads and ten crowned horns denotes its possessing the power of the Roman state, and ruling over the ten kingdoms formed out of that ruined empire. 2. Its likeness to a leopard, bear, and lion, imports that all the cruelty, activity, subtilty, and furious power, of the Greek, Persian, and Chaldean, empire would meet in the Papal jurisdiction. Its receiving the power, seat, and authority, of the dragon signifies that, being seated at Rome, the power of Heathen emperors, and of the devil, would be devolved on the Pope and his assistants. 3. The healing of the wounded head may denote the Pope's restoring jurisdiction to Rome, by his becoming a civil prince; the erection of the German empire instead of the Roman; or the apostasy of the Protestants to 4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies: and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth, and them who dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he doth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men;

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six.

CHAP. XIV.

To comfort the church amidst her melancholy views of her condition under the reign of Antichrist, (1) 144,000 are represented as faithfully adhering to Christ and his truths in that period, and praising God for their preservation from the general corruption; 1—5. (2) While three angels prepare the way for Antichrist's ruin; one by preaching the gospel, a second by proclaiming the downfall of Popery, and a third by denouncing terrible vengeance on its adherents; the Holy Ghost attests the happiness of all that die in Christ, martyrs or others; 6—13. (3) By the emblems of harvest corn reaped, and vine clusters gathered and trodden, by Christ, is represented the sudden and most terrible destruction of the Papists; 14—20. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xix.]

AND I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Satan and his instruments will turn themselves into very different forms, that their abominable projects may the more easily succeed. The meekness of the lamb, and fury of a leopard, lion, bear, and dragon, are united, to pervert and ruin the church. By the most horrid blasphemies, pretended or magical wonders, uncontrolled authority, and dreadful severity, they promote their unrighteous cause. And marvellous is their success, and extensive their power. By allurements or terrors multitudes are deluded into the grossest absurdities and most damnable doctrines and practices. None, but those chosen by God and redeemed by Christ, are secured from it. These, indeed, are often distressed by wars, persecutions, and martyrdom; but cannot be fully perverted or finally ruined. And it is the great support of their faith and patience that God has fixed a time for their deliverance and the downfall of their enemies, in which every injury done them shall be fully repaid.—Though I cannot fix the times, which the Father has put in his own power, let my faith and patience have their perfect work! Patient waiting and earnest watching are far better than presumptuous curiosity.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. Zion may either denote heaven, or the true church on earth. The saints being marked with God's name in their foreheads imports their being sealed and set apart as his property, and for his service; and their making an open and honourable profession of him and his gospel, attended with an answerable holiness of life. 4, 5. They were Virgins, i. e. they had not defiled themselves with the whorish idolatries and other abominations of the tempting Antichristians; but, as wholly redeemed from sins and errors, sanctified by, and consecrated to, God, and as a pledge of far greater multitudes afterward, had faithfully and uprightly followed and adhered to Jesus Christ and his cause. 6—13. The witnesses of Christ, especially at the Reformation, plainly and powerfully preached the gospel, and warned men of the approaching ruin of the Papacy, and of the damnable nature of cleaving to it in opposition to the light of the gospel, which then shone forth; and taught that union to Christ by faith, and fellowship with him, only and effectually secured an happiness, an immediate happiness, after death; and that believers' good works did Popery. 4. In their obedience to the arbitrary, idolatrous, and other wicked decrees of Popes and their councils, men practically worship the devil and the old Heathen idols. 5, 6. Its speaking great things and blasphemies includes all the Papal boasts of power, holiness, merits; all their usurpation of power over magistrates, angels, and saints departed; over the laws and ordinances of God; and over the person and offices of Christ. 7, 8. While Satan stirred up the Popes and their agents to persecute, rob, and murder, the followers of Christ, almost all the inhabitants of Europe submitted to their authority; 10. But, after they have persecuted and murdered the saints for many ages, till their faith is fully tried, and almost worn out, the judgments of God, answerable to their crimes, shall overtake them. 11. The earth, out of which this beast arose, denotes a carnal and worldly temper, or the bottomless pit. Its likeness to a lamb, but speaking as a dragon, imports that, notwithstanding the Pope's and Papalines' high pretences to the likeness of Christ in holiness and meekness, their injunctions and curses are cruel, bloody, and ruinous. 12. By excommunications and persecutions, and through the assistance of secular powers, Popes and their clergy make their subjects do what they please. 13, 14. By pretended and devilish miracles they terrify men into an implicit obedience to the clergy, and a ready compliance with their errors, idolatries, and superstitions. 15—17. They denied not only their pardons and indulgencies, but even the natural or civil rights of lodging, dwelling, or trade, to all that did not, in practice or profession, plainly manifest themselves devoted to their power and delusions. 18. The number of the beast being 666, may hint that the Romish doctrines, laws, and offices, have apparently a marvellous connection, but are no way founded on the doctrine of the twelve apostles. It is found in the Greek ΛΑΤΙΝΟΣ, and the Hebrew רומיני; and points to the Latin or Romish church, and the place of its peculiar residence. About A. D. 666, it is said, Pope Vitalian marked the Papal subjects with the use of the Latin or Romish tongue. From the time when John had his vision to the Pope's becoming a civil, as well as an ecclesiastical, head, and so a complete Antichrist, A. D. 756, or some years after, when he began to exercise his temporal jurisdiction, might be precisely 666 years.

gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone, in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and, behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, who had power over fire; and not merit heaven, but in it received a gracious reward. 14—20. These verses relate to future events, and import that, whenever the Antichristians shall have filled up the measure of their iniquities, Christ and his instruments shall, in answer to the prayers of his ministers and people, cut them off in the most terrible manner, perhaps deluging the Papal territories in Italy, of 200 miles length, with torrents of their blood.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—The cause of Jesus Christ and his faithful followers will triumph at last. And glorious is the appearance of his saints, when they answer their character in qualities and works, and have Christ among them owning and honouring them. Happy they when marked with the Father's Spirit and image; purified from idolatry and superstition; weaned from the world; and made sincere and upright in their profession of the pure doctrines of the gospel; and steady in their imitation of, and obedience to, Christ. Their consciences are now freed from guilt and condemnation, through faith in his righteousness; and when patience hath had her perfect work, and their prescribed course of holiness is finished, death shall only usher them into the heavenly mansions, to receive their everlasting, but gracious, rewards. What an inestimable mercy was the pure preaching of the gospel at the Reformation, after so long and heavy a night of Popish darkness; and what an humbling stroke to cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

20 And the wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horse-bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

CHAP. XV.

Contains the preparation for Antichrist's ruin. (1) The appearance of the appointed ministers of God's destructive vengeance is attended with great joy among the saints in heaven and on earth, and solemn thanksgivings to God; 1—4. (2) Their coming forth out of the temple, and receiving vials full of wrath from gospel ministers, are attended with irrevocable manifestations of divine wrath, and the judicial stupidity of the Antichristians under them; 5—8.

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous; seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God.

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints.

4 Who shall not fear thee, O LORD, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials, full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

the Antichristian interest, and sure prelude of its downfall! For certain, dreadful, but righteous and gradual, punishment shall overtake the obstinate abettors of it in this world, much more in hell.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1, 2. The sea of glass mingled with fire is the infinitely pure and efficacious righteousness of Christ, by which he appeased the fiery resentments of Divine justice, and through which the influences of the Holy Ghost are conveyed, and the perfections and favours of God marvellously discovered; and on which, as their foundation, the saints in heaven and earth stand with complete acceptance, confidence, and triumph, before God. 6. These messengers of God's vengeance appear arrayed as high priests, to denote the sanctity of their character, and their wrathful ministrations, in answer from God to the prayers of his people. 7. The receiving their vials filled from the first, or lion-like living creature, imports that love to the gospel influences them, and that their work fulfils the threatenings of God's word declared by ministers. 8. The smoke filling the temple may denote the awful and confounding judgments of God, obstructing all prayers for the Antichristians, and excluding them from all merciful entrance into his church.

CHAP. XVI.

Represents the pouring out the seven vials of God's destructive vengeance upon Antichrist: the FIRST upon the EARTH, producing grievous sores; 1, 2: the SECOND on the SEA, turning it into blood, and killing the fish; 3: the THIRD on the RIVERS and FOUNTAINS, rendering the waters blood, to punish the Popish persecutions and murders; 4—7: the FOURTH upon the SUN, causing him to scorch men with his heat; 8, 9: the FIFTH on Antichrist's SEAT, darkening his kingdom and tormenting his subjects; 10, 11: the SIXTH on the river EUPHRATES, followed by the ruinous battle of Armageddon; 12—16: and the SEVENTH into the AIR, the seat of Satan's power, issuing in the universal and complete destruction of all Antichristian enemies and opposition, 17—21. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xix.]

AND I heard ^aa great voice out of the temple, saying to the ^bseven angels, ^cGo your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

² And the first went, and poured out his vial ^dupon the earth; ^eand there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men ^fwho had the mark of the beast, and ^gupon them which worshipped his image.

³ And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

⁶ For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.

⁷ And I heard ^kanother out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

⁸ And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

¹¹ And blasphemed the God of heaven, immense and ever gracious presence of God, accepted in Jesus' imputed righteousness, and, through faith, victorious over all their spiritual enemies. Sweetly and solemnly they sing of mercy and judgment, and of the wonderful events of providence and grace, to the honour of Jehovah and his Son.—What adorable perfections delightfully shine forth in his nature and conduct. Happy will be that period when all nations shall be converted to and worship him; and when his judgments shall be fully manifested in the complete abolition of Popish and Mahometan delusions! Fixed is God's decree of their ruin; and fearful, but infallible the execution. Yea, all the proper instruments shall stand ready to accomplish it in his time.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Already the Antichristians have had fearful earnest of these vials of Divine wrath poured out upon them. From A. D. 713 to 734, the Mahometan Saracens poured themselves into Spain, and the south of France, rendering much of those countries a comparative desert. From A. D. 830 to 980 the contentions among the descendants of Charles the Great, emperor of Germany and king of France, and the ravages of the Hungarians in Italy and Sicily, deluged those countries with human blood. From A. D. 1090 to 1290 not a few millions were cut off, and most of Europe reduced to the brink of ruin by the sacred, or rather Papal, war for the recovery of Canaan from the Mahometan Seljukian Turks and Saracens. From 1200 to 1370 the contentions of the Guelphs and Gibellines, or Pope's and Emperor's parties, rendered Italy and Germany a scene of human carnage and blood. From 1370 to 1447 the repeated schisms of the Popes, and the oppression of the Bohemians, occasioned terrible wars in Spain, France, Germany, and Italy. Between 1486 and 1534 a sweating sickness, and other pestilential disorders, carried off prodigious multitudes in England, Germany, and France. From about 1370 to 1698 the Ottoman Turks proved a terrible scourge to the Papists in Hungary, Poland, Italy, Germany, Mediterranean isles, &c. But nothing has more tormented the Pope and his adherents, or more shaken their dominion, than the revolt of almost half their subjects in the Protestant Reformation, between A. D. 1517 and 1570, and the legal establishment thereof by the edict of Nantz, 1598, and treaty of Westphalia, 1648, &c. Nevertheless, the plagues chiefly intended in this chapter seem all to be still future, and will perhaps happen during the thirty years of fearful calamities, by which the glorious Millennium will probably be introduced. Without daring to be positive, under the first vial poured on the earth I expect the infallibility and supremacy of the Pope, the authority of traditions, the doctrine of human merits, and other earthly and carnal foundations of Popery;—or the Pope's power in because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds.

¹⁴ For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, ^uto gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

¹⁷ And the seventh angel poured out his vial ^winto the air; and ^xthere came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, ^yIt is done.

¹⁸ And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

the inland countries of Germany, Poland, and Hungary, will, to his and his votaries' shame and vexation, be quite overturned. Under the second, poured into the sea, v. 3. I expect the credit of the Romish religion will be remarkably blasted, and its damnable nature clearly manifested, or the maritime countries of Portugal, Spain, and Naples, plagued with famine, pestilence, earthquakes, and war. Under the third, poured on the rivers and fountains, v. 4—7, I expect the wickedness and deceit of the Popish doctors, and their defences of their religion, will be clearly exposed, their cardinals, bishops, priests, and monks, proved murderers of souls, and many of them cut off by untimely deaths; or the well watered countries of Switzerland, north of Italy, and south of France, where the Waldenses, Protestants, or others, were murdered for the sake of Christ, will be deluged with Antichristian blood. Under the fourth, poured on the sun, v. 8, 9, I hope that the instructive light and spiritual warmth of the gospel will draw off the German emperor, French king, or others, who have long been the Papists' principal glory and support, to the Protestant side; and perhaps the natural sun may produce some very destructive plague. Under the fifth, poured on the seat of Antichrist, v. 10, 11, I expect the frame of the Papal kingdom will be broken to pieces, and filled with disorder and confusion; the whole system of Popery be made to appear abominable and devilish, and Rome itself be turned into an horrible desert;—which will occasion terrible grief, pain, and blasphemy, among the Papists, chiefly those who have enriched themselves by her idolatry and superstition. Under the sixth, poured into the river Euphrates, v. 12—16, I expect Mahometism will be abolished, and the conversion of the Eastern nations begun; the Papists and their adherents, assisted by their clerical missionaries, receive a terrible defeat at the battle of Armageddon; the Pope's proper share of Italy be almost covered with carcasses, the rivers swelled with blood, the Protestant victories enriched with the spoil, and many, alarmed by the event, turned to the Lord. Under the seventh, poured into the air, v. 17—21, I expect the last remains of the Popish doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, monasteries and dignities, will be utterly abolished, and the obstinate adherents thereto, who had fled to the isles of Malta, Sicily, &c. be cut off by the fearful vengeance of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Gradual, but terrible and righteous, are the judgments of God, which shall in due time be executed upon Popish idolaters and persecutors, and their ungodly companions in wickedness. Actuated by unclean, diabolical, spirits, and instigated by false teachers, they may for a little time gather themselves to contend with the Almighty Redeemer, obstinately persist in their abominable courses, and blaspheme God, as if he injured them. But quickly the vials of his wrath shall be poured out upon them, answerable to their guilt, till they be utterly and irrecoverably ruined. And unexpected, fearful, extensive, sudden, and destructive, shall be their punishment. Happy are they who shall be found clothed with Jesus' imputed righteousness, adorned with his grace, and watchfully preparing to meet him! While others howl and blaspheme for vexation of spirit, these shall rejoice in the Lord, and applaud the truly righteous and faithful executions of his wrath.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. I will give you an account of her sins, and of God's righteous procedure in condemning and punishing her. The Papal state at Rome is called a Whore, because of their treacherous apostasy from Christ and his Father to idolatry and every other wickedness, while they pretend to be the spouse or church of Christ. Her sitting on many waters denotes her ruling over many nations with magnificent pomp, power, luxury, and other allurements. 2. The wine of her fornication includes all the Popish arts and allurements, honours, preferments, external pomp of habits, processions, and worship, pretended miracles, dispensations, pardons, and other specious motives, by which men are drawn into her idolatrous principles and practices. 3. Her being in the wilderness may denote her tyranny over the poor afflicted followers of Christ. The scarlet-coloured beast, full of the names of blasphemy, and having seven heads and ten horns, is the Roman empire, as Papal, marked with imperial dignity, and with bloody and persecuting cruelty; pretending infallibility and unlimited supremacy; promoting idolatry and error; and which, after seven different forms of civil government, was divided into ten different kingdoms. 4. Her being clothed with purple and scarlet, and decked with gold, precious stones, and pearls, points out her Popes and Cardinals as assuming imperial authority, and stained with the blood of saints; and the wealth, grandeur, and power, of her palaces, churches, and monasteries. Her golden cup full of abominations and filthiness of fornication denotes her whole system of abominable errors, idolatries, and superstitions, varnished over with bold pretences to miracles, pardons, and indulgences, and to her being the only true church, and the like. 5. It is easy to observe that she is formed by the most shocking multitude of errors and crimes, invented and carried on in the most deep, secret, and unsearchable, methods, even amidst the highest pretences of being the catholic and only church of Christ: and that, possessed of the most extensive jurisdiction, and notorious for idolatry, pride, luxury, and oppression, she is the parent, ringleader, supporter, and nourisher, of idolatry, superstition, error, uncleanness, and every other abominable crime. 6. I was astonished at her grandeur, cruelty, and dreadful wickedness, and at the patience of God in suffering her so long to tyrannize over his beloved people. 8. The beast, or Roman empire, has, under the Popes, a form of government different from all its ancient ones, but which

and "they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and, when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, who have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest, is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAP. XVIII.

(1) A mighty and glorious angel proclaims the final fall and utter ruin of Rome, and of the Papal state, on account of her corrupting the nations with apostasy, idolatry, luxury, and unlawful retains their whole authority, power, wealth, idolatry, persecuting cruelty, and other wickedness;—and though this Papal form hath its origin from diabolic craft and influence, and leads men into everlasting damnation, yet it is admired, and implicitly submitted to, by all within its reach, except the preserved elect of God. 9, 10. The seven heads of the beast point at the seven mountains on which Rome was built, and the seven forms of its government by kings, consuls, dictators, decrevirs, military tribunes, emperors, Heathen and Christian, and Gothic kings, which took place before the establishment of the Papal authority.

11. Though the Pope's civil power may, in respect of time, be called the eighth, yet, as it succeeds to the Heathen imperial authority, and is an idolatrous power, it is the seventh and last idolatrous form of government, comprehending all the power and wickedness of the six preceding. 12—14. The ten horns are the ten or several kingdoms into which the western empire of Rome was divided when the Papal power was established, all of which submitted to the Popish abominations, and exerted all their power to establish them, and force men to submit to them; and under the pontifical influence, to their own ruin, violently set themselves against Christ, to oppose and subvert his doctrines, institutions, cause, interests, and people. 16, 17. In God's time these kingdoms shall withdraw their subjection and support from the Papal state, and, by wars, statutes, and the like, shall concur to destroy it; for it is only for a limited time that, by his overruling their sinful inclinations, he will, for the fulfilment of his purposes and predictions, permit them, under the instigation of Satan, to yield up their strength, riches, and authority, to promote the Papal power, idolatries, superstitions, and errors.

18. The Antichristian power, civil and ecclesiastical, is to be seated in the hand of Popes and Cardinals, and raised to its height in the city of Rome, which is at present the residence of the Roman emperors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—God takes pleasure to instruct and comfort his faithful servants. And he can exactly describe the Antichristian Papacy, with all its mysteriousness, or any thing else, long before it exists, and can make the distresses and plagues of his church confirmations of his word, on which she is built. Graceless church members often run the most fearful lengths in wickedness and cruelty, when left to themselves; yea, are active in seducing all around them. And multitudes, to their own temporal and eternal ruin, readily run after, and yield themselves to, the worst deceivers, in the most furious opposition to Christ and his cause. But great is the mercy that he, who has all power in heaven and earth, takes part with his persecuted people, animates their faith and patience, emboldens them in their holy profession, and renders them faithful in adherence to himself. Quickly will he conquer all their enemies; and make the most zealous supporters of error, idolatry, and superstition, to desert, hate, and oppose them, and to strip the seducers of their ill-gotten power and wealth, and punish them answerably to their crimes.

traffic; 1—3. (2) A voice from heaven admonishes the people of God to forsake her communion, lest, partaking of her sins, they should also partake of her fearful and unexpected plagues; 4—8. AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird."

3 "For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies."

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues:"

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 "Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double."

7 "How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

8 "Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the LORD God who judgeth her."

9 And "the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning,"

12 "The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble;

13 "And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men."

14 "And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all."

15 "The merchants of these things, who were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,"

16 And saying, "Alas, alas, that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!"

17 For "in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every ship-master, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off,"

18 And cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, "What city is like unto this great city!"

19 "And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas, that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate."

20 "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her."

21 "And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all."

22 "And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee: and no craftsman, of whatever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee;

23 "And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived."

24 "And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth."

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1—3. To punish her for corrupting the nations with her idolatry, and other wickedness, and enriching her clergy with her traffic in divine things, the Papal state shall be utterly destroyed, and exposed as a diabolical system of uncleanness, murder, and every other shocking abomination; and Rome shall be turned into a desolate and frightful heap of rubbish. 4—6. As, at the Reformation, multitudes revolted from Popery, to the advantage of their souls and their countries, so hereafter the faithful followers of Christ ought, and shall break off every connection with it, and shall be God's instruments for ruining its power. 7, 8. The miseries of the obstinate Papists shall be dreadful, answerable to their former ambition, pride, luxury, and wealth. 11, 12, 15. Merchants may denote, not only such as trade in the commodities of life, but also the Romish clergy, who enrich themselves in selling spiritual offices, ordinances, pardons, deliverance from purgatory, and eternal happiness, to their deluded votaries.—The things mentioned, ver. 11—13, 22, 23, may either relate to the Popish worship, to their reliques, pardons, indulgences, to their costly images, rich furniture of churches and chapels, and rich dresses for their images and priests, the incense used at their altars, their use of musical instruments in their worship, their burning of lamps before their altars and images;—or they may in general denote that Rome shall be so utterly ruined, that nothing valuable or desirable shall be left in it. 20, 24. The Papists' persecution of the oracles and saints of God will be especially regarded in and shall aggravate their ruin. 21—23. In the most sudden and terrible manner God will utterly, and without any possibility of recovery, destroy Rome and all her Antichristian influence.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Sin brings the most fearful disgrace and misery upon wicked persons and societies at last; and, as there is no opportunity of punishing societies in the other world, their sins must overtake them in this. Earthly grandeur, pleasure, luxury, power, and wealth, often issue in, and render our misery more intolerable: and God forces men to mourn under his judgments who refused to mourn for their sins. Let wickedness be varnished over with pretences to sanctity and kindness as it will, or have been committed ever so long ago, God will mark it, and, in his time, fearfully punish it with righteous judgments. Superstition, idolatry, lewdness, luxury, merchandize in spiritual things, in men's souls or bodies, allurements to apostasy from God, and particularly cruel persecution of his saints and servants, will at last issue in everlasting confusion and irretrievable misery.—With conscientious zeal and abhorrence ought all true Christians to hasten from the spiritual fellowship of Antichristian churches or societies, that their own sin and temporal ruin may be prevented. And with holy joy and triumph ought all the people of God to be-

CHAP. XIX.

(1) Animated by the call of God, the saints in heaven and on earth triumph and praise him for his righteous judgments upon the Papal state, and for their own and others' honourable espousals to Christ, particularly in the then general conversion of Jews and Gentiles to him; 1—8. (2) An angel pronounces those who are effectually called, particularly in the Millennial period, to be blessed; and refuses the adoration which John offered him; 9, 10. (3) Jesus Christ and his people are represented as marching on white horses to make war against Antichrist and his armies, which are utterly and miserably destroyed; 11—21.

which the church amazingly flourishes and gloriously reigns in spiritual fellowship with Christ on earth; 1—6. (2) Being after this loosed from his restraint, Satan deceives the nations, and unites them in a most furious attempt to ruin the church: but they are miserably and irretrievably overthrown; 7—10. (3) Hereupon Christ appears to the last judgment, gathers before him the quick and the dead, and, as from opened books of account, exactly judges the world, and shuts up wicked devils and men in hell, to be tormented for ever; 11—15.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years:

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and who had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And, when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God: and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

CHAP. XXI.

(1) Under the figure of a new heaven, a new earth, and a new Jerusalem, where God dwells, banishes sorrows, and bestows all happiness, is represented the blessed state of the church in her millennial, but especially her heavenly state; in opposition to the doleful state of the wicked; 1—8. (2) It is particularly represented in its heavenly original, glory, security, bright ornaments, high walls, twelve gates, twelve foundations, four-square form, golden houses and streets, divine light and comfort, constant, open, and abundant, access, honourable furniture, and holy inhabitants; 9—27.

AND I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

2 And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

4 And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, authority, power, or activity, to make head against Christ and his cause. 8—10. Perhaps Gog and Magog may here include the wicked every where in the world, instigated by Satan to embolden their spirits, and combine in a furious and desperate attack upon the church, which shall issue in a manner no less dreadful than the last efforts of Antichrist. 11. The opening of the books, and judging men according to them, denotes that, in the last judgment, the infinite and all-observing knowledge and exact remembrance of God, the extensive notice and exact recordings of men's own consciences, and the whole contents of God's revelations and purposes, will be clearly manifested, and all men righteously judged exactly answerable thereto. 13, 14. By hell may be understood the state of separate spirits; and death and hell are cast into the lake of fire, when the bodies and souls of the wicked are shut up in hell, and there is no vestige of sin or misery left any where else in the creation of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Glorious is the period of light, life, liberty, love, peace, purity, joy, and triumph, which the church of true believers shall enjoy even on earth, after a long, long night of darkness, trouble, and oppression. When Satan is restrained by Christ, and the Holy Ghost poured out, with what power, spirituality, and splendour shall the cause of Christ revive! They, who in evil times had faithfully adhered to the truth, shall, in their persons, or in the numerous multitudes of their converted successors, live and reign under the protection and smiles of their Redeemer. But no happiness on earth is unmoveable or everlasting. Satan and his wicked instruments will always disturb the beloved saints and city of the Lord, to their utmost; but quickly shall their most furious and joint attacks issue in their universal and everlasting destruction. In what a public and awful manner the general resurrection and last judgment will shut up the scenes of time! How great and glorious the Judge! how tremendous the tribunal! how numerous and serious the pannels! how exact the trial! Just, but awful and irrevocable, shall be the decisions, and infinitely important and lasting the execution.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. Sea denotes tumultuous passions, mischievous enemies,

CHAP. XX. Ver. 2—7. Whether the millennium or THOUSAND YEARS here mentioned denotes precisely a thousand of our years, or only many years, as the term thousand is taken, Deut. i. 11; vii. 9; & xxxii. 30; Psal. xc. 4; xci. 7; & cv. 8; Eccl. vi. 6; Isa. xxx. 17; & lx. 22; 2 Pet. iii. 8; I cannot determine. The glory and happiness of this thousand years' reign of the saints is to be understood, not literally, but spiritually and figuratively, according to the common style of the book. It could not consist with the happiness of the saints, to leave the heavenly mansions, and live in bodies needing meat and drink; nor, if their bodies were raised spiritual and incorruptible, would they need any such thing; and in vain would Satan instigate the wicked to war against, and cut off, spiritual and incorruptible bodies. The dead in Christ are also represented as all rising together at the last day. And a proper resurrection is never in scripture represented as a reviving or living again of the soul, but of the body. The resurrection of the martyrs' and confessors' souls here spoken of must therefore mean, not the resurrection of these deceased persons, but the remarkable reformation, deliverance, comfort, and activity, of the church in their successors. Rom. xi. 15; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14; Psal. lxxxv. 6; Hos. vi. 2, 3; Zech. x. 1.—And as Elijah is represented as living in John Baptist, Matth. xi. 14; & xvii. 12; Luke i. 17; and Antichristian Rome is called in this book Sodom, Egypt, and Babylon, on account of her likeness to them in luxury, cruelty, pride, and idolatry; ch. xi. 8; xiv. 8; xvi. 19; xvii. 5; & xviii. 2, 21; so the ancient martyrs will live in the Christians of this period, being united to the same head, members of the same body, and of the same temper, faith, patience, zeal, and fortitude, and professing the same gospel truths. And this restoration of the church to this peaceable and glorious state, after a long death under the reign of Antichrist, in which multitudes of Jews and Gentiles shall be converted to Christ, and shall enjoy much spiritual, delightful, and honourable fellowship with Christ and with one another, and have the governing power in the earth, is called the first resurrection, as it is a figure and pledge of the general resurrection of the saints to eternal life at the last day. The wicked will not live again till the end of the thousand years, that is, they will be reduced to the same condition in which Christ's slain witnesses were a little before, ch. xi. 7—9, having no neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away.

5 And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write; for these words are true and faithful.

6 And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

7 He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake, which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

11 Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.

13 On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth four-square, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

and distressing calamities. 6. The fountain of the water of life denotes abundant and never-failing satisfaction in the familiar and immediate enjoyment of God in Christ, and all the blessings of the new covenant. 8. The fearful are they who, through cowardice, or fear of reproaches, and sufferings, are ashamed or afraid to own and honour Christ. 9. All professing Christians appear as persons devoted to, and received by, Jesus Christ as their husband; and all true believers are truly and spiritually married and united to him for ever. 11—13, 21. Her light of knowledge, purity, honour, and joy, was illustriously bright. Her jasper wall, great and high, may denote the invincible power, infinite wisdom, and love, of Christ, and his great salvation, powerful providence, and regular government. Her twelve gates of pearl, each inscribed with the name of an apostle, guarded by an angel, and three towards each quarter, may denote Christ's being preached to all the ends of the earth by faithful ministers, according to the New Testament; and that holy angels are ready to minister to every one that enters. 14—21. Her being measured denotes her conformity to the oracles of God. Her four-square form denotes her perfections, stability, and uniformity. Her twelve foundations of different precious stones are the infinitely precious Redeemer in his unnumbered excellencies and glories, answerable to the different cases of men. The houses being built, and streets paved, with pure gold, represent its amazing riches, glory, and purity. 22, 23. In heaven they have no need of instituted ordinances, or of created comforts, as the immediate enjoyment of God in Christ renders them perfectly happy; and even in the Millennial state there will be no need of ceremonies or external pomp, &c. as the powerful presence of Christ and his Father will render ordinances delightful, and men satisfied with their lot. 24, 26. In the Millennial state church members will improve their wealth, honour, and power, for 18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius, the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they who are written in the Lamb's book of life.

(1) Carries on the description of the Millennial, and especially the heavenly, state, under the figures of the water and tree of life, and of the throne of God and the Lamb; 1—5. (2) The conducting angel, who refuses adoration from John, and especially Christ himself, attests the truth of the preceding revelations, and intimates that men would quickly be adjudged to everlasting happiness or misery according to their improvement of God's revelations to them; 6—15. (3) Jesus Christ, after repeated declarations of his own excellency, intimations of his sudden coming to judge the world, and earnest invitation of sinners to receive his grace, denounces a solemn curse upon all such as should add to or take from, his now finished oracles; 7, 12, 14, 16—2 (4) The church and apostle earnestly entreat his gracious visit in time and glorious return to judgment; 21, 17, 20.

the glory of Christ and the benefit of souls; and in heaven they will have inexpressibly greater glories and honours than could be had on earth, and shall receive the gracious reward of their right improvement of the benefits they received on earth. 25. Gates never shut denote perfect safety and perpetual freedom of access. No night is no darkness, ignorance, or trouble.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Transcendent are the glories of the Millennial, but especially of the heavenly, state of the church. Spiritual light, beauty, honour, grandeur, wealth, safety, satisfaction, and pleasure, meet together. How new is all far surpassing any thing found or imagined before; and gloriously and firmly founded on Jesus Christ, and correspondent to the doctrine of his apostles and prophets! Abundant, delightful, and glorious, is the access into this state by him, as the door, the way, the truth, and the life. Multitudes, chosen and redeemed, called and faithful, of all ranks, Jews and Gentiles, are admitted into it. And in what honour they appear therein as the beloved, the espoused, bride of Christ! Complete, secure, and immortal, is their blessedness, where sin, darkness, trouble, and death, are fully and for ever passed away. Familiar and immediate is their fellowship with, and enjoyment of, God: and pure and glorious their holiness in heart and life.—But, alas! how inexpressible is the misery of those wicked and impenitent sinners who, by the purpose, the word, the providence, of God, are for ever excluded therefrom!

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1, 2. The Holy Ghost, proceeding from, and sent by, Christ and his Father, in his graces and comforts, and abundantly enjoyed, is the river of life. Jesus Christ, in his person, offices, relations, and manifold blessings, sufficient for the full satisfaction of all the Israel of God, according

4 ^aAnd they shall see his face ; and ^ahis name ^ashall be in their foreheads

5 ^aAnd there shall be no night there ; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun ; for the Lord God giveth them light : ^aand they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, ^aThese sayings ^aare faithful and true : and the ^aLord God of the holy prophet sent his angel ^ato shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 ^aBehold, I come quickly : ^ablessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John ^asaw these things, and heard ^athem. And, when I had heard and seen, ^aI fell down to worship before the feet of the angel who shewed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, See ^athou do it not : for I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book : worship God.

10 And ^ahe saith unto me, ^aSeal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book ; for the time is at hand.

the twelve apostles, and whose very words, ordinances, and himself have a sovereign virtue to remove all evil, and render happy, is the tree of life. 3—5. The fixed presence of God and their familiar and immediate fellowship with him, will remain in holiness and happiness. 6. All these things which are seen shall be faithfully and infallibly accomplished in their ad the Lord Jesus, who inspired and authorised his ancient events, hath sent me your conducting angel, to inform you, servants, under the New Testament, of the glories, which will the short period of time, be all fulfilled. 9. Pay me no for I, though an angel, am but your fellow servant, and a prophets and those who fear God, employed by Christ to communicate these revelations to you. 10. Christ charged me to publish to the church the revelations I had received, as their accomplishment was immediately to begin. 14. They who, from a principle of faith and love, sincerely obey all God's commandments, and thus prove their union to Christ, shall, by his free grant, have all authority, warrant, dignity, and meetness, to partake of the immediate enjoyment of him in all his heavenly blessings, and have a free, open, and honourable, admission into the heavenly state. 16. As God, Christ is the Root, Lord, and Source, of David's family and kingdom ; and, as man, he is his Son, descended from his loins. He is the bright and morning star : as he is infinitely glorious, and his rising up in his incarnation introduced the gospel-day ; his rising in power introduces the Millennial day ; his rising in the saving influences of his Spirit introduces the spiritual day of grace and comfort ; and his appearance to judge the world will introduce the eternal day of light, purity, and joy. 17. The first part of this verse is the church's request, that Christ would come quickly to fulfil all his gracious promises ; and the last part is an invitation to sinful men, to come and freely receive his promised blessings. 19. God, by withholding all saving blessings from him, shall manifest that he never was elected, and shall cut him off from all

13 ^aI am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 ^aBlessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have ^aright to the tree of life, and may enter in through ^athe gates into the city.

15 ^aFor without ^aare dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 ^aI Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am ^athe root and the offspring of David, ^aand ^athe bright and morning star.

17 And the ^aSpirit and ^athe bride say, Come. And let ^ahim that heareth say, Come. ^aAnd let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For ^aI testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book. ^aIf any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the ^aplagues that are written in this book :

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, ^aGod shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and ^afrom ^athe things which are written in this book.

20 ^aHe who testifieth these things saith, ^aSurely I come quickly ; ^aAmen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 ^aThe grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

the interest he professed, hoped, or seemed, to have in his gracious purpose, true church, or inspired promises.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Happy are they who enjoy the Millennial, and especially the heavenly blessedness ! their freedom from curses, sorrows, and maladies is complete. Ravishing and abundant is their enjoyment of Jesus Christ and his Spirit, and all his purchased salvation,—all the consolations, all the fulness, of God in him. Divinely acknowledged and immediately illuminated, they reign with him for evermore ! And with uninterrupted delight and fervour they serve, worship, and glorify, him !—But none must expect this celestial happiness without being justified and sanctified on earth. Holiness in heart or life, though it does not merit the heavenly glory, must prepare us for it, and manifest our new covenant claim to it. And if men persevere in their sin, they must at last be excluded from the fellowship of God, and be for ever fixed in their sin as a principal part of their punishment. Important and infallible are the declarations of Christ in the scripture. According to them as our rule we must now walk ; and according to them at the last day we shall be judged. Infinite is the danger of adding to, taking from, perverting, or denying, these sacred records. And great is the mercy that they are so full of the most encouraging promises and endearing invitations to receive an undoubted, a free, a full, an everlasting, salvation in Christ. In the exercise of an assured faith let me always receive his fulness, and look, long, and wait, for his second coming !—O when shall time give place to eternity ! When shall the transient glimmerings of his glory issue in my being for ever with the Lord ! When shall my beloved ordinances of his grace, and this precious, precious, precious book of God be exchanged for seeing him as he is, and knowing him, even as I am known in the face of Jesus Christ ! When shall I bid adieu to human explications of divine oracles ; and the Lord God and the Lamb be the light thereof,—my everlasting light, and my God my glory !
